COPS PICK NEW HEAD FOR THE BOSTON POLICE

Patrolmen Express Views on Choice of a Successor to O'Meara, With 100 Ministers Favoring Rev. J. Frank Chase

Mayor's Candidate for Commissioner Is Francis M. Carroll, While Martin Lomasney Is Out for Jeremiah McCarthy

NEARLY one hundred Protestant clergymen of Boston have asked Governor Foss to make the Rev. J Frank Chase Police Commissioner of Boston. Mr. Chase is secretary of the New England Watch and Ward Society. As such he has engaged in several epistolary controversies with Condemner O'Meara. These disputes have been mainly about the social evil and the right way to go about its suppression.

Several names have now been suggested to the Governor in connection with the Commissionership. Mr. O'Meara's term will be up on June 6. His successor will be appointed to serve five years. The salary is $5,000.

Mayor Fitzgerald's candidate is said to be Francis M. Carroll, a young attorney. Mr. Carroll is one of the trustees of the Bath Department. He has served as acting Fire Commissioner.

McCarthy a Candidate.

Martin M. Lomasney would like to see Jeremiah J. McCarthy in the office. Mr. McCarthy is a Republican. He recently got done being Surveyor of the Port, having had a falling out with Senator Lodge. The Mayor picked McCarthy last year to be fire commissioner. The Civil Service Commission blocked the way.

Inquiries among the rank and file of the Boston Police Department by the Sunday AMERICAN indicates that Commissioner O'Meara is still the first choice of the men under him. In one or two cases the patrolmen intimate that the commissioner has been an easy mark for the Reverend Watts crowds at headquarters, but by and large they declare for Mr. O'Meara first, last and all the time.

Other favorites of the policemen are former Captain Frederick G. Hoffman, former Commissioner Charles H. Cole, Street Commissioner James A. Gallivan, Captain Philemon D. Warren of Brighton, Captain Thomas Ryan of headquarters, Vice-President James J. Phelan of the Federal Trust Company, ex-Superintendent James H. Smyth of the municipal printing plant, Attorney Thomas N. Merritt and William H. Knight.

Foss Isn't Talking.

Just whom Governor Foss has in mind for the commissionership Mr. Foss has told nobody. At the State House it is said positively that the Governor will not name Mr. O'Meara. The new commissioner will be a Democrat.

There is no reason to suppose that Commissioner O'Meara has an ambition to remain. On the contrary, it is said that he will go without regret, and that more than a year ago he intimated to Governor Draper that he could not take a second term. Mr. O'Meara's latest annual report sounded in certain sections like a valedictory, especially where he described the almost hopeless situation with reference to the social evil under modern conditions.

Few politicians expect that anything will come of the big petition in favor of the agent of the Watch and Ward Society, except to emphasize the dissatisfaction with Commissioner O'Meara which has existed in that quarter.

Petition for Mr. Chase.

The Watch and Ward Society under the leadership of Secretary Chase and the Rev. Dr. Frederick Van Allen has not only kept Pemberton Square busy, but has steadily grown itself. Only recently a legacy of $115,000 was bequeathed to the society. This was largely due to Mr. Chase.

There has been presented to Governor Foss on behalf of Mr. Chase a petition bearing several hundred names, including nearly 100 prominent clergymen. This petition has been circulated by men like Bishop Willard F. Mallalieu, of the Methodist Church, the Rev. Cortland Myers, pastor of Tremont Temple, and the Rev. Dr. Conrad, pastor of Park Street Church.

Mr. Chase is doing nothing to secure the place and the Watch and Ward Society is strictly neutral, notwithstanding very

Hearst Called Valued Aide of Democrats

Washington Star, Commenting on His Political Judgment, Suggests He and Clark Work Together.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The Evening Star yesterday, under the heading "William R. Hearst," printed the following:

While on the subject of Democratic harmony, is it not of consequence to note that William R. Hearst seems to be back in the fold? He led the fight for Carter Harrison in Chicago, and was publicly thanked by the successful candidate for his activities. Mr. Harrison was the Democratic nominee, and won as such. Does not that entitle Mr. Hearst to a clean bill of health, at least so far as Illinois politics is concerned?

The situation in Congress is in part much to Mr. Hearst's credit. Mr. Clark is his friend, and Mr. Clark's program is entirely acceptable to the New York editor. They should work together in the matter of national legislation, and, as matters now stand. If Mr. Clark should be nominated for President, why should not Mr. Hearst support him?

Mr. Hearst has grown both in political and in journalistic power since he offered himself for President in 1904. His Democracy was then unquestioned. It was his ungodly that men doubted. Now it is his Democracy that needs a word of recommendation. His sagacity stands as partly. He has been doing things which justify to clear judgment as to politics and politicians.

Mr. Hearst opposed Judge Gaynor for Mayor, and predicted that if elected he would fail in office. That prediction seems well on the way to fulfilment. There is much impatience with Mayor Gaynor in circles which were instrumental in his election. Things are at sixes and sevens in the big town, and the Mayor is getting the blame. It is generally agreed that but for the dastardly assault on him which came so near ending his life, and which aroused so much sincere sympathy, he would to-day be under the hottest fire ever directed at a Mayor of New York.

In the gubernatorial race last year Mr. Hearst opposed the Dix candidacy, first, on the score that the nomination had been made by Charles F. Murphy, and, second, that the candidate did not possess the elements of leadership. What would not the independents of the State now give if they had accepted Mr. Hearst's appraisement of the situation! How frequently in the past three months have they lamented taking orders which were issued from room 212 of a Rochester hotel last September! Mr. Hearst "called the turn" like an old paper long familiar with the New York deck.

The Independence League did not meet his expectations. It did not develop even by the forcing process he was able to apply. But he has developed, and his newspapers have multiplied, and if his performances at Chicago and his satisfaction in Speaker Clark's success are indications of his future, the Democratic reason is to be thankful. And if they have no fatted calf in their corral, they should send out and rope one for the occasion.

TAFT SHAVES HIMSELF.

Has to Decline Invitation to Join Barbers' Union.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—President Taft was to-day invited by J. C. Shenessey of St. Louis, general organizer of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, to become a member of the organization.

"I should be delighted to join your union," replied the President. "but I shave myself."

It is a fact. It has been many years since the President has had a barber, save for trimming his hair. He shaves himself every morning and gets through the job without a scratch.

FLORETTA IS NOT GOING TO WED; SO!

Miss Vining Is Leaving for Washington, but Only as One D. A. R.-ters.

HULL EDITOR FANCY FREE

She Could Marry, or Sell Her Papers, in a Minute, but She Hesitates.

THE fact that Miss Floretta Vining has given an option on her celebrated syndicate of South Shore newspapers, good until May 1, that she is about to leave for Washington, and that like as not a Certain Party will also be in Washington at the same time, was seized upon yesterday by some snooper after social chit chat as the basis for a report that Mr. Daniel Cupid, the well known archer, had triumphantly won a ten-year chase and had sent an arrow home in Hull.

All of which last night led Miss Vining to authorize the Sunday AMERICAN to say that she is not about to be married, and is not even engaged to marry.

"I am not so sure that I could not marry most any time if I wished to," said the South Shore editor," something her back hair, "but I have no such intention. There isn't a man in sight towards whom I entertain the remotest notion of matrimony."

Once Caused Sensation.

Miss Vining is the lady editor who kicked up such a fuss ten years ago by editorially lamenting the increase in the habit of drinking and swearing among young women. She furnished food for editorials all over the country, some friendly, some critical, some rasping, and some brutal, by reporting that:

Recently at a house party a young society woman, whom every one in Boston knows, brought a quart bottle of whiskey and she and one gentleman drank it before luncheon was announced.

The name of the lady scene was not printed. After that Miss Vining wrote about manners in New York, race suicide, and the shame of sending pauper lepers to Cape Cod. So she became famous.

Miss Vining is very prominent in the Daughters of the American Revolution, and that is why the Washington trip. Miss Vining has edited. If ever missed one of the annual battles of the D. A. R.-ters, which commemorate Bunker Hill, Lexington and other resorts of that kind, and the something reminiscent of Reno, Carson City and the Armory A. A. Usually it is about whether Mrs. McLean shall be president.

"Well, Listen to Me."

Early in the afternoon the South Shore began to call up the AMERICAN, to find out just how much truth there was in what the little birds were whispering about the Lohengrin stuff, and the matrimonial editor of the AMERICAN called up Miss Vining, at Vining Villa in Hull, and began beating around the bush as follows:

"Are you going to be married? Are you engaged to be married. We hear this great event is soon to happen, and that the lucky man is a personage whom we esteem very highly."

"So that is it! Well, listen to me, Mr. Man. I am not going to be married. I am not engaged to marry. I have no intention of marrying. Get that? There isn't a man in sight towards whom I entertain the remotest notion of matrimony. I am not so sure that I could not marry, most any time, if I wished to, but I have no such intention. It is true that I have a number of men friends, and they sometimes call on me, and I have business with many of them. But matrimony? No! Nothing of the sort! There isn't the remotest idea of it."

Which seems to be a downright snub and challenge for Mr. Cupid, and a sore reproach for those matrimonially agreed who, a short time since, proposed at the State House a tax on male bachelors.

CHILTON CLUBWOMEN ASK FOR A LICENSE

Exclusive Boston Social Organization Applies to City for Cocktail Privilege.

SMOKING GOES ON ROOF

Official Explains That Concession Is Asked for Sake of Men Guests.

MEMBERS of the exclusive Chilton Club, one of the largest women's clubs in the world, located in the heart of Boston's Back Bay, may be served with a cocktail at night or any other sort of "booze" that their appetites crave, after the first of May, if the License Commissioners are kind to them.

The application of the club for a liquor license is already before the licensing board. The officers of the club have every reason to believe that their request will be granted.

Mrs. Robert Lovett, one of the vice-presidents of the club, in discussing the liquor license phase of the club yesterday, said that the members could not expect to entertain their men friends at the club on ginger ale, and so they went after permission to serve them with something stronger.

All Drinks on Trays.

But there isn't to be a regular bar in the clubhouse, where a member could stand up and have a drink man-fashion—the drinks are to be served on trays by girl waitresses.

Women may smoke in the club now. They have no regular smoking room, but the members and their men or women friends, who desire to do so, may puff a cigarette or fragment cigar in the roof garden. Only cigarettes are sold, however in the clubhouse.

The clubhouse—a veritable palace—is at No. 152 Commonwealth avenue. The list of membership comprising as it does the most fashionable women of this city, reads like a small edition of Boston's Blue Book. There are already 450 resident members and 100 non-resident members. The waiting list totals 150 already. So, it will be seen, the new club, which has just opened its doors, starts off with a great swing.

In chatting about the club, Mrs. Lovett, who resides at No. 1 Fairfield street, said that the smokers had been banished to the roof.

"The Governing Board," she said, "passed this rule unanimously. This board is composed of the five officers of the club and fifteen other members."

Far Be It from Such!

"But does this mean," queried the reporter, in trying man not very familiar with women clubs), "that there is to be no smoking at all?"

"Far from it," replied Mrs. Lovett with energy. "Smoking will be allowed, but only on the roof garden. Men and women can smoke all they please up there."

"But I thought this was purely a woman's club," remarked the puzzled young man.

"So it is," said Mrs. Lovett, "but men may be introduced as guests with certain restrictions. They may only come into a special dining room reserved for them, and up on the roof garden.

"Has there been much smoking so far?"

"Very little; in fact, so far, only one box of cigarettes has been sold to a member. No, there will be no cigars or tobacco sold, only cigarettes, although, of course, members can smoke anything they want to. It's nobody's business but their own."

Waiting for the License.

"Will the cigarettes be sold at a regular counter?"

"No, they will be brought on trays to members desiring them."

"Have many men availed themselves of their opportunities as yet?"

"No, we have entertained practically no men in the club as yet."

"Why not?" asked the reporter.

"Well, you see," said Mrs. Lovett quietly, "we haven't got our license yet."

"What has that got to do with it?"

"Everything. You cannot entertain men without giving them something to drink."

"Do you mean that as long as drinks are not served in the club you feel that you cannot entertain men as guests?"

"Well, you can't very well give them ginger ale to drink. We have applied for one license, however, and hope to get it by May 1."

"Do you expect any difficulty in getting it?"

"When you get the license, will drinks be served from a regular bar?"

"Certainly not. Members can order any drink they desire and it will be brought to them in any part of the club house."

"Some of the other attractive features of the club," Mrs. Lovett continued, "are the electric and Turkish baths, squash courts and private dining rooms, where members can give dinner parties.

"We regret that there is no swimming pool, but that is due to the building restrictions in this part of the city, which prevent digging below a certain depth. There are now 450 members, living in Boston, and a limited non-resident membership. The waiting list is growing fast. There are already 150 names on it."

"What are the qualifications necessary for membership? Is it at all essential to have had ancestors on the Mayflower?"

"No, the only essential for eligibility is to be a lady. Of course we wanted our friends in first."

NO ALCOHOL IN FR. JOHN'S Medicine—Just pure strengthening food.

MISS HELEN MURPHY, "HELLO GIRL" FOR THE WAKEFIELD POLICE

Wakefield Must Wait For Girl Police Chief

Miss Helen Murphy Is Not to Take Charge of the Force, and the Boys Are Disappointed.

Just when the boys were planning to hire a special train to take a run out to Wakefield some night, and be pinched by "Chief of Police" Helen Murphy, Chief of Police Pollard roused himself last night to deny the story that the pretty night operator at central is to have charge of the Wakefield force at night and to say that Miss Murphy is not to be connected in any way with the police department except by wire.

Chief Pollard was quite warm about it. Miss Murphy, who has just the sweetest voice, laughed.

"The horrid newspapers," she said "don't it awful to be a reporter?" Then she said that she wouldn't have the time to obey the yarn, but would have to refer inquirers to Telephone Manager Ledwith or Chief of Police Pollard.

The report that beginning Monday night Miss Murphy was to have charge of the police force," said the Chief, "noting the half hourly calls of the patrolmen and sending her books to the station house in the morning, is ridiculous.

"The fact is that we have recently installed telephone boxes on the street for the patrolmen, that I signal for them to night by means of a red light, and that when they see this light they are expected to step to the nearest box and call me by telephone. These calls have to be made through the local exchange of the New England Telephone Company. Hence, by deduction, a young lady captain of the night watch. Nonsense!"

Wherefore, the statistician look for no great increase in the number of nocturnal arrests in the town of Wakefield. Officer Joe's in again!

CONFER ON EDDY CASE.

Counsel for Heirs to Make Headquarters in Boston.

Counsel for the heirs of Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy will have their headquarters in Boston. Former United States Senator Chandler, who has engaged apartments at the Parker House, said yesterday that he will remain here for the present. A conference will be held either to-day or to-morrow to discuss whether counsel for the heirs will further amend their bill in equity, or file a replication, closing the pleadings. The conference would have been held to-day, but Attorney John W. Kelley of Portsmouth, N. H., was unable to attend. Attorneys DeWitt C. Howe and Kelley will come to Boston for the conference. Should the replication be filed at this time, the case will await its turn for trial.

WHOLESALE SMUGGLING PLOT TO BRING CHINAMEN INTO BOSTON IS NIPPED IN BUD

Government Agents Arrest Three Men Alleged to Be Ringleaders in a Bold Conspiray to Spirit Orientals From Jamaica Into Massachusetts at a Large Sum For Each Contraband Brought Here by the Band

Two of the Prisoners Taken in the Adams House and the Third Is Found in the Faneuil Hall Market Districts Where Marshals Went to Search—Philadelphia Women Is Implicated in the Story Told by the Detectives

ON the charge that they had plotted to smuggle scores of Chinamen from Jamaica into Boston, for which they were to receive the handsome sum of $1,000 each, agents in the employ of the Department of Justice of the United States arrested three men in Boston yesterday.

The prisoners are Goodman Phillips of No. 2 Hazel Park, Roxbury, who has served time in prison before in connection with the smuggling of Chinamen into this country; George M. R. Gardiner, known as "Chic" Gardiner, said to be new at the smuggling game, but who has been in the clutches of the authorities because of other fraudulent acts, and Captain Harvey C. Daly, formerly of No. 232 Hanover street, but recently of Winthrop Junction, who also knows something about getting Orientals into the "Land of the Free" in defiance of the law.

The Federal authorities declined last night to reveal the evidence they have against the trio, but they declare that it is complete. It was obtained, they said, by an agent of the Department of Justice who got into the good graces of Gardiner, accompanied him to Jamaica and from there to New York and Boston, being accepted all this time as a would-be smuggler.

PHILADELPHIA WOMAN FIGURES IN CASE.

A handsome young woman of Philadelphia, whom Gardiner introduced as his wife to the government detective, figures in the case. Letters which passed between Gardiner and her were captured and they are said to have evidence of the conspiracy to spirit the Chinamen into this country.

The arrests were made by Deputy Marshal James H. Ruhl, assisted by Deputies Charles A. Bancroft and Frank Young. It was alleged that the final arrangements were just being made to sail in a boat in waiting to Jamaica, load it with Chinamen and bring them to Massachusetts, when the government detectives swooped down upon them and landed them in jail.

It was intimated that further arrests might be made in connection with the wholesale plan to smuggle Chinamen into America.

Phillips and Gardiner were found in the smoking room of the Adams House. Gardiner and Phillips had apparently just completed their deal, because Gardiner held a pen in his hand and was about to sign some sort of a paper, apparently a contract, when Marshal Ruhl stepped up to them.

PRISONERS TAKE ARREST WITH INDIFFERENCE.

"You are both under arrest, gentlemen," they may go at will, and that they were said Ruhl quietly.

"Oh, very well," replied Phillips good naturedly.

The two men made no attempt to get away and the arrests were made so quietly that none of the people in the hotel knew what had taken place. Phillips and Gardiner accompanied Ruhl and his brother officers to the Post Office Building where the two prisoners were locked up.

In the meantime other officers of the government were looking for Captain Daly. Ruhl, who knew Captain Daly well, joined them. The government detectives had heard that Daly might be found in East Boston, but they failed to get him there.

"He's likely to be sauntering around in the market district this evening, it being Saturday," remarked Ruhl. "Let's take a look for him there."

Bail Refused for All.

The detectives went down into the Faneuil Hall market section and were in Blackstone street about 8.30 o'clock when Ruhl spied his man.

"There he is," Ruhl remarked to his companions, and he walked up to Daly.

"I guess I'll have to take you in, Captain," remarked Ruhl.

"Is that so?" asked the Captain. "Oh, all right."

Daly was then taken to the Federal Building and learned for the first time that Phillips and Gardiner had also been scooped in. It was decided that the bail in the case of Phillips would be placed at $5,000 and that of the other two prisoners at $3,000 each.

The three men were taken to the East Cambridge jail and locked up. It was announced that no bail would be accepted until Monday. None of the prisoners made any protest except to declare that they had been arrested for nothing and that they would be set free when the facts in the case came to light.

Boast by Captain Daly.

One of the government agents said that Daly had made this boast:

"Before I die I am going to bring a boat load of Chinese into this country right under the noses of the Department of Justice at Washington and the Federal authorities at Boston."

Phillips, according to the government agents, was the brains of the schemers. He, it is said, found out that there are hundreds of Chinamen in Jamaica, where their plans

Followed to Jamaica.

When Gardiner left jail one of the detectives from the Federal government got on his track at once. The government does not care to tell the name of this agent, either save following to Jamaica. The detective and Gardiner became great friends. Finally Gardiner, it is alleged, proposed that the detective go in with him in the smuggling business.

"We can get a thousand dollars apiece for smuggling Chinamen in the United States," it is said Gardiner told the detective. "The price has increased. It used to be $500."

The detective and Gardiner, the government says, saw the agents who had control of many of the Chinese in Jamaica and completed their arrangement for shipping scores of them into this country. Then Gardiner and the detective returned to the United States to get the men and boat necessary for the job. On the way to this country Gardiner remarked to the detective:

"Come over to Philadelphia, will you, and meet my wife."

"I'll be glad to do so," replied the detective.

The two men left Philadelphia and met a handsome young woman. She was introduced to the detective as the wife of Gardiner, but the Government declares that she is not his wife. They say that his real wife is at Wellfleet, where she keeps a little grocery store.

The two men came from Philadelphia to New York, where the detective, who was supposed to be a smuggler, was introduced to a number of the big Chinese smuggling agents of that city. It is said that he got information that will prove very valuable to the Government in their efforts to prevent smuggling in the future. Gardiner and the detective made frequent trips between New York and Boston. When they got to Boston they found that Phillips, also was out of jail, as was Daly, who has been serving a term in the Greenfield prison. All the men confessed, it is declared, the detective being let into acute disagreements with Mr. O'Meara over the white slave traffic.

POLICE GIVE THEIR IDEAS ON SUCCESSOR TO O'MEARA THROUGH THE AMERICAN

Poll by the American.

The Sunday AMERICAN has queried a representative number of Boston policemen on the commissionership by means of return postal cards.

A belief that the officials at headquarters are altogether too powerful with the commissioner is indicated by three policemen. These officers say:

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is not Stephen O'Meara. He should not succeed himself. He has done nothing for the welfare of the police in general, neither has he done anything for the comfort or welfare of the men under his command. He is only the figurehead in name. He and his officers are run by a subordinate."

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is Commissioner O'Meara. I think he is the best man for the place because his administration has been a success. His only mistake has been too much confidence in Superintendent Pierce."

"If have no choice, only give us a man who will be a Commissioner and not a puppet for the Superintendent."

On the other hand, the following "votes" indicate a general belief in the department that the commissioner has not been all that he stands by the patrolman, that he is brave, fearless, fair and square, and that he has served enough in the ranks to make him fit and away the best man for the job.

Arguments for O'Meara.

"Because he is honest, does not let politicians run the Police Department, is capable and tells the truth, which is more than the AMERICAN will give $5.00 to charity if you point this answer."

(If the writer of the above will send the money to the editor, the sum will be duly acknowledged and the cash given to a worthy charity.)

"Because I have been on the police over twenty-five years, and he is the only head the department has had in my time."

"Because I have been on the police they will get a fair deal if they do their duty. They don't have to fear the other superiors. If wasn't always so, believe me."

"Because he has been commissioner five years and nobody has got anything on him, not even the AMERICAN."

"Because I consider him the most capable, honest and sincere man, to my knowledge and my experience of twenty-seven years in police business. He is ever ready to show justice to the officer and the public. A and mistake if not reappointed."

"Because he has always been fair with everybody."

"Because he is O. K."

"On the Level."

"Because of his integrity, fairness and ability. He has, can, and will enforce any statute or ordinance now in force or that may be enacted. Give a decent 'fit-dame' law, and see what he will do. HE cannot make any law, and can only enforce what the people choose to give him."

"Because he is honest, fair and merciful, and knows his business."

"I think he is the best man for the place for the boy's reason, because he is."

"Because he is on the level. Everybody gets just what is coming to him."

"Because in my twenty-third year as a police officer I find that he is the best fitted Police Commissioner we have had."

"Because in my twenty-three years as and the police, but his system of protection is unfair."

"Because the good turn deserves another."

"Because of his clean record, his ability, and his fearlessness. He is able to maintain in the face of the body of would-be reformers who are always ready to offer their advice."

"Because he is the right man in the right place, and I hope the Governor will think so."

One man couples Cole and O'Meara in the betting, saying this about both:

Cole vs. O'Meara.

"Because neither caters to the politicians. They cannot easily be led. From one who has tried to reach both, but without success."

Col. Cole individually is highly thought of. Three sample ballots:

"Because he has had the experience and is a fair and liberal-minded man."

"Because he is an American citizen and is not prejudiced against the Boys in Blue who risked their lives to protect the flag of our country."

"Because he has proved by a short term in that office that there is 'none better.'"

Then there are some policemen who pass the politicians entirely and call for a man who knows little about politics, cares less, but knows the police ropes, as one of them says, "from A to Z." Here is what his nominee may about Captain Frederick Augustus Hoffman (retired):

Arguments for Hoffman.

"Because he is a former police captain and knows the business from experience."

"Because he has had experience and on the question of promotions would not ask the captains of stations want unless have been submitted by his friends that he must send down to take examinations so as to make it look right to the other men."

"Because he is a strict disciplinarian, a gentleman, and a man who knows the police business from A to Z. And a man who would get rid of the loafers in Watts's office."

"There are no votes for Superintendent McCarthy, who may or may not be Mr. Lomasney's first choice, but two police men would be quite willing to submit 'Commissioner' Carroll. They say:

Votes for Carroll.

"Because he is honest, will give promotion to whom it is due. Under Carroll, runsellers will not control promotions."

"Because Mr. O'Meara allows business to be carried on at Station 16 (Hub Boys that is) disgraceful to the police department."

Then we come down to the "field," so to speak, and we find various citizens with at least one admirer in the station-houses. Read:

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is a man like James J. Phelan of the Federal Trust Company. I think he is the best man for the place because I know he would run the department independently of a certain clique at headquarters who ought to be cleaned out for the good of the service and the welfare of the public."

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is James Smith. I think he is the best man for the place because the former superintendent of printing would be an ideal man for the position."

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is Deputy Superintendent 'Phil' Harrington. I think he is the best man for the place because of, first, his experience, second, his knowledge of the conditions under which the patrolman works; and third, because he isn't looking to fill up the newspapers with general orders about the downfall of some unfortunate patrolman."

Merritt Has Supporters.

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is Attorney N. Thames Merritt. I think he is the best man for the place because he is a man of experience in the Police Department, and a man of ability and integrity."

"My choice for Police Commissioner of Boston is Captain Thomas Ryan. I think he is the best man for the place because of his wide experience in the Department, and his further experience as chief clerk."

Then the policemen of Boston give favorable mention to almost a dozen gentlemen, any one of whom, their admirers say, would make a lusty chief cop. Perhaps the list will help Governor Foss to make up his mind.

TARIFF REVISION BILLS NEXT WEEK

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Chairman Underwood of the Ways and Means Committee, announced today that the committee would be ready by the end of next week to introduce in the House some tariff revision schedules. He would not indicate all the schedules which would be covered by the bills.

The first bills to be presented will provide for downward revision of the woolen schedules and for reduction of the duties on the necessities of life. The southern members are pressing for immediate action on cotton ties and bagging, looking to the placing of these articles on the free list. The members want fresh meats and game placed on the free list.

President Taft is urging that the Canadian reciprocity tariff bill be brought out at once. It is being argued that to hold this measure back would be discourteous to Canada. The Democrats are committed to this treaty. A large number of them party in the House having voted for it at the last session of Congress. A legislative policy will be outlined, said Mr. Underwood, at a Democratic caucus to be held next week. It will be decided then whether the reciprocity treats is to be brought into the House with the next tariff revision bills or is to be held back until some of the bills are read along in the Senate. Some of the Democratic leaders urge that first legislative action by the House shall be on the pending reciprocity treaties and on the Arizona and New Mexico statehood bill.

It is the opinion of Mr. Underwood that there will not be any delay in framing by the committee on Ways and Means the reciprocity bill. It is expected, therefore, that this bill will come along with the rest of the tariff revision bills, the Democrats having little fear that the President will adjourn Congress without giving them opportunity to consider and pass on measures announced in their legislative program.

SULLIVAN WINS AUTO; LEADS BIG CONTEST

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

Thomas G. Sullivan of No. 803 Parker street, Roxbury, Mass., a fifteen-year-old District One candidate in the AMERICAN'S $35,000 Prize Contest, is the leader for the capital prize and is winner of the March automobile.

The capital prize is the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles. It is open to Contest candidates in all New England.

The March automobile, awarded to the candidate polling the highest vote by subscription during the month of March, is a Buick runabout, latest model and one of the handsomest to be seen in the model for-day.

The splendid work done by Master Sullivan during March, in which he and his friends secured a vote-getting record that vote bonus offer for that month, not only thrusts the Roxbury youth in the leadership for the capital prize, but also makes him winner of the Buick runabout as well.

The Contest Editor publishes, in another part of to-day's Sunday AMERICAN, a new list of candidates' standing in all seven districts. He also gives the names of the next nine candidates to Master Sullivan in the race for the house. It requires two full pages to displayed these district lists and the names of the capital prize leaders. This double page is of absorbing interest to all candidates and their friends.

Charles W. Weaver of Portsmouth, N. H., District Five, led for the house and led his district in the last list of candidates' standing. Mr. Weaver is now second in the all-district race for the house, but he still leads his district.

In the present list of standing, compiled up to March 31, Master Sullivan of Roxbury has topped Mr. Weaver in the competition for the capital prize. Master Sullivan, being all-New England leader, is naturally the highest in his own territory, Boston District.

Among the Leaders.

Mr. Weaver worked with tremendous energy during March, not only to hold his position as all-New England leader, but also to win the March automobile prize. But he was outstripped by Master Sullivan for both places. Mr. Weaver holds no grudge, however, because he is distressed just now. On the last day of the March offer Mr. Weaver, in turning in a big batch of votes and subscriptions, remarked to the Contest Editor:

"I hope these will win that automobile for me and enable me to hold my leadership for the house, too. But if some other candidates beats me, he or she has my best wishes and congratulations."

Mr. Weaver is a true sportsman, a hard fighter and a clean-cut boxer. And he knows, as well as anyone else does, that the contest is not over yet. Weaver won't sit down and bemoan his loss when he reads this article. He will dig harder than ever.

The third man in the race for the house is Frank E. Day of Everett, Mass., District Two. Mr. Day was second in the District Two list last time. Now he is not only third in the race for the house, but he is leader in his own district.

Moves Up a Point.

Number four in the capital prize race is Charles D. C. Dunlap of Ipswich, Mass., District Three. He is only four years old. His parents and friends are managing his campaign. Dunlap is also District Three leader, just as he was in the last list of standing. He is doing steady, consistent work. He not only holds his district leadership, but he is a dangerous competitor for the $8,000 house and two lots, being only three places removed from the lead.

John G. Galligan of Boston, District One, is No. 5 in the race for the house, in the last list of candidates' standing by districts Mr. Galligan was third in his own district list. Now he has moved up one point in the district standing and is next to the District One leader as well as being fifth for the house.

Ulric R. Meisner of Everett, District Two, is sixth in the race for the capital prize. Mr. Meisner led District Two in the last list. Now he is No. 2 in his district. He has been passed in the district competition by Frank E. Day of Everett.

All candidates know of William M. Wood of Arnolds Mills, R. I., District Six, the blind candidate, who is conducting such a brave and cheerful campaign. The Contest Editor is glad to say that Mr. Wood is among the leaders for the capital prize. He is No. 7 in the race for the house. In the last district list, Mr. Wood was second in his district. Now he is District Six leader. Think of that, some of you candidates who have eyes, yet see not.

Forging to the Front.

J. M. Reynolds of Springfield, Mass., District Three, is eighth man in the list of capital prize leaders. Mr. Reynolds was second to the District Three list last time, and he still holds that position in spite of fierce competition.

Besides Weaver of Portsmouth there is another District Five man in the list of capital prize leaders. This other one is James F. McCready of Berlin, N. H., the paper-making city. In the last district list Mr. McCready was second standing next to Weaver, the district leader. Mr. McCready still holds his second place for District Five and is also third in the race for the capital prize.

For fresh position in the list of house leaders we go back to District Two. W. E. MacDonald of Woburn, Mass., is the man. MacDonald is breezing right along. He was No. 8 in his district list at the last standing. Now he is third in District Two and, by the same token, is among the first ten leaders for the big capital prize.

Such are the ten leaders in the all-New England competition for the capital prize, the $8,000 house and two lots at Riverton-on-the-Charles.

Honors go to Sullivan of Roxbury this time, not only for capturing the March leadership, but also for winning the classy Buick runabout in the special March offer. Sullivan deserves it all. He worked for it and worked hard. The Contest Editor congratulates him heartily.

Candidates, and especially the leaders, need to remember, however, the old saying: "There's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip."

The Contest Editor is not pessimist. He is an 18-karat optimist. But this contest is not over, nor by two months or more. Eternal hustling is the price of high standing.

PRINZESS IRENE'S FATE IS DOUBTFUL

Big Liner May Never Be Saved From Sands Where She Is Stuck on Long Island.

NEW YORK, April 8. — Captain von Letten Petersen's story of the voyage of the Prinzess Irene, which ended at dawn Thursday on the sand at Fire Island Beach, was given to a press representative to-day. The story was told in the captain's cabin while his beautiful ship, valued at $1,500,000, shivered in the sands which are likely to be her grave. The statements were verified from the log, which was examined to cover the voyage from the time of leaving Gibraltar.

The story shows that Captain Petersen was on the bridge when the vessel struck, with Second Officer Kosnicke and Fourth Officer Vesseling, but they were fifteen miles north of the course believed to have been set. Five minutes before the liner stranded the captain believed he was passing Fire Island Light and sent two men into the crow's nest to watch for the beacon.

The low, sandy spit which separates Great South Bay from the ocean was admittedly taken for a strip of heavy fog with the result that the ship, with more than 2,000 passengers and crew, heaved into the sands at full speed with the same sensation that a toboggan mounts a slight elevation in its course and then stops with a bump.

The water ballast was immediately discharged in an effort to get back into deep going, but the Irene would not heed the straining of her powerful engines, and was so high on the beach that she listed 45 degrees to seaward.

Even under the most favorable weather conditions the saving of the Prinzess Irene is a very doubtful task. All efforts to improve her position have thus far proved unavailing.

$40,000 BLAZE AT SANBORNVILLE, N. H.

SANBORNVILLE, N. H., April 8.—Fire destroyed the Boston & Maine car shops, round-house, carpenter shop and dry shop here to-night, with a loss of $40,000. The flames threatened to spread to the stores and dwellings on Main street. At 9 o'clock it was thought that with the help which had arrived from Dover the fire-fighters would be able to hold the conflagration.

The fire started in the carpenter shop at five o'clock. The water tank pump was out of order. Only a low-pressure hydrant service was available. A call for help brought one steamer and crew from Dover at 7:30. Two cars in the car shop were lost.

The railroad yard is just off from Main street. Sparks flew to stores and buildings. The firemen had to watch these sharply, as well as to fight the flames.

Army of Vermont Smiths.

MONTPELIER, Vt., April 8. — Some interesting researches just made public here show that during the Civil war this State was represented in the army by 2,824 Smiths, 173 Browns, 84 Thompsons, 79 Robinsons, 75 Taylors, 62 Reeds, 57 Richardsons and 48 Thomases.

Stops Itching at Once

A chemist discovered that an extract from a particular trees possesses such soothing and curative properties that when applied to eczema and similar diseases it stopped the itching at once. Sufferers who use it are amazed at the quickness of the relief which follows its use. It heals the skin and removes all traces of the disease. The name of this new remedy is Cadum. It is sold by all druggists at 10c & 25c a box. Cadum is equally good for sores, scaly skin, chafings, psoriasis, pimples, itching piles, etc. People who have been afflicted for years with skin troubles, and who have tried everything without being relieved, should take fresh courage because this new remedy is different from anything else.

135 ARE KILLED IN BIG MINE EXPLOSION

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 8.—State inspectors at Littleton, twenty miles from here, say that 135 of the 165 miners entombed by an explosion in the Banner mine of the Pratt Consolidated Coal Company are dead. More than fifty bodies had been taken from the mine this afternoon, according to a report to the State mine inspector. Afcan and one of the victims are white men, the remainder negroes.

Thirty men have been taken out of the mine. Rescue parties have arrived and have gone into the mine.

About half the miners are white men, the remainder negroes. The first mine company in one of the biggest independent operators in the South. Thousands of Physicians, nurses and medical supplies have been telephoned to this city. Special trains were ordered to the scene to carry the relief workers to the mine and rushed out.

The force of the explosion wrecked the telegraph wires, communication being made by that source impossible. Doctors for the use of the miners in the parties were sent on the special trains.

The Banner mines are about two miles from the village of Littleton, Ala. Most of the miners are state convicts.

"Jim," Famous Police Dog, Dead in New York

Wonderful Animal Hero of Many Rescues and Burglar Captures.

NEW YORK, April 8.—"Jim," regarded as the best trained and most intelligent police dog in the world, died suddenly today, after being taken ill on a car. It is believed, while on duty in Parkville, Brooklyn, with Policeman Patrick Skelly. An autopsy will be performed to determine the cause of his death.

The dog had been the subject of magazine articles in this country and Europe. He was the only sanitte dog used by the police, the others being imported.

During his three years' service in the Parkville precincts "Jim" dragged six persons out of somebirths, gave the alarm that saved a family of seven from death in a fire and caused the arrest of nineteen burglars. The burglars who killed Mrs. Stainer, and who were electrocuted, say they visited her home the night they did because they knew "Jim" was away on exhibition that night.

"Jim" won a large money prize in a Madison square dog show and a loving cup at a show in Greenwich, Ct.

AMERICAN RECRUITS JOIN INSURRECTOS

DOUGLAS, Ariz., April 8.—A force of 175 heavily-armed [illegible] recruited for the Mexican insurrecto army on the United States side of the line, crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico under the cover of darkness early today and are making a forced march to join the rebel force at Naroffia Canon, fifty miles south of Douglas.

The local force was purchased a Curtiss biplane from Aviator Charles F. Willard, who arrived in Douglas in an autodelly from Los Angeles. A local aviator named Williams, who has been given a commission by the Insurrecto army, will operate the machine. Today it had not arrived. It is believed to have been detained over the border during the night.

Several aeroplanes will be used in the campaign against Chihuahua. According to Willard, the insurgents who killed Mrs. Stainer, and who were electrocuted, say they visited her home the night they did because they knew "Jim" was away on exhibition that night.

Dr. Pattee has outlined plans for the most aggressive campaign yet undertaken.

Tries to Sell 5-Foot Library to Dr. Eliot

President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard was in the office of Charles Francis Adams on State street a few days ago. He had an engagement there with a fellow-educator and was awaiting him when the door opened and in came a book agent.

The agent at once drew his trusty prospectus and began his spiel.

President Eliot raised a weary hand, we do not care to buy any books. I already have all the books I need."

"But I bet you haven't this set. This is the famous five-foot library of President Eliot of Harvard. He picked them out himself, and he knows what's what all right. Have a look at them."

"My friend, I don't want to look at them."

"Why not?"

"Because I've seen them. I am President Eliot."

Will Marry Doctor.

The engagement of Miss Lillian Mowry, formerly of Roxbury but now of Newport, Me., has been announced by Mrs. Ella F. Mowry.

Miss Mowry is to marry Dr. Jerome S. Pattee, also of Newport, Me. Dr. Pattee is a graduate of Bowdoin College and Baltimore Medical School.

WILL IS FOUND IN A SIDEBOARD

PAWTUCKET, R. I., April 8.—A "sideboard will" was given to Mrs. Ruth A. Fiske, a daughter of Cumberland, $25,000 if it proves correct in the town of Lincoln decides that the document is the last will and testament of Mrs. E. Thompson, who left an estate of $50,000. A wife offered for probate shortly after her death a year ago was allowed.

Mrs. Fiske and her son Edward received but $500 from the estate. This week Mrs. Fiske in the probate court declared that another will was hidden in a sideboard of the Thompson home. By the terms of the "sideboard will," as it is called, she receives $25,000 in trust for her son until he becomes twenty-one years of age. Mrs. Fiske declares there is in the sideboard besides the will $1,000 in money and a silk shawl which Mrs. Thompson told her the night have. Mrs. Thompson died in January, 1910. Mrs. Fiske is her cousin. By the will provided the estate went to other relatives.

POLITICIANS LOOK UP COUNTY CANDIDATES

Campaign Already Under Way for Four Important Offices to Be Filled This Year.

County politics will hold the front and centre of the local political stage for the next six months. The terms of four county officers aspire this year. Clerk of Superior Court Francis A. Campbell will get the Democratic and Republican nominations for re-election unless the program is upset. There are those in Democratic circles who would like to see Campbell forced to make a fight to hold on. He has not been as generous in parcelling out the patronage of the office as some have expected.

It is whispered that Richard M. Walsh, a lawyer, chairman of the bath trustees, is Mayor Fitzgerald's candidate for the place. Campbell, however, has worked up a slight organization, and is prepared to fight for re-election. Rather than have the party split up with dissension the present agreement among the leaders is to give Campbell the nomination again, provided he gets the Republican nomination. If he does not, he will have to have a candidate of their own, Campbell will have to fight for the Democratic nomination and his most formidable opponent will be Walsh.

After Registrar's Berth.

Registrar of Deeds William T. A. Fitzgerald is on the ragged edge with the Democratic leaders. There is opposition to giving him the Democratic nomination, and he is largely based upon the fact that he has been none too generous with the Democratic organization. Those who are opposing the registrar claim that he was given the Democratic nomination primarily upon a silver platter, and that in return for this plum the fact that the city committee is obliged to make heavy expenditures and depends upon prospective candidates for support should be taken into consideration.

The one thing that will prevent a wide-open fight for Fitzgerald's place is the fact that the leaders feel unless the situation changes, Governor Foss will have an excellent chance to be re-elected. Rather than have a hot fight in Boston and create ill feeling in the party, the peace advocates counsel reconciliating Fitzgerald.

Lomasney with Cronan.

Clerk of the Supreme Court Walter Frederick will have the Republican nomination for re-election. He will not have the Democratic nomination. John F. Cronan will have that if Martin Lomasney is successful. Cronan ran once before against Frederick, and was beaten by a small margin. He had the support of Lomasney then, and the Ward 8 politicians have always claimed that Jim Donovan brought about his defeat. Cronan is still very friendly with Ward 8, and if the will of Lomasney prevails he will have an opportunity to try again.

The situation with regard to filling the position of Clerk of the Superior Criminal Court in the air, although there is a general belief that John Manning, the present incumbent, will not run again. In the event of his not being a candidate again rumor has it that his assistant, John B. Campbell, will make a try for the place.

All of these positions pay over $5,000 a year and are for long terms.

NEVER SUSPECTED KIDNEY TROUBLE—GAINED FIFTY POUNDS IN WEIGHT

Some time ago I was suffering from what I supposed was rheumatism. I became so bad that I could hardly get on my feet from a sitting position. I ran down in weight from 195 pounds to 145. I tried different kinds of medicine, but received little or no help. I saw Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root highly recommended for kidney trouble, but I never had any idea that my kidneys were affected. I thought I would try a fifty-cent bottle of Swamp-Root and see what the effect would be. I commenced taking it according to directions, and in a few days I saw that it was helping me. I used the fifty-cent bottle and then bought three more dollar bottles and they completely cured me. I have gone back to my original weight—195 pounds—and I am a thorough advocate of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, as I believe it to be a remarkable preparation for what it is recommended to do.

WILLIAM H. PARTCH.

ANITA TURNBULL IS SAFE WITH MOTHER

Missing Brookline Girl Explains She Was Merely Visiting Old Music Teacher.

Miss Beatrice Anita Turnbull unconscious of a daughter's share of the millions left by E. J. (Lucky) Baldwin, returned yesterday noon to the home of her stepfather and mother, Dr. William D. and Mrs. Lillian Ashley Turnbull, at No. 221 Harvard street, Brookline. Both Dr. Turnbull and Miss Beatrice herself said that she had been at the home of her old music teacher in South Boston since she left the Turnbull home the night before.

The Brookline police received notice Friday night that the girl, who is about eighteen years old and very pretty, had failed to return home after leaving home early in the evening. On account of the prominence the girl has attained through her mother's sensational effort to have her recognized as the legal child of "Lucky" Baldwin, the news of her reported disappearance drew considerable attention.

Dr. Turnbull came to the door of the Turnbull flat last night and said:

"The facts are these: Beatrice went to see her old music teacher, a South Boston woman, last night. When she did not return home at a late hour we became worried. I called up the Brookline police and told them Beatrice had disappeared.

"Just then Miss Beatrice herself came to the door. She was dressed in white shirt waist and dark skirt. Her mass of light brown hair was confined in the popular girlish fashion, under a small band of dark brown velvet ribbon. Smiling brightly the girl said:

"I don't wish you to doubt his word about my being here" (indicating Dr. Turnbull).

"Where were you last night?" she was asked.

"Over in South Boston, visiting my old music teacher, Miss ——.

Mrs. Lillian Ashley Turnbull, who was standing just inside the door, interrupted with:

"Beatrice, I don't think I'd tell the old lady's name and get her mixed up in this."

Asked why she caused all this trouble, the girl demurred a minute, then said: "Oh, just for excitement, I suppose."

"She wanted to play cards," Dr. Turnbull said.

72 BODIES REMOVED FROM THROOP MINE

Rigid Investigation to Place the Blame for Terrible Tragedy in Anthracite Region.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 8.—Seventy-two charred and mutilated bodies of miners makes up the total death list of the catastrophe that occurred yesterday at Throop. Officials at the colliery stated, at 6:30 tonight, that every section of the tunnel in the China vein, where the men were at work when the fire broke out, had been explored, and all of the bodies had been removed to the surface, identified and taken in charge by relatives.

The disaster, which ranks as one of the worst in the history of the anthracite region, is to be investigated by national, State and county officials. That there was criminal neglect on the part of some one seems to be the opinion of everyone. Superintendent of the State Bureau of Mines, James Roderick, declared today that fault care been used the accident could not have occurred. He declared the loss of life was due to the erection of an engine house, which was built of inflammable material.

James Saltry, Coroner of Lackawanna county with County Detective Ratter representing the District Attorney's office, entered the mine today and began investigation that may lead to criminal prosecution in the local courts.

The local officials of the United Mine Workers were also on the ground to-day, and while they would give out no statement it was learned to-night that the labor organizations of Lackawanna county will insist on criminal prosecution of those guilty of permitting the men to remain at work for hours after the fire was discovered without giving them any warning until the clouds of smoke and gas laden air blinded and overcame them at their work.

Museum Lectures To-day.

At the Art Museum at 3 o'clock this afternoon Assistant Professor Henry L. Seaver will speak on Greek vases in the room devoted to such exhibits. At 8:45 the first Lecture Hall Theodore C. Mumler will talk on the later history of classical sculpture. His lecture will be embellished with lantern illustrations.

WICKERSHAM DEFIES A FEDERAL JUSTICE

Attorney-General of Nation Assumes Full Responsibility in "Bath Tub" Case.

WASHINGTON, April 8. Is Attorney-General Wickersham in contempt of Judge Dennison, Federal Court in Detroit?

It is understood here to-day that Mr. Wickersham has notified Judge Dennison that he assumes full responsibility for any contempt that may be involved in the reports omitted in yesterday's newspapers that the grand jury from which a jury was to be selected to try the "Bath Tub Trust" cases would be closely watched by agents furnished by the Department of Justice. Judge Dennison, taking umbrage at these reports, abruptly postponed the trials at Detroit yesterday until next Fall. In a long statement he denounces the newspaper articles, the inspiration for which he declares is in extreme contempt of court. He also declared that he had demanded of the Attorney-general the name of the official in the Department of Justice who had inspired the story and would summon such official before him to answer for contempt.

It was admitted at the Department of Justice to-day that Attorney-General Wickersham is in correspondence with Judge Dennison, but no one would say whether it was true that the Attorney-general had assumed full responsibility. Mr. Wickersham declined to make any statement.

There is good reason to believe, however, that the Attorney-General has assumed full responsibility for the story to which Judge Dennison objects. In this event the extraordinary spectacle will be presented of a Federal Judge having threatened the chief law officer of the Government with punishment for contempt. Official circles in Washington are awaiting further developments with eager interest.

Gets a Year for Theft.

Thomas H. Hanson was arraigned in the Municipal Court yesterday on the charge of stealing a pocketbook containing $3 from Josephine Thomas of Warrenton street. He was found guilty and given one year in the House of Correction.

Calais Appeals For New Census

CALAIS, Me., April 8.—Mayor William J. Fowler believes the 1910 census did this city an injustice and that the figures announced as authoritative have fallen from 1,000 to 1,500 below the correct population of Calais. He has applied to the director of the census for a recount. A private census of Ward 6 showed that 302 more people lived there than the official census stated. Calais had 7,663 inhabitants according to the 1900 census. The most recent one dropped the total to 6,116. This is a loss of nearly 1,500, and Mayor Fowler and other citizens do not intend to let it stand in view of investigations indicating it is incorrect.

ARE TROUT BITING? TRY 'EM AND SEE

Worcester County trout fishing loses zest with the return of warmer weather. Timothy E. Hennessey of West Warren caught seventy in brooks of that township, though the water was running high.

The first catch for Taunton ponds to Fred Johnson of Dodgeville, who was the early one of any consequence in the vicinity to land any fish.

GOES FISHING IN A MANHOLE

Patrolman Foley of Station 4 Frees Was Walking Along Charles Street Near Cambridge Street Yesterday Afternoon When He Noticed a Room Standing Over an Open Manhole. The Man Had a Short Stick in His Hand and a Line From One End of the Stick Descended Into the Manhole.

"What you fishing for?" asked the policeman.

"Pickerel," replied the fisherman. "Did ever fish for pickerel? You cut a hole in the ice, drop a line through and the fish are so hungry they jump at it. I've got quite a string already. See?"

Stirring his hand in his pocket he pulled out a can of sardines.

"You come with me," said Foley. "I don't know whether you are drunk or crazy, but you shouldn't be at large."

Just then a woman with an anxious expression turned up.

"It's my husband," she said. "He's got a fever, and when I turned my back he got up, dressed and left the house."

"Well," said Foley, as he relinquished his prey, "he's still got the fever."

CAR KILLS CHILD BEFORE HER MAMMA

North Adams Babe Ground to Death Despite Mother's Frantic Efforts.

NORTH ADAMS, April 8.—Four-year-old Zelda Simkin was ground to death under a trolley car this afternoon just as her mother made one last, despairing grasp for the child's dress to save her. The car which killed Zelda struck the horrified mother and crushed her off to one side. Mrs. Simkin staggered to her feet, caught one glimpse of Zelda's mutilated body and the blood-stained car wheel, screamed and collapsed. Twilight she is in a pitiable condition, moaning for the child and with the tragedy ever before her eyes.

Zelda's father, Arthur Simkin, is a tailor. The Simkins live on Washington avenue, not far from the Ashland street line. The family consisted of father, mother, four-year-old Zelda and the baby. This noon Mrs. Simkin hurried through her dinner work and dressed herself, Zelda and the baby for an afternoon's outing and shopping trip. She started out at 1 o'clock with the baby in the carriage, and with Zelda skipping along by her side.

At the corner of Washington avenue and Ashland street Mrs. Simkin met a woman friend and paused for a brief chat. An in-bound car came bowling down the slight Ashland street grade at fair pace, driven by John Grembley, motorman.

Zelda slipped from her mother's hand and started across the street in front of the car. Grembley shut off the power and jammed on the brake. Mrs. Simkin ran after Zelda, calling to her loudly. The little girl kept on unheeding.

Mrs. Simkin was almost in reach of Zelda's fluttering skirt when the car struck her. Grembley was working at the brake with all his muscles. Mrs. Simkin jumped against the front corner of the car, just as Zelda disappeared under the fender, wailing in sudden, piteous fright for "mamma!"

Mrs. Simkin was hurled to one side. The car was stopped. Grembley hurried from his vestibule, white-faced. Passengers came out to see what the trouble was. The mother's shriek gave dreadful sign of what had happened. The car men and passengers found the child's body cut nearly in half.

CANOPIC TAKES MERRY THRONG SCHOOL HEAD AND SINGER SAIL

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

The Brooks family and Miss Leveroni, who sailed yesterday on the Canopic. Snapshot by AMERICAN photographer.

MISS ELVIRA LEVERONI

Superintendent Brooks and Family and Elvira Leveroni Among the Passengers.

JOY and wretchedness were strangely contrasted at the sailing of the White Star liner Canopic for the Mediterranean yesterday afternoon. On the saloon deck were hundreds of happy tourists, their arms full of flowers, gaily laughing and shouting adieus to their friends upon the pier. Just aft the deckhouse was a group of miserable, bedraggled people who sobbed and wept or stood sullenly and hopeless. They were being deported by the United States government.

There were sixty-seven of these unfortunates, the largest number ever deported from Boston. Their only crime was being L. P. C., which was marked on their deportation cards, and which means merely liable to become public charges.

These people arrived in Boston or New York hoping to make a fortune in the United States, but they never got beyond the immigration stations. The inspectors judged them too poor or feeble or incapable of making their way in this country, and sent them back to homes and countries that do not want them.

But the presence of these wretches did not prevent the sailing of the Canopic from being the gayest of the season. For two hours before the ship departed she was crowded with visitors, and when they left and the passengers lined the rails with their flowers, their flags and their bright faces it was a picturesque scene.

There were pretty girls without number, going on a pleasure cruise all Europe in three months. The saloon passengers numbered 223 and the steerage 400.

Superintendent of Schools Stratton D. Brooks and his family were among the passengers. Mr. Brooks is going out on special leave to study the methods of education of European nations. He will be gone six months.

Miss Elvira Leveroni of the Boston Opera Company, who has been engaged to create the contralto rôle in "The Girl of the Golden West" at Rome, was a passenger, as was George Curran, who builds productions for the opera company and who will set up in Rome the Boston Opera scenery for the latest Puccini opera.

Miss Mary Bradley, daughter of Colonel J. Payson Bradley, was going over to join a party of girl friends in Italy.

The entire scenic production of "The Girl of the Golden West" went on the liner.

STRANGE POST CARD CLEW.

Man Vanishes From Back Bay Apartment; Writes Message.

Mystery surrounds the disappearance of a man who gave the name of J. H. Todd when he applied at Miss Kate S. Jewell's lodging house at No. 308 Newbury street several weeks ago and engaged apartments. He is about forty-five years old and apparently wealthy. He said he was proprietor of a big hotel in Florida, and that he had relatives living in Huntington avenue.

"He went out one morning about two weeks ago, saying he was going on business," said Miss Jewell last night. "When he did not return that night I thought he was visiting his relatives. Two days later I decided there was something wrong, as he had completed several lines of having frequent chills. I notified the police and since then they have kept up a diligent search for him. This morning I received a postal card marked 'Boston,' saying that he was ill and was staying in a house in Cambridge street, but was better and would return soon."

FOSS EXPERTS GIVE STARTLING FIGURES

Startling revelations are promised in two reports of experts which Governor Foss will send to the Legislature this week. One report will be of an investigation made by Dr. Hinton S. Scoville of the State's warfare against the gypsy and brown-tail moth. The other will be of an investigation made by the Harpan, Barnes Company of the purchase of supplies for the State Farm at Bridgewater.

The gypsy moth report is now in the Governor's hands, and will probably be sent to the Legislature to-morrow. It is understood that a not over-flattering comparison will be made of the cost and quality of the supplies purchased for this work by the State and those purchased by individuals.

The Bridgewater report is about completed. Special attention is paid in this report also to the prices paid for supplies for this institution as compared with those paid by other State institutions.

STUDENTS TO TAKE 150-MILE WALK

"Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching——"

Listen, dear readers, and you shall hear—not a story of soldier lads marching bravely to war, but the story of the "hike" to Boston of 200 or more cadets from Norwich University at Northfield, Vt. They're going to tramp it overland from Concord, N. H., to Boston Common, where they expect to pitch their tents for a brief stay.

The "hike" is the suggestion of Colonel Josiah H. Benton, Norwich alumnus and Boston lawyer, and is being boomed by Attorney Nelson L. Sheldon of Boston, who is a trustee of the university.

It has been sixty-five years since the cadets came from Northfield into Boston, their last annual walk to the Boston Common having taken place in the Spring of 1846. No definite date has been set for this year's march, but it will probably take place this Summer.

LONG EXPLAINS PLAN TO DEVELOP HARBOR

Lawyer Sees $100,000,000 Property Value for City if Work Is Intelligent.

Henry C. Long, a lawyer with an office in the Tremont Building, who has given the Boston Harbor question much thought and has a bill before the Legislature for a harbor commission of three paid members to be appointed by the Governor, said yesterday that if the city's interests in this direction were looked after properly at this time, in ten or fifteen years Boston would have a harbor property worth $100,000,000, entirely self-supporting.

"The bill I advocate," said Mr. Long, "is backed by the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, the Fruit and Produce Exchange, the Boston Lunch Club, composed of fifty of the largest business organizations and by Boards of Trade through the metropolitan district. The idea has been publically proclaimed by Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald.

Plans For Commission.

"The re-drafted Long bill, as it is called, calls for a paid commission of three men to be appointed by the Governor, and my idea of the commission is this: one of the members to be a first-class engineer, skilled in harbor construction, to take personal direction of and give his whole time to the construction and development of plans for new constructions; a first-class business man to take charge of the harbor as to the handling of freight, movement of vessels, etc., and the third member and chairman, to be a man like Mr. Stevens, the president of the Montreal Harbor Commission, to direct the world's commerce into this port and build up Boston Harbor, keeping it away ahead of the times, rather than fifty years behind as it is now.

"I want the commission to have the right of eminent domain so that if a railroad does not find it profitable to connect up with a large manufactory the Harbor Commissioners can build a switch to him and give him those accommodations he ought to have.

Would Pay Own Way.

"I would have the harbor pay its own way and construct itself. If this business is intelligently done we ought in ten or fifteen years to have a harbor property worth at least $100,000,000 and entirely self-supporting. New York city has paid out $150,000,000 since 1871 for the construction of docks and piers and it has almost paid off every dollar of it so that the vast property and vast income has cost them absolutely nothing. We can do the same thing here if we appoint a paid board of intelligent men unattached to any interest that will interfere with their free exercise of their best judgment.

"I would have this board also have the free and immediate use of this $3,000,000 now appropriated and start their pier in East Boston as outlined. Next to all that can we this year and when the next Legislature meets let them ask for more. It is not a debt that anybody can object to they are asking, and the Legislature should be extremely liberal in its appropriations. I would also have the commission have charge of the entire harbor from Point Allerton all around every bay and inlet in the harbor clear to the point of Nahant."

McCurdy Honors Lynn Belle

AVIATOR IN FLIGHT AND GIRL HE VISITED

MISS ELSIE PINKHAM

McCURDY FLYING AT ORMOND DAYTONA BEACH

ORMOND, Fla., April 8.—Miss Elsie Pinkham of Lynn, Mass., enjoys the distinction of being the only girl in America who has received a call from a young man in a flying machine.

John A. D. McCurdy, the Curtiss aviator who has been giving an exhibition of flights at Daytona, learned that Miss Pinkham was at Ormond, and finding that there was no afternoon train and that the tide was too high to permit an auto to make the run over the Vanderbilt automobile course, he turned to his own device for covering distances. He called up the Ormond Hotel to notify Miss Pinkham and several other Palm Beach friends that he was coming up for tea, and then as any man would hail a taxi to make a trip, McCurdy hopped into his biplane and flew up to Ormond, a distance of six miles.

Miss Pinkham, her mother, Mrs. J. B. Pinkham, and Mrs. Laura Hunt of Lynn, Miss E. Phyllis Kimball of Providence, Dr. J. Wilson Parks of Winthrop, and H. P. Farrington of Cambridge made up an automobile party and met McCurdy on the beach and escorted him back to the Ormond Hotel for a tea party.

Miss Kimball theln took snapshots.

The start of the flight back to Seabreeze by McCurdy was watched with interest by all the visitors at Ormond.

IRISH HOME RULE COMMITTEE NAMED

LONDON, April 8.—Another decisive step has been taken towards Irish home rule by the appointment of a Government committee to inquire into the financial relations between England and Ireland. The report of this committee, which is expected before the close of the year, will be the precursor to the introduction of the ministry's bill for home rule.

The committee consists of Sir John M. Primrose, a prominent broker, as chairman; the Most Rev. Dr. Kelly, bishop of Ross, one of the most scholarly prelates in Ireland; Lord Pirrie, head of the great shipbuilding house of Harland & Wolff; Henry Neville Gladstone, who is a nephew of the late premier and a leading Liverpool banker, and Frederick Huth Jackson, who has been giving an exhibition of late, but they have undertaken it in the fullest spirit of patriotic public service. Upon their findings will largely hinge the financial features of the new government of Ireland.

Some twenty years ago the late Premier Gladstone appointed a similar commission, placing at its head the Right Hon. Hugh Childers, a former chancellor of the exchequer and one of the leading financial authorities in Great Britain. Associated with Childers was a group of the ablest experts the government could call to its service. Thomas Sexton was the only member of the board who was connected with the Irish party.

The Childers Commission sat for nearly two years, making exhaustive inquiry into the whole question of the financial relations of the two countries.

When the report was laid before Parliament it was not only unanimous, but it was also the most outspoken document of its kind ever returned to the State. Without qualification, Mr. Childers and his colleagues said in their report that the whole Irish financial system, as it was connected under the regime of Pitt and his chief adviser, Lord Castlereagh, was a huge fabric of injustice, and that it had saddled on Ireland for more than a hundred years a debt she never owed, but which she had been ever since compelled to pay.

Mr. Gladstone could have acted upon this report if he had been spared to introduce another bill for home rule. But his death intervened and the floor was breaking out soon afterwards led to the indefinite shelving of al the work that was done by the Childers Commission.

The vast data and testimony gathered by the Childers Commission is intact and will be of inestimable val ouio the committee just appointed by Mr. Asquith.

STEEL CITADEL FOR ROCKEFELLER HOARD

Millions in Bonds From Which Oil King Clips Coupon Harvest in Costly Vault.

NEW YORK, April 8.—More than $200,000,000 worth of securities, representing the greater part of the personal fortune of John D. Rockefeller, rest securely in a specially constructed steel citadel under the northeast corner of the tower of the Produce Exchange building only a few minutes' walk from the landing station of the thousands of immigrants who bring their fortune in this country. Only a short distance to the north is No. 26 Broadway, the centre of Rockefeller and Standard Oil activities.

For any person but Mr. Rockefeller and his most trusted employes the treasure vault is absolutely inaccessible. Between the street outside and the repositories of the Rockefeller securities are ten locks varied in character. The first is the bolt in the outside door at the sidewalk. The second is in the door opening from the foot of the stairs into the public entrance of the safe deposit company.

Steel Cage an Obstacle.

In front of the iron vault which is the largest of its kind in the world devoted to custody of the property of a single person, there is presented to view a cage not unlike the one in which Captain Dreyfus was confined at Devil's Island.

The two padlocks, or the combination locks, which are used with a key in the hand of President William H. Pearson of the Safe Deposit Company, which, turning, releases the dial of each of the combination locks and permits the latter to be set by two men from Mr. Rockefeller's private office.

One of the two is Mr. Rockefeller's financial secretary, while the other is a man he trusts equally well. Each has a different combination to unlock. There are six numbers on each lock. The numbers run from 1 to 100, which makes each lock susceptible to 1,000,000 changes.

Forty-inch Walls.

The door of the vault is moved by hand and it opens easily owing to its swinging upon a compound double gooseneck hinge, which is carefully balanced on ball and roller bearings, made of the finest hardened tool steel.

Then interior of the vault is nine feet wide, nine feet high and fifteen feet deep. It is forty inches thick. In the centre of thirty-six inches of concrete are ninety pound steel rails set six inches apart in double rows, interlocked so as to be precisely three inches apart. The remaining four inches of the wall are four one-inch thicknesses of solid steel.

On either side are numerous compartments or small safes. These chests have sides two inches thick with doors from two and a half to three inches thick, all of the best steel, and each of these doors is locked by heavy bolt work similar to that of the big door of the vault.

Card-indexed Bonds.

Two combination locks guard each chest. There still remains one more lock to be turned before a single bond can be lifted to daylight. Having swung back the steel door of one of the inner chests there are revealed small sheet steel boxes of a thickness of one-sixteenth of an inch. There are four of these in each chest. They are equipped with a hinge lid and key boxes. The last turn of the key opens one of the sheet steel boxes.

In one oft hese inner inside compartments is a card index which registers the bonds, with their dates of maturity and the months when the coupons come off.

Woman Like a Torch.

ROCKPORT, April 8.—Her clothes ablaze, Mrs. Mary Prior, aged seventy, ran down High street this afternoon and was stopped by friends, who hurried her to the Hadley Hospital, where her burns are reported to be serious. She may die. Mrs. Prior was burning some old newspapers when her dress caught fire.

PHYSICAL CULTURE CONVENTION HERE

All America to Be Represented This Week at Gymnastic Society Meetings.

From almost every State in the Union and from Mexico and Canada people who believe in curing ills of the mind and body by physical culture are on the way to Boston. The Massachusetts Medical Gymnastic Society, of which Baroness Rose Posse of Boston is the president, will tender a special reception to the delegates Monday evening at the Harvard Medical School.

The delegates who form the therapeutic section of the American Physical Education Association will attend the eighteenth annual convention of that body, which convenes in Boston next Tuesday and continues until Friday.

The first day of the convention will be devoted to a study of the aims of the sections, which favors gymnastics instead of medicine or surgery.

While not depreciating the value of gymnastic and physical training in general, Baroness Posse is emphatic in her advocacy of physical therapeutics.

The first day will be devoted to a study of the aims of the sections to be held at the lecture hall of the Girls' Normal school. The program includes a lecture on "Hygiene in Physical Education," by Miss Clara G. Bear of Sophie Newcomb Memorial, New Orleans. A discussion on abdominal troubles will be opened by Samuel H. Webber, at which Dr. Jay W. Seaver of New Haven, Ct., will be the principal speaker. Dr. Edward B. Bradford of the Harvard Medical school, will talk on "Physical Training," and Dr. Charles S. Minot of Harvard will discuss the effects of gymnastic training upon longevity.

The last convention was held at Indianapolis, where more than 5,000 delegates were in attendance. Baroness Posse expects at least 1,000 in attendance here.

Baroness Posse is the chairman of the reception committee. The adress of welcome will be given by Dean Briggs, and the president's address will be delivered by Dr. George L. Meylan of Columbia.

WOMAN SLAYER INSANE.

Grand Jury Returns No-Bill for Ellen Ahearn.

The Suffolk Grand Jury returned a no bill in the case of Ellen J. Ahearn, charged with the murder of Mary Moulton in the South End last March, on the ground that the defendant was insane when the crime was committed. A true bill was returned against Phillip J. Hayes, who escaped from the House of Correction on Deer Island in a motor boat last Summer. Harold D. Jacobs and Roy H. Perkins, who operated the motor boat that collided on the night of March 8 at Berkeley street and Columbus avenue, resulting in the death of Carmelo Bonanno, were discharged. In all fifty-four indictments and fifteen no bills were returned by the Grand Jury, which will come in again to-morrow.

500 in Industrial Exhibit.

At the class work exhibition at the South End Industrial School in Bartlett street, Roxbury, yesterday, 500 boys and girls were seen at the various kinds of useful work taught at that institution. The classes included advanced millinery, dressmaking, mending, remodelling, canework, carpentry, freehand and mechanical drawing and housekeeping. The Mothers' Club is to have an exhibition April 27.

Plans for Malden Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Grace Freeman, daughter of Captain and Miss Anthony C. Freeman, to Dr. Robert Weller French of Wollaston, will take place at noon on April 18, at Captain Freeman's estate in Wellfleet. After the ceremony there will be a reception and breakfast.

Great Chelsea Fire Anniversary To-day

Three Years Ago This Palm Sunday the Disastrous and Fatal $17,000,000 Blaze Was Discovered.

To-day is the third anniversary of the Chelsea fire by the church calendar. The fire started about 10 o'clock in the morning on Palm Sunday, April 1, 1908. Nineteen lives were lost, 16,000 people were burned, 287 acres of ground covered the area of the fire, and the estimated loss was $17,000,000.

Before the fire the property was assessed for $5,500,000. Since the date of the conflagration 1,000 permits for building have been taken out and the new property has been assessed for more than $7,000,000. Only one-third of the area burned over has been rebuilt, but plans are under way for the construction and buildings on the remainder of the property. Some new municipal and government buildings are now in the course of construction.

V., is a candidate for election to the office of Junior vice department commander at the annual convention, to be held at Lowell April 19. He has filled all the elective offices of his camp; has served on the department council of administration and was organizer and is a past president of the Spanish War Veterans Bowling League. Bacon Camp will send a full delegation of fifteen members to the Lowell convention, where they will be a number of candidates for the office.

LAWRENCE CASE GOES TO SUPREME COURT

The Lawrence city government wrangle landed in the Supreme Court when a petition for a writ of mandamus was filed by members of the City Council and Board of Aldermen to compel other members of both bodies to meet in joint convention to elect city treasurer and collector of taxes. Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Mrs. Jackson Hadley, Esopus, N. Y., writes:

"It is with the greatest pleasure I write this. For years I have suffered terribly with kidney and bladder trouble. The pain in my back by spells was so great I could scarcely stand on my feet, and such terrible headaches and pain around my heart, and was so nervous all the time that life seemed a burden to me.

"I paid out a great many dollars, both for doctors and patent medicines, and no benefit only for the time.

"One day, looking through a Peruna almanac, I saw how many had been benefited by using Peruna. I followed directions, and after taking four bottles of Peruna can stand on my feet and work all day with comfort. The pain in my back and head has entirely left me, and I am not so nervous, and can say I am completely cured from all kidney trouble."

Internal Catarrh.

Mrs. M. E. Seymour, R. F. D. 2, Bowman, Georgia, writes:

"I am ready to speak a few words in favor of Peruna and Manalin.

"I have tried them for nearly every ill of life for myself and family, and find them to be all the doctor claims them to be. Peruna cured me of internal catarrh when my doctor could not."

Headache and Weak Back.

Mrs. Emma Green, 1040 Kalamath St., Denver, Col., writes:

"Peruna has been a great blessing to me. I suffered agonies with severe headaches and a weak back and could hardly drag myself around.

"A friend who was visiting me was taking Peruna for the same trouble and induced me to try it. I soon found that I was being helped, and in less than three weeks I felt like a different woman, and in four months I was well. Peruna certainly gave me strength.

"I consider it an ideal woman's remedy."

Systemic Catarrh.

Mrs. Augustine Pauline Ochs, R. F. D. 2, North English, Iowa, writes:

"I took Peruna over three years. I suffered from systemic catarrh and had pains in my right side so I could hardly do my housework.

"I am 66 years old, and am now doing all my housework. I am in the best of health and cannot thank The Peruna Medical Department enough for their good advice and medicine."

HATTIE WILLIAMS'S MOTHER IS EVICTED

Owes Rent for Dorchester Kindergarten and Court Orders Her to Vacate.

Mrs. Annie E. L. Williams, the mother of Hattie Williams, the actress, was ordered by the Civil Court in Dorchester, yesterday to vacate the property at No. 1800 Dorchester avenue, which she has been using as a kindergarten for girls for several years, after Mrs. Williams had appeared as her own lawyer, done some sharp cross-questioning and had made a strong plea to the judge.

The charge against Mrs. Williams was that she owed back rent. She said she did, but that the estate owed her certain damages and that she owned were not as much interested in getting her out for the non-payment of rent as they were anxious to find the place to an athletic club or political club.

Mrs. Williams has had a number of fights to retain possession of this property and had Attorney Wm. Thorndike Sullivan of the Court in that she get out next Friday.

Work for the Dog.

"They'll have to throw my things into the street to get me out," said Mrs. Williams. "And while they are doing that, may be my yellow collie dog will be doing something, too!"

Mrs. Williams lives in Shepton street, Dorchester, at one time she was a nurse in the Massachusetts General Hospital. It is a sort of irony of fate that the owner of the property from which she has been ordered is in the same hospital, for six years Mrs. Williams has been occupying this house as a school for children and as a home for the poor.

John L. V. Spear, an agent for the property, said in court today that Mrs. Williams owed ten months' rent. There is a prospect of selling the property, he said, and they wanted her to get out. Mrs. Williams said that as her lawyer was not present she would have to handle the case herself and proceeded to question Mr. Spear.

Q.—Isn't it true that you want to sell this property on account of some claim against myself. Haven't I made you an offer?

A.—You've had every chance to make us an offer.

Q.—Now tell the truth. Aren't you selling this for an athletic or political association in Dorchester? A.—No.

Q.—Is there no athletic association with a prize fighter at its head, looking for this property? A.—Not as far as I know.

Speech to the Judge.

"Well," said Mrs. Williams, "I can't get anything out of this man so I should like to say a few words for myself, Judge."

"Proceed, Mrs. Williams," said Judge Joseph H. Churchill.

"I have tried to buy that property," said Mrs. Williams. "My daughter, Hattie, was set home on January 8 and she tried to buy it for me. But she could not make a deal. It is true that I owe some rent. But I'm an honest woman, Judge, and have paid rent in the past and am ready to pay it now.

"When I rented that place first I was supposed to pay $18 a month. That was enough. Then they raised the rent to $20 and made me responsible for other expenses. I rented the top floor to a family, thinking I could help out, some in that way. But they heard of it and they ejected my tenant. They owe me something for that.

"What you say may be true," said the judge, "but on your own statement you owe rent for the place, and there is nothing left for me but to decide against you."

When Mrs. Williams left the court room there was a flash in her eyes that indicates that there will be a warm time at No. 1800 Dorchester avenue next Friday.

NEW THEORY ON HOW TO KEEP HUSBANDS

Cultivated Beauty Won't Hold His Love, Mrs. Ely Tells American Wives.

"If massage, starvation diet, extravagant dressing or any other manifestation of the beauty quest would preserve a man's love, then all fashionable women would keep their husbands," said Mrs. Ely. "But do they? You know they do not. The women that you and I know who keep their husbands in love with them are those that don't try.—Mrs. Ely's views on beauty.

"WOMEN should not cultivate youth and beauty in order to preserve their husbands' love, they should retain their husbands' love and by so doing keep their youth and beauty.

The new theory of beauty culture, fone as it is novel and novel as it is true, is promulgated by Mrs. Robert Erskine Ely of New York.

"Allmost anything you read in the magazines about how and beauty tells you to pursue beauty if you desire to retain your husband's love," says Mrs. Ely. "It makes no wonder how a woman who follows this advice ever finds time for her husband. The beauty quest as it is planned is far too fatiguing. It gives one no time for anything else.

"I have never known a woman whose husband was devoted to her who was not beautiful, in his eyes at least. And not one of those I have in mind paid any attention to the beauty quest. Love means beauty and happiness and contentment. What more could any woman desire.

Mrs. Ely is the most interesting and attractive wife of Robert Erskine Ely, head of the Cotton Exchange.

She is by birth a Dutch woman, born in the fascinating island of Java, and before coming to this country was a member of the London stage for several years, during which includes G. K. Chesterton and Bernard Shaw.

"I want to say to every woman, don't always strive to be beautiful to your husband. Have one in a while to look ugly to him. Brush your hair straight back from your forehead. You will not look pretty, certainly, but you will bring out all the strength in your face. Be natural, be yourself. That is what your husband married you for.

"This is not just a theory," Mrs. Ely explained smilingly. "I practice it. If I would never have gone camping with my husband on my honeymoon.

"A man may meet a great many pretty women but he does not want to feel when he goes home that his wife is just exactly like them, her hair arranged the same way, her gown of the same fashion, her manner the same shallow effort to please. He wants to feel that his wife is something absolutely unique, utterly different from any other woman. For every man in his soul is a Sultan.

"But suppose," it was suggested, "as so many men do, a husband has married a girl of a certain arrangement of false puffs, of bought and placed ruffles, how can a wife ever dare to be herself? What sense is there in trying to appear to intelligent women, but what of "he others?"

"That's the point," Mrs. Ely answered, "those who were married for shams may have to keep them up. Such women are not really loved by men. But the women whose husbands are devoted to them are not as a rule pretty women.

"The homeliest women are all married because girls are not childish enough to they know they have a wider choice." Mrs. Ely explained, "and they take longer to exercise it. A homely woman is very likely to take the first man that asks her. Love begets love, and when any man makes her only with a compliment, she is pleased, touched, and begins to feel a tenderness who is responsive and returns. Then she becomes beautiful to him and to other persons as well. We have all seen very ordinary girls flower suddenly in spirit and body. Their eyes and their faces glow and they become lovely.

GIRL LABOR LEADER LAUDS UNION WORK

Only Way, Declares Miss Passoff, for Women to Get Living Wages.

A PROPER wage for working women and girls can't be defined in mere dollars and cents. It isn't a question of whether she can live on $7 a week, as contended by Mrs. William Grant Brown of New York, president of the Federation of Women's Clubs. Neither does it follow that she ought to have a minimum of $15 a week, as set forth in a book by Dr. Susan M. Kingsbury of Simmons College.

At least, that's the viewpoint of Miss A. Helen Passoff of the Boston Shirtwaist Makers' Union, recently elected organizer of the Woman's Trade Union League. Miss Passoff is looked upon as an authority of questions relating to the women wage earner. She has been delegated to organize all the women workers of the city for the purpose of assuring a living wage.

Requisites for Proper Wage.

"The prime requisites for a living wage," she said in a representative of the AMERICAN, can be summed up in the short sentences. Namely:

"A wage that will assure every woman and every girl wage worker, a wholesome place in which to live, in the first place and especially, healthful food. Third, suitable clothing. Fourth, the means and the time for a reasonable amount of recreation. Fifth, a wage that will enable her to lay by something for old age as well as to provide against illness and unemployment.

"The Woman's Trade Union League holds that this condition can be brought about only by the organization of all workers into trade unions. The league pledges itself to work in favor of equal pay for equal work, an eight-hour day, a minimum wage scale, full citizenship for women, and all principles involved in the recognition of the American Federation of Labor.

"We have encountered many futile statements about the cost of living for women and girls engaged in industry, but never a more unreasonable one than that recently made by Mrs. William Grant Brown of New York.

Mrs. Brown Criticised.

"Mrs. Brown objects to publicity on the subject of low wages for women and girls, because it tends to make them more discontented. She seems to forget that people who work in business hours and at home, and still have to think and scheme in a vain endeavor to make ends meet, cannot possibly be contented publicity or no publicity.

"Since low wages, and long hours of nerve-racking work are the cause of this discontent, why not do away with the wage-earning class? Of course, and shortening the hours of labor?

"Until women can be contented while compelled to draw heavily upon her scarce force and vitality for the mere privilege of dragging out a miserable existence. Her self respect revolts against being subsidized by philanthropists or dependig upon relatives. To live a normal life she must have a living wage, and this cannot be gained outside of the trade union of her calling.

"True, the work of organizing women is beset by many difficulties. Her entrance into the field of paid workers is still so recent that she is not accustomed to using her power to defend herself. She hardly realizes that every effort to bring her standard higher helps to raise them all. She has been taught to look upon as her natural protector.

"My work for the Woman's Trade Union League is to help remove some of these difficulties which stand between the women wage earner and freedom. It is only through unionism that the conditions which must be corrected to labor can be made better, and there must be a betterment of those conditions in order that the health and happiness of the people of the country as a whole, the working woman included."

BOSTON WORKER WHO URGES TRADE UNIONS FOR WOMEN

Miss A. Helen Passoff

HEARING ON TAX DODGING QUESTION

The enemy of the tax dodger will have his innings on next Tuesday at 10 a. m.

At City Hall all those who are opposed to the principle of taxation according to ability to pay will have the opportunity to be heard.

It is the first time in the history of the city that such a meeting has been held and Fitzgerald believes that those who are authorizing the assessing department to investigate the returns direct to the Board of Assessors and let that body do the rest. He will be at the head of the delegation.

Ex-Councilman Frank A. Goodwin, who is the original exploiter of the tax dodger, announced last night that he would be there, and intimates that he will have some interesting disclosures to make. He said:

"I congratulate the Mayor on his quick response to agitate the state of public opinion. I can conceive of no better way of dealing with the prevalent feeling of unrest in the minds of the people that there is need of a change in the methods of assessing than by giving such an opportunity of protest to the assessed and their answer to meet each other face to face in public.

"Particularly is this agreeable on account of the guarantee that both sides shall be heard under perfectly fair conditions."

POPULAR ELECTION VOTE IS THIS WEEK

The House of Representatives will vote this week upon the resolution memorializing Congress to call a constitutional convention, that may be held for the election of the United States Senators by direct vote of the people. Representative John W. Haigis, progressive leader from the western part of the State, has the resolution assigned for this week.

Little opposition is expected to arise from the anti-graft members, and the vote on Wednesday, within a few succeeding days, is looked for to be favorable to the passage of the resolution.

Rhode Island has the resolution to ratify and is in the committee on judiciary. Very few days of the legislative session remain, but a final passage of the resolution, even though the legislature will receive no credit for it, is more than probable. The victory carries of Republican leaders in the Senate and the holding up for divers reasons of the resolution in the House, are the direct vote for Senators resolutions, which have been passed by both houses, so that the resolution may not be lost in the shuffle. The resolution becomes one of the few States now needed in order to call a Congressional action and call a constitutional convention.

PICTURE HAT WILL RETURN FOR EASTER

Small Turbans and Tyrolean Shapes Will Take Second Place for Dress Wear.

The old gown may be made over of last year's suit may be remodeled and greased for Easter, but the woman wants to appear with an old hat or worn gloves on this day of the year which features fashion parades?

Although Spring hats have appeared and been worn for two months, the real, permanent styles are now being displayed and the little flower toque or simply ribbon trimmed shape that has been worn the past weeks will be relegated to the general wear position and be replaced for Easter by the elaborate hat that it to do service as the principal hat throughout the season.

In looking over the stocks one would say every imaginable shape may be worn and in fact there never was such a variety of shapes and materials.

Large Hat Still In Vogue.

Easter Sunday will show that the large hat has by no means been superseded by the small turbans, bonnets and Tyrolean shapes that have been such favorites this season. The latter will continue in popularity, but for dressy wear the picture hat will lead.

The Parisian women of fashion cling to this becoming style of headgear and therefore a goodly number are the large trimmed shapes. The new soft millinery is prominent, but many combinations of the various French models are introduced, thus giving individuality to the dress hat.

With the coming of Easter new motor bonnets are also being shown, with a marked feature of them is their absolute simplicity. They seem to combine comfort and practicability. They are in the line of trimmings that only catch the dust anyway, and be so snugly over the head that when the veil is adjusted not even a hairpin is required.

Something New on Easter.

The veil is a necessary adjunct of the motor bonnet and the present mode of draping this necessary is decidedly Oriental. The illustration shows a new veil model in plisse natural straw and cream colored lace. The lace veil has the ends trimmed with tassels which not only accentuate the oriental effect but also act as a weight to the veil.

Superstition demands that something new be worn on Easter day to ensure good luck during the season and there are not many women who do not, at least, have a new pair of gloves.

Fashion has decreed that this is to be a white season in gloves and the average woman is appalled at the number of hats that are staring her in the face for surely every gentlewoman will want to appear in immaculate gloves upon all occasions.

Later on, when the summer silk gloves arrives, this will be an easy matter, but even the glace kid gloves are to be preserved for dress occasions and for ordinary wear those of dowskin will be found quite satisfactory. These are guaranteed to wash perfectly and not shrink, and it is a simple matter to keep them clean.

MAN IS BEATEN TO DEATH WITH HAMMER

Slain by Brother-in-Law at Providence After Trying to Kill Wife.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 8.—After trying to kill his wife on sight at her mother's home in Cranston, Alphonse Zoglio was killed by his brother-in-law, Frank Zoglio.

Alphonse was beaten to death with a hammer, with which Frank Zoglio pounded Alphonse's head to a jelly. Frank was arrested and is charged with murder.

Alphonse Zoglio was thirty years old. His wife, Mrs. Filmino Zoglio, is twenty. Her maiden name was Filmino Zoglio. She was her husband's cousin and marriage made no change in her name. The couple separated in Cranston two years ago after quarrelling about money each earned in mill work. Mrs. Zoglio went to her mother's to live and Frank went to War ren.

Tonight Alphonse Zoglio came to his mother-in-law's house at No. 60 Crown street, Cranston. When driven from the house he fired one shot at his wife, who was seated at a second floor window. The ball shattered the glass, but missed Mrs. Zoglio. She was slightly cut by broken glass.

The husband fled. An hour later he was found unconscious on the sidewalk by a policeman. The police say Frank Zoglio began to guard Zoglio while he went for help. While he was gone Frank Zoglio, brother of the wife, came to the scene and beat the husband to death.

The police, after arresting Frank Zoglio, started to get another brother, Antonio.

PICKPOCKET IN SUBWAY.

Accused Man Caught in Chase as Traffic Is Held Up.

Traffic in the subway was delayed for five minutes at Park street, at 8:15 last night while conductor John A. Cahalane chased two alleged pickpockets, who had been operating on his car. As the car slowed down for the Park square stop, Cahalane saw a man who later gave the name as John Brown of No. 19 Kingsbury street, Wellington, rolled out after two men near him had stolen his purse. Cahalane made a dive for the men, but they sprang out of the front door and ran up the subway stairs. After them, pounding their heels on the cement, went Cahalane, Inspector Joseph Loughlin, who had seen the trouble, and the chase down Tremont to Eliot to field street. Inspector Loughlin overtook one man, who was booked as Frank Ogden of No. 27 Upton street, on a charge of the larceny of a pocketbook and four dollars. The other man escaped.

FEDERAL PROBE FOR BOSTON MILK TRUST

Grand Jury Summons Independent Producers and Railroad Men in Investigation.

Farmers throughout New England and particularly those in Massachusetts are directly interested in the investigation to be begun next Tuesday by the Federal Grand Jury in Boston, to determine if the so-called Boston Milk Trust is a combination in restraint of trade.

The inquiry is to be a sweeping one. Prominent milk producers have been summoned as witnesses. It is understood that a number of milk officials will be questioned by the government preliminary to action against the producers and in favor of the Boston milk contractors, in transportation rates for the milk. The secrecy and oppression of the milk trust will be exposed, declare the farmers' representatives.

The fact that there is to be a searching investigation by the United States Department of Justice became known yesterday, when Deputy United States Marshal James H. Ruhl served a summons on Charles D. Sage, of New Braintree, one of the largest producers of milk in central Massachusetts and a leading organizer of farmers who have been fighting the "Milk Trust" for months. The action of the government is a result of facts and conditions in the milk producing business which they brought to light.

Pool to Beat Rebels.

Statements made by farmers to the Sunday AMERICAN yesterday indicated that a Federal Grand Jury will be provided with good material on which to base its investigation. It is generally believed, however, that government special agents must have collected a great deal more evidence to warrant a probe, and possibly prosecution.

One farmer yesterday declared that an alleged "pool" in the contractor had told him of a "pool" of $75,000 to be used for the purpose of driving the independent contractor out of business. Another charge made against "trust" contractors was that there is strong evidence of the existence of a "combination, or "gentlemen's agreement" to stifle competition, in flagrant violation of the anti-trust law.

One of the chief proofs in support of the alleged "trust" is the emphatic statement made yesterday that the entire milk producing territory of New England has been parcelled out to three or four of the leading Boston contractors. These districts are called zones. A farmer in any zone must sell to the contractor controlling that section, it is claimed.

Farmers Are Helpless.

It is further alleged that the prices paid the farmers for their milk is set by the contractors in question. These contractors are also accused of fixing the price for their consumers under the same alleged agreement. As one leading producer put it, "the contractors are playing both ends to the middle." The farmers say they can only get the price stipulated by the contractors; that if they refuse this, it is next to impossible for them to sell their milk.

Mr. Sage of New Braintree, who is to testify before the grand jury Tuesday, said yesterday:

"You wouldn't have to go far among the farmers to learn something about this agreement between the big milk contractors. I have been in the business for the last fifteen years, and I am pretty well acquainted with the tactics adopted by the contractors. They say that the appearance of throat-cutting among them in Boston, but when it comes to the farmer the contractors are as unit against him. They always get together. When it's a question of business with the producer, the contractors have always shown the solid front.

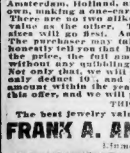
Diamonds



TOMORROW we shall offer 100 diamond rings, costing from $20 to $1,000, mostly single stones, in settings suitable for ladies or gentlemen. These diamonds came to us direct from the cutting works in Amsterdam, Holland, and are cut "upend," which was an idea of our own, using a somewhat larger stone to begin with, so much larger as a finish. There are no two alike, or no two at the same price, one is as good value as the other, there are no duplicates. The most desirable sizes will go first. An early inspection will be to your advantage. The purchasers may take them to their own jeweller, and if he will honestly tell you that he will sell you one as good for less than double the price, the full amount of the money will be refunded to you, without any quibbling, on any fit and ends of any sort whatsoever. Not only that, we will allow you to wear it a whole year, and then only deduct 10 p. and return you the full amount of cash less the amount within the year. Our entire capital and surplus is back of this offer, and we will positively do just as we say.

Spreading Rails Cause Smash on New Haven Branch Line.

HARTFORD, Conn., April 8.—Among the thirty or more persons injured to-day in a wreck on the branch road of the New Haven line running between Suffield and Windsor Locks, were States Prison Director Edward A. The wreck was caused by the rails spreading, as a result of the frost thawing out of the ground.

CHAMBER OPPOSES LIGHTING CONTRACT

Protests to Supt. Rourke Against Accepting Figures of Rising Sun Company.

The Chamber of Commerce in a communication received by Commissioner of Public Works Rourke to-day goes flatly on record as opposed to having the city award the contract for lighting the Dudley streets and alleys to the Rising Sun Street Lighting Company.

The Chamber suggests that the city should readvertise in view of the fact that the Rising Sun Company was the only bidder and urges that the city utilize every means to obtain competition. It further recommends that if the city accepts the Rising Sun bid that the contract be entered into for a much shorter term than ten years which the company desires.

This action of the Chamber is founded upon a report submitted by the Committee on Municipal and Metropolitan affairs of the organization, comprised of William B. Munroe, chairman; Francis R. Bangs, Samuel B. Capen, Adams D. Hollis, Carl Dreyfus, Henry E. Hagan, Leonard Metcalf, Seward W. Jones, Reuben Wilkins, Joseph B. Yeadley.

The price submitted by the Rising Sun Company for a ten year contract is $22.30 a lamp or $1.30 a lamp less than the old figures.

The committee, which investigated the matter believes that the Boston Consolidated Gas Company should have the work and is not convinced by the reasons that the company assigns for failing to submit a bid.

JUMPS TO DEATH OFF ROOF.

South Sudbury Man, Ill, Ends Life in Revere.

R. Frank Cutting, a South Sudbury farmer, committed suicide at Revere Beach yesterday, by jumping from the roof of a three-story lodging house at the corner of Beach street and Revere boulevard. Cutting was spending the day with his sister, Mrs. Harvey, and family. As the family was about to sit down to lunch, Cutting, who declared he was not hungry and could eat nothing, made his way to the roof through a skylight and leaped to the ground, a distance of about forty feet, onto the granolithic pavement.

Mr. Wing, his brother-in-law, said that business worries, combined with temporary physical indisposition, had unsettled Cutting's mind. Cutting leaves a wife and three small children in Sudbury. His mother also survives him.

Franklin Square Fund Grows.

Dr. George L. Perin, president of the Franklin Square House, reports $2,000 additional toward the $100,000 fund he is trying to raise to pay off the indebtedness of this great home for working girls. The latest gift comes from a source which he is not at liberty to reveal. The total subscriptions are now $71,046. Dr. Perin is anxious to complete the subscriptions during the Spring, and invites correspondence concerning the work.

INSPECTING PUPILS UNDER NEW SYSTEM

Doctors Now Will Get $500 a Year and Are Expected to Do Thorough Work.

The reorganization of the school inspection under the jurisdiction of the Boston Board of Health goes into effect tomorrow. The eighty doctors engaged in the work will receive an annual compensation of $500 annually instead of $200, as under the old system.

The work of the physicians who will do the inspection will be more than doubled, and will require at least several hours a day.

Under the new system the physicians will be obliged to visit each school in his district every morning that they are in session. In a room set apart for this purpose he must consider the following:

Every child referred to him for examination and diagnosis by the teacher or nurse.

This should include every child who shows any sign of ill health or suffering from defect or contagious disease.

Every child returning to school after absence on account of illness or from unknown cause.

All children returning after previous exclusion.

All children on entering the school for the first time.

The school physicians will also be expected to supplement the work of the truant officers. They will be required to each day obtain from the masters of the schools a list of all pupils who have been absent for three or more days for any unassigned or indefinite cause. These children must be visited after school hours at their homes, and a report made to the chief of the division of names and addresses of all cases of sickness found.

Dr. Paul Carson will be in charge of this work and the eighty physicians who have hitherto engaged in the inspection will be retained in the service.

MAYOR ASSAILS SUGHRUE.

Complains of Resignation of Finance Board Counsel.

Michael J. Sughrue's resignation as counsel for the Boston Finance Commission came in for some criticism by Mayor Fitzgerald yesterday. The commission had announced for Sughrue that he resigned because the pressure of his private practice, "it seems strange," says the Mayor, "that Mr. Sughrue's resignation should come at this particular time when the commission is considering big things like the Shaw case. When all the petty matters are being considered by the commission Mr. Sughrue consents to serve, but when the matter of real importance arise Mr. Sughrue turns in his resignation."

PONY EXPRESS ARREST.

Joseph J. Cronin, a teamster, was arrested by the Revere police last night on a charge of transporting liquor illegally. Cronin is eighteen years old, living at No. 24 Hawthorne street, Chelsea, and employed as a teamster by Expressman D. F. Murphy. Fifteen cases of unlabelled liquor were seized on Cronin's wagon, and it is charged that he had no book showing the name of the consignee.

COPLEY SOCIETY TO GIVE ITALIAN FIESTA

Novel Entertainment Arranged for Evening of St. George's Day, April 26.

"An Evening in Venice," with Italian scenery, costumes, songs, dances and even Italian food, will be given the evening of St. George's Day, April 26, in Copley Hall by the Copley Society.

Every feature of the event will savor of Sunny Italy with one exception—the guests will be permitted to use the English language, although even this exception will be saved until the unmasking of the dancers.

The Copley Society long ago decided to present a novel entertainment this Spring, and Mrs. William O. Kimball of Charles River square was selected as the committee of one to carry out the plan.

Several years ago Mrs. Kimball witnessed in Venice one of the celebrations in observance of the deliverance from plague, one of the most stupendous events, and it prompted her to decide upon an Italian fiesta as the novel entertainment.

Copley and Allston halls will be transformed into Italian gardens. Mrs. Lilla Vles Wyman and Miss Virginia Tanner will give an Italian dance. Italian songs will be sung by the Harvard Club under the direction of Miss Nellie M. Thompson. Miss Verona Miller will contribute an Italian serenade, and two Italian lads from the Dearborn School will sing an Italian duet.

A Punch and Judy show in life form instead of the old original miniature will be another Italian feature of the fiesta. Those who will take part in this unique feature are Augusta Soule as Punch, Mrs. Windsor Soule as Judy, Master Harding as the doctor, Windsor Soule as the policeman, William Kimball as the clown and Miss Fanny Porter as the hangman.

Following is the entertainment committee: Mrs. William O. Kimball, chairman; Lyman Clark, stage manager; Miss N. D. Thompson, Frank Webber, E. W. Fisher, Miss Louise N. Silver, Miss Dora Harrison, Frank Sibley, Edwin von Mach, Mrs. D. S. J. Winter, and Mrs. Windsor Soule, Miss Fanny Porter, Miss Mildren Minnott.

INVESTIGATE WHOLE SYSTEM OF POSTAGE

WASHINGTON, April 8.—A plan is considered in the Senate to widen the scope of the investigation into second-class postal rates so that it will include the entire postoffice establishment. With in the next two or three weeks an amendment to the act appointing the committee will be offered in the Senate having this end in view.

Members of both Houses of Congress held that the present act is altogether too limited in its scope. They want the powers of the commission to extend that the whole postal service might be investigated and that the connection should determine whether or not the losses, in handling one class of mail, for instance, are in any way charged up to the profits of handling.

If the amendment goes through, as now considered, it will result in a complete overhauling of the postoffice department and may result in a readjustment of all rates for carrying the mails, including, of course, the second class rates, which are the immediate issue.

WOMEN AT MASS MEETING PROTEST AGAINST RUSSIA'S PERSECUTION OF THE JEWS

A MASS meeting attended by five hundred members of the Boston Section, Council of Jewish Women, was held at the Temple Adath Israel yesterday afternoon to protest against the persecution of the Jews in Russia. The principal speakers were: Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard, who presided; Dr. David Blaustein, superintendent of the New York School of Philanthropy; Rev. Thomas Van Ness, Miss Alice Rose Blackwell and Rabbi Charles Fleischer.

Dr. Eliot, who was introduced by Mrs. Julius Andrews, president of the council, said: "The object of this meeting is one which touches several American principals in this country we believe in religious toleration. There is no religious toleration for the Jew in Russia. We protest in the name of the people. This free land is violated in Russia with reference to the Jew. We believe that an American passport should protect every American in every country in the civilized world. Russia distinctly denies this freedom to a Jewish American citizen.

Common Racial Prejudices.

"There are grounds on which the American people are prepared to protest. There are many motives which determine the Russian attitude against the Jew. There are many economic relations which enter into the Russian policy. There enters the common racial prejudice. I must say that American people are not free from race prejudices, and we cannot find that ground for protesting against Russia, because they treat a man race with an extraordinary degree of prejudice.

"The first ground is that of religious intolerance in the Russian police department. On that ground we are insolvent. As to the remedy, some people propose a treaty. That is imperfect. It would not force a change by Russia. I recently heard a story from a Jew who lived in Russia twenty years ago. He was told by the police that he would have to leave the country in a week or join the Greek church. He left, and with his eight children came to this country. I asked him: 'Why did you join by the police?' He said, 'Race prejudice, dislike of the Jew, their economic fear of the Jew, their education, which Russia feared in time would affect the government.'

"The overcoming of these fears among the people of Russia is to be the work of time and patience.

Czar's Restrictive Laws.

Dr. Eliot then presented Dr. David Blaustein, Superintendent of the New York School of Philanthropy, who discussed in detail the present status of the Jew in Russia.

"There are 5,000,000 Jews in Russia," said Dr. Blaustein. "The Kasirrites, a sect of Jews who do not follow the tenets of the Talmud, enjoy full rights. Those who do not belong to the Greek Orthodox Church are subject to special restrictive laws.

"The part of the Russian code of laws that deals with the rights of the people always contains the well-known phrase, 'except the Jews;' that is, whenever a so-called concession is made by the government to the people it is emphasized that that concession does not apply to the Jews. All told, there are about 1,000 laws appertaining to the Jews in Russia. None of the laws, however, deals with their rights, but always with their duties and with the rights denied to them; in other words, all the laws appertaining to the Jews are prohibitory—such as, sometimes in which they may not engage, parts of Russia in which they may not reside, offices they may not hold, schools they may not attend, etc.

"The government deals with the Jews as a class, and the individual at once loses the rights of the class. The Russian Hebrew soul requires a license for the keeping of a saloon. In the case of the petty officials, who is the interpreter of the Russian law, teaching Hebrew without a license and keeping a saloon without a license are crimes of equal degree."

Power of Public Opinion.

In his address Rev. Thomas Van Ness, pastor of the Second Church, Unitarian, said in part:

"As soon as one nation shows superiority to another nation there never seems to be lacking those who are striving to aid the Jews in their plight. It is the lower classes who should be accused of the great lack of justice in Russia. Would it be any good to abolish our treaty with Russia? No. It would do harm rather than good. But must we stand and see people grind down? We can do something.

"Public opinion is the thing that can be used to prevent the great atrocities that have been going on in Russia for centuries. Such meetings as this one held in every city in England and Latin countries are going to bring relief to the oppressed Jews. The rulers of the people fear the voice of God, and I believe this is the voice which will give victory in the end."

Blames Czar for Massacres.

After Stone Blackwell, the editor of the Woman's Journal and well-known suffragist, said: "Where shall we place the responsibility for all the atrocities in Russia which have made our hearts bleed in recent years? The Czar alone is to blame. The massacres were not sporadic outbursts by the common classes. Did not the police look on and encourage the massacres? Were not many of the leaders of the massacres promoted for their part in the attack? Suppose President Taft should encourage and promote all leaders of lynchings in the South, what would happen?

"We should first end our extradition treaty with Russia and then we should breach off all treaty relations with her and make a new treaty if it is thought best that we should have any at all.

"The thing to do is to place the facts before the people. We should also drive out all race prejudices from our own minds and homes. Why, here in Boston there is too much race prejudice against the Jews, the colored people and the Chinese race. Let us not overlook the prejudices in our own country."

Whole Town Plastered With Toasts When News of Marriage Leaks Out.

All Swampscott was surprised yesterday to see the bride, wedding garments and congratulatory messages last night, when it became known that Chief George F. "Yes, I am married," the chief said that with a blush, at his home in Swampscott when a Sunday AMERICAN reporter called to look into the conflagration of hearts.

"I'm a married man," the chief continued, "but I don't want the town to josh me, so I won't tell any more for a few days."

When the Swampscott fire fighters heard that the news of the chief's elopement had leaked out a big sign appeared on the big swinging door of the central fire station. It read: "Here's good luck to the bride."

Another flaring sign on a nearby tree read:

"There's cheer to our chief. He's fooled up this time, but get ready for the big celebration next week."

In the Town Hall a "social" a warrant was the order of the evening, so to the manner to defray the wedding expenses of the chief, lodged "swelling."

"We were married in Exeter, Friday, the chief admitted at his home in No. 10 Maple avenue, Swampscott, last night. "We've just been three days."

It had been known for some time that the chief, who is fifty-four, and a Miss Mary of Boston were engaged.

NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATE, Boldest in History of New England, Breaks Platform

Pledges, Does the Bidding of the Interests, and, to Show Its Defiance of the Progressive Governor, Holds Merry Carnival, with Dancing Girls, While Bass Talks of Going to the People

ALVIN B. CROSS · REGINALD C. STEVENSON · HAVEN DOE · CLARENCE H. PAUL · ROBERT LEGGETT · JONATHAN M. CHENEY · [illegible]

SEVEN LEADING REACTIONARIES IN THE NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATE

Not Bad Men as Men Go, They Have Broken Their Promises to Support the Income Tax Amendment and Have Repudiated Platform Pledges. Cross [illegible] of Somersworth Works for the Boston & Maine. Paul of Portsmouth Is Employed by the Frank Jones Brewing Company. Leggett Is a Supervisor [illegible] land Is a Physician. Cross of Colebrook Is a Farmer.

Angered by Thick-Skulled and Treacherous Senators, the People of New Hampshire Talk of Doing Their Own Law-Making. Boldness of a "Special Interest" Senate Gives a Big Boom to Initiative and Referendum

FIVE DEMOCRATS AND ELEVEN REPUBLICANS IN THE NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATE HAVE AMONG THEM KILLED EVERY "PLATFORM" BILL SAVE ONE, NULLIFIED THE SPLENDID WORK OF A HOUSE OF 400, AND THWARTED THE PEOPLE'S WILL. THEY HAVE KILLED THE INCOME TAX AMENDMENT, THE ELECTION OF UNITED STATES SENATORS BY THE PEOPLE, AND OTHER POPULAR MEASURES.

BUT THEIR SIDE DOOR WAS OPEN TO COUNSEL FOR THE BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD, WHO WAS ALLOWED TO PUT A "RIDER" ON THE PUBLIC UTILITIES BILL WHICH MIGHT KILL IT, IN A CONFERENCE BETWEEN THE BRANCHES, UNLESS THE RAILROAD HAD ITS OWN WAY IN THE RATES FIGHT.

NOT AN OUTFIT OF CROOKS, THESE NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE SENATORS, BUT THE PUPPETS OF THE CORPORATIONS AND THE SPECIAL INTERESTS. TIME FOR NEW HAMPSHIRE TO STOP SENDING ERRAND BOYS TO HER SENATE. TIME, TOO, TO BE THINKING ABOUT THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION AND ITS GREAT OPPORTUNITY.

WHY NOT LAWMAKING DIRECT, IF YOUR LAWMAKERS DECEIVE AS THESE HAVE DONE?

SIXTEEN of New Hampshire's twenty-four State Senators have engaged in a conspiracy to give the people of the Granite State the initiative and referendum. The Senators do not know it. They do not mean it.

The same sixteen Senators—or the corporations and the special interests that pull the string and make them say 'uncle'—are in the midst of a conspiracy to re-elect Governor Robert Perkins Bass of Peterborough, Republican Progressive. They do not know this, do not mean it, will not admit it.

The New Hampshire State Senate is the "rawest" organization of its kind that has been assembled for many years. It is obtuse, rather than crooked. It has been led around by the nose by attorneys for the special interests. It has danced at their bidding. It imagines that the people do not know, or do not care. When the storm breaks, as it will break before many days, these New Hampshire Senators will wonder what all the fuss is about.

Men who are the instrumentalities through which any great State comes into the initiative and referendum ought to be long remembered, and this is as good place as any to call the roll of the sixteen State Senators of New Hampshire whose treachery and stubbornness—if there is no other word for it—have aroused the people of the State and attracted the attention of the country. Here they are:

AHERN.	A. CROSS.	HOSFORD.	PENDER.
BEAN.	J. CROSS.	JEWELL.	ROGERS.
CHAPMAN.	DOE.	LEGGETT.	STEVENSON.
CHENEY.	GUPTILL.	PAUL.	SWART.

Eleven of these statesmen are Republicans. Five of these patriots are Democrats. In the Senate gallery, without a book in your hand, you could never tell the difference! In bidding defiance to the platform pledges of both parties they have acted as one man.

Betrayal of the Income Tax Plank.

Take the Democrats first. Their platform in New Hampshire last Fall advocated the adoption of the Federal income tax amendment. Ahern, Doe, Guptill, Jewell and Paul voted against it.

Guptill, a physician of Raymond, in Rockingham County, further distinguished himself three weeks later by voting against the election of United States Senators by direct vote. So did Jewell of Dover, general agent of an insurance company. In Senator Jewell's behalf it can be urged that he is eighty years old.

The first test of these Senators came in the vote on the income tax amendment. The Democrats had had it in their platform. The Republican platform had contained this pledge: "We favor the ratification by the Legislature of the proposed constitutional amendment authorizing Congress to impose a tax upon incomes."

When the roll was called the five progressive Republicans were found standing by the platform pledge, while five of the eight Democrats—Ahern, Doe, Guptill, Jewell and Paul—lined up with the Republican old guard, the railroads, the banks, the insurance companies and the rest, in opposition.

Three Democrats, Senators Gerry of Madison, Senator Lucier

NEW HAMPSHIRE SENATE REPRESENTS DOLLARS, NOT MEN

These New Hampshire Senators actually represent dollars, not men. Their districts are not based upon population, but on taxable wealth. From Manchester, for instance, come three Senators, two of them picked by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, and the third, a Democrat, like these two, has gone back on his party's pledges.

A constitutional convention is coming along. The treachery of the Senate of 1911 will create more interest in the constitution of the State than has ever been shown. It will be up to Mr. Little Fellow, Mr. Small Business Man, Mr. Small Shipper, and Mr. Ultimate Consumer to take an interest in the constitutional convention and to pick his delegates as carefully as he has picked his Representatives. He should pick men close to the people. He should not pick men close to the corporations and the special interests.

of Nashua and Senator Prentiss of Walpole, kept the faith. They have kept it ever since.

What makes the treachery of the Senate all the greater, is the fact that every member of the Senate was a member last Fall of the State conventions which built the platforms!

From the same group of Republicans came the voting strength which made it possible for the Boston & Maine Railroad to put a rider on the public utilities bill, "settling" the railroad rate controversy, a matter that had been fought for three months by a special committee of the House.

And the sad part about it is that the Democrats have had their first opportunity, in at least a generation, to do things for the plain people of New Hampshire. Eight Democrats were elected to the Senate. Of their number, [illegible] progressives five were of the Progressive type.

Five Republicans Made Good.

These five Republican Progressives, Senator Bontwell of Hookanton, Senator Rich of Jaffrey, Senator Hayden of Hollis, Senator Merrill of Claremont and Senator Gordon of Keene have voted [illegible] possible occasion to support the Governor and make good the Republican platform.

Eight Democrats and five Republican Progressives meant a majority of one in the New Hampshire Senate. The politicians rubbed his hands. "At last," he said. It was too good to be true.

Not one of these eleven Republicans and five Democrats can plead, a year from next Fall—if so be it he dares to come before the people again—that he did not know what was in the platform or that he was "not bound by it." Thanks to the Direct Primary bill of 1909, every nominee for the Legislature was [illegible] to his party's State Convention. All took part in the party's pledges to the people.

On the Republican end, the people were promised a Public Utilities bill. The House passed it. It went to the Senate. It is now in serious danger. When the Senate Judiciary Committee had held this bill for three weeks, there appeared before the committee one day, by arrangement with Judge Judson Hall of West Lebanon, general solicitor of the Boston & Maine,

Mr. Rich the Hypnotist.

Mr. Rich made a few passes in the air with his hands, hypnotized a majority of the committee and passed "Section 22" on the Public Utilities bill, a section which [illegible] rate fight by giving illegal rates for the next two years, while the Public Utilities Board is investigating.

THERE WERE FOUR GIRLIES, AND THIRTEEN SENATORS, SO THE NIGHT WAS A MERRY ONE

The Girlies Came from Boston, and They Danced in the "Bridal Suite" of the Hotel Rockingham in Portsmouth for Members of the New Hampshire Upper House Prominent in the Defeat of the People's Bills

A Naughty, Naughty Evening, Which, Piled Upon the Already Disheartening Record of the Senate, Has Made the Honest Voters of the Good Old Granite State Not Only Angry but Ashamed

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 8.—The [illegible] thought in this city that a senatorial banquet, at which young women dancers were the only entertainers and prominent railroad lobbyists appeared among the invited guests, has a lot to do with the yarns about an honorable peace that are coming out of Concord under railroad auspices.

The banquet was held in this city last Monday night. It was ostensibly given by the Senate Club of 1911, "a majority of the State Senate." Among the guests were John W. Kelley, legislative attorney for the Boston & Maine Railroad, and Merrill Shurtleff of Lancaster, counsel at the State House for the Maine Central, the Grand Trunk, the International Paper Company, the Pullman Company, the Coos Telephone Company and other big interests.

BANQUET A SLAM AT GOVERNOR BASS.

As if to show defiance of Governor Bass, the banquet was held immediately following the announcement that the Governor would take a flight to the people [illegible] consent.

The dinner was held in the [illegible] Rockingham, one of the finest hostelries in New England. The Rockingham is [illegible] in Senate [illegible] out for year. It is regarded here as quite unlikely that such an event would take place at the hotel in the Summer season.

A $2 dinner was served to the senatorial party in the [illegible] dining room, originally part of the mansion of Governor John Langdon. The feature of the menu was lobster, now so scarce as to be almost priceless.

Following the banquet everybody adjourned to the finest rooms in the hotel, known as the "bridal suite." The master of ceremonies was Senator Clarence Paul, master mechanic of the Frank Jones Brewing Company. Paul is one of the five Democrats who voted against the income tax amendment. He also voted against giving the voters of New Hampshire the right to instruct their legislators as to the choice of United States Senators.

$50 Apiece for the Girls.

Many of the diners, it is said, were quite unprepared for the entertainment that was spread on them. The performers were Marie Ford, Alice Montague, Alice La Farge and Maude Stover. They came several days [illegible] guests from [illegible] South [illegible] of whom will say much about it [illegible]

[illegible] Lobster [illegible] and beans. The girls had a delightful time. It is currently reported that they got $50 apiece.

The fun was fast and furious until 5 o'clock in the morning. Until that time the Rockingham's bell hop was kept busy. Those at the Senators who sat with the dancers of Miss Ford, Montague, La Farge and Stover.

SENATOR ALVIN B. CROSS of Concord, New Hampshire, representative of New York bankers and dealers in investment securities.

SENATOR JONATHAN M. CHENEY of Ashland, physician and surgeon.

SENATOR HAVEN DOE of Somersworth, agent of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

SENATOR JOHN H. CROSS of Colebrook, agriculturalist.

SENATOR CHARLES H. BEAN of Franklin, moving pictures manager.

SENATOR ROBERT LEGGETT, Amoskeag superintendent.

SENATOR REGINALD C. STEVENSON of Exeter, automobilist.

SENATOR CHARLES E. CHAPMAN of Manchester, Amoskeag overseer.

SENATOR JOHN PENDER, insurance man.

SENATOR CLARENCE H. PAUL, Jones Brewing Company.

SENATOR GEORGE HERBERT GUPTILL of Raymond, physician.

SENATOR JAMES O. GERRY of Madison, Lumberman.

SENATOR JOHN W. PRENTISS of Walpole, breeder.

[illegible] Senator Albert S. Wetherell of Exeter, a member of the executive board of the Republican State Committee, was among the guests, together with prominent county and federal office holders. While it was in progress the banquet of the Senate Club was a great success.

It was said here today that before noon [illegible] following day the Governor had been [illegible] about the Jollification and had received a report in detail of such comment as was made on his political program.

them, guarantees the railroad the right of appeal, and takes away from the shipper the right to recover if he has been overcharged.

Edgar Judson Rich's amendments to the Public Utilities bill were jammed through the Senate without being read. Then the bill was sent to the [illegible] Finance Committee.

Nobody knows what is in the mind of a railroad attorney [illegible] pretty to accuse them of [illegible] unfair methods, but [illegible] Senate the Boston & Maine [illegible] is in the house of its [illegible] its tools and puppets [illegible] Utilities bill with the "rider" [illegible] settling the rate controversy [illegible] Boston & Maine wants it [illegible] a mighty fine barricade against [illegible] Railroad Rate bill sent just now to the Senate from the House.

The result seems bound to be a Committee of Conference. The House will naturally vote to take the "rider" from the Public Utilities bill. The Senate will refuse. [illegible] Senate will non-concur in on the House Railroad Rate bill. The House will [illegible].

See the [illegible] A Committee of Conference [illegible] of House members and Senate [illegible]. The men from the House will represent the sentiment of the House. [illegible] from the Senate will represent the sentiment of the Boston & Maine.

[illegible] aimed at will be trade, barter, compromise, agreement [illegible] what [illegible]. The Legislature will be entering upon its final days. The railroad press [illegible] demanding action. There will be sneers and gibes for the Progressives. [illegible] well be that the price [illegible] Senate [illegible] Boston & Maine for the passage of a Public Utilities [illegible] will be a jug handled settlement of [illegible] controversy.

The [illegible] also [illegible] the people a [illegible] tax commission, to [illegible] House [illegible] the bill [illegible] Senate [illegible] the tax [illegible] justices of the Supreme [illegible] for [illegible] that the Senate [illegible] tax commission [illegible] phrase.

One Pledge Is Kept.

Up to this [illegible] only one of the platform pledges [illegible] the passage of a "corrupt practices act" [illegible] to do away with [illegible] purchase of votes at elections.

The promised election of delegates to national conventions [illegible] direct primary, an employers' liability act [illegible] these are some of the [illegible] by the wayside. The House has done its full duty by all.

Only a day or two ago a bill came to the Senate from the House dealing with the Attorney General, and drawn along lines indicated by Governor Bass in his inaugural address. The Governor had recommended that the Attorney General be asked to give his services "exclusively" to the State, that his salary be increased to make up for the sacrifice, and that he be required to remain in Concord while the Legislature is in session.

The Senate promptly cut the vitals out of this [illegible] leaving the office of the Attorney [illegible] right where it is today.

These [illegible] give you some idea of what [illegible] is up against, what the pro[illegible] both parties are up against [illegible] people of New Hampshire are up against. [illegible] further information [illegible] to spend a day in Concord. You ought to [illegible] lobbyists come and go in Senate [illegible]. You ought to hear the gossip [illegible] and the airy persiflage [illegible].

[illegible] has the treacherous and reactionary Senate of New Hampshire come [illegible] with the [illegible] was on the election of United States Senators by direct popular vote [illegible] "one near." They did [illegible].

The New Hampshire House of Representatives and New Hampshire one of the very best in the United States [illegible] has passed a resolution calling upon Congress to [illegible] constitutional convention for the purpose of proposing an amendment authorizing the States to provide for the election of Senators by direct popular vote.

Even on this popular measure the Democrats did not vote together, although there are only eight of them. Once more [illegible] Guptill of Raymond and the [illegible] Jewell of Dover flock with the Republican old guard. The vote was:

Yes: Ahern, Doe, Geary, Lucier, Paul and Prentiss, Democrats, and Bean, Boutwell, Goodnow, Hayden, Merrill and Rich, Republicans, 12.

No: A. Cross, J. Cross, Chapman, Cheney, Hosford, Leggett, Pender, Rogers and Stevenson, Republicans, and Guptill and Jewell, Democrats, 11.

Whereupon the president of the Senate, William [illegible] Swart of Nashua, Republican, treasurer of the Roby & Swart Manufacturing Company, had the clerk of the Senate call the name of "Senator Swart." Swart voted "no," establishing a tie. This killed the resolution.

The House tried again with the direct election of United States Senators, just as it tried twice with [illegible]. The Senate remained steadfast, defeating the [illegible] the great mass of the people and encouraging those thoughtful [illegible] who declared that there is nothing [illegible].

The second suggestion of the House was [illegible] of the Oregon plan, instructing State Senators and Representatives as to the election of United States Senators. This time the vote was 10 to 12. President Swart was not recorded. Guptill of Raymond did not vote. Senators Doe of [illegible] and Paul of Portsmouth, Democrats, in favor on March 29 of an amendment to the constitution of the United States for the election of United States Senators by a direct popular vote, on the fourth day of April voted against a bill permitting the people of New Hampshire to let their representatives at Concord know whom they should like to send to the Senate at Washington!

DANCER AND HOTEL WHERE DINNER WAS HELD

ALICE MONTAGUE

People Are Waking Up.

You do not need to know much more [illegible]. You may want to know [illegible] of New Hampshire propose to do about it. They have not made [illegible]. Some of them are here [illegible] first time a glimpse at the Senate record. There is, however, some talk of a Direct Legislation League. There is also some talk of a great newspaper having the State for its field and [illegible] the side of the people as against [illegible] special interest rule [illegible].

[illegible] personally carry the [illegible] people. There is no [illegible] although the [illegible] Sunday was to some [illegible] the people, and telling [illegible] has blocked almost [illegible] with them, the [illegible] Governor [illegible] be keeping [illegible] Full the Re[illegible] made this [illegible].

I will do everything in my power to [illegible]. If [illegible] I gave you my word, [illegible] I shall report [illegible] and whose it was [illegible] ready as is to [illegible].

[illegible] platform promises have not been [illegible]. The fault is in the [illegible]. The fault is the fault of Senators [illegible].

Not even the [illegible] over railroad rates [illegible] the people of New [illegible] of Democrats [illegible] parties [illegible] has been [illegible] question [illegible] on the [illegible] corporation against the people.

Former Judge James W. Remick, Mr. Edward C. Niles, Mr. [illegible] the first three [illegible] Progressive Republicans and the [illegible] Senate Committee on [illegible] when they [illegible] Judson Rich [illegible] amendment to the Public Utilities bill.

There had been no notice of the hearing to Mr. Rich. Nobody on the other side had been given a hint of what was coming. [illegible] Judge Remick ran [illegible] to the [illegible] Public Utilities Board, and then asked the privilege of saying in a few words in opposition.

Rebuked by Judge Remick.

Mr. Rich—Rich of the Boston & Maine—took all the time that noon that the Senate Judiciary could give, and Judge Remick was asked to come in at the close of the afternoon session. He did. He said then that [illegible] the House had been at work [illegible] the rates problem for three [illegible] and was about to report, it was [illegible] that [illegible] Senate [illegible] special committee, to take the rates controversy out of the hands of the House committee and, worst [illegible] dispose of it by adding a new section to the public utilities act.

Senators Charles H. Hosford of Monroe, Senator John Pender of Portsmouth, Senator Alvin J. Lucier of Nashua, Senator Robert J. Merrill of Claremont and Senator John Cross of Colebrook reported 3 to 2 in favor of amending the [illegible] utilities act by settling the rates controversy before the rates committee could report. Lucier, the only Democrat on the committee, and Merrill, Progressive Republican, were outvoted. The Senate accepted the amendment.

Does Bidding of the Interests While Bass Talks of Going to the People.

Because the Public Utilities bill provides for the salaries of the proposed commissioners it had yet to go to the Senate Committee on Finance of Ways and Means. It was before this committee that the rates fight of the past week took place.

On the Senate Finance Committee there [illegible] up the head of [illegible] Chairman Stevenson. They went to [illegible] C. Stevenson [illegible] Niles and other Progressives, asking for a [illegible] hearing on the Rich (Boston & Maine) amendment.

"Well," said Stevenson of Exeter, "we'll give you a hearing, but it will only be wasting your time!"

When the public hearing came off Wednesday night and Colonel Stevenson faced a gathering of two hundred advocates of fair play, he explained that what he meant by "wasting your time" was that the Finance Committee could properly consider only the appropriation features of the Public Utilities act, could not go into the merits of section 22, settling the rate question the way Mr. Mellen wishes to settle it.

Former Judge Remick, Mr. Niles, Mr. Carr and others took issue with young Colonel Stevenson, told him it was not only the privilege but the duty of every legislative committee to go to the very [illegible] of every measure referred to it, and their policy [illegible] Stevenson and his associates what they thought and what the State would think, of the action of the Senate in putting a "rider" on the Public Utilities bill calculated to endanger its final passage.

John W. Kelley of Portsmouth, of counsel for the Boston & Maine [illegible] Mr. Rich had been [illegible] the Senate Judiciary Committee [illegible] was feared by the railroad that the [illegible] House Committee on [illegible] to make any report at all.

Whereupon Representative [illegible] of Landaff, a member of [illegible] said that this wasn't so, and [illegible] Mr. Kelley knew it wasn't so. (Sensation!)

Kelley's performance [illegible] was the finest piece of magic Concord has ever seen. Sometimes there were ten alert minds after him at once. Occasionally [illegible] cornered. You were quite [illegible] patrol wagon, or [illegible] road lawyer was apparently stiff and cold. And then!

And then John W. Kelley might have been seen walking [illegible] and in good [illegible] the [illegible] of Mr. Kelley [illegible] his coat in the [illegible] always [illegible] escaped. Mr. Kelley was [illegible] amusing and there was [illegible] else in town that night except the [illegible].

Plain Talk from Remick.

He took issue with Judge Remick because the judge referred to the Boston & Maine as a "lawbreaker." There was a roar of delight in the big committee room when Judge Remick came back with: "Well, if your corporation is not a lawbreaker, what are you here for? What is this all about?"

Six months ago the Boston & Maine Railroad [illegible] proclaiming that it was "out of politics." It was. In the face of its vigorous opposition, Robert Perkins Bass had been nominated for Governor in the [illegible] primaries. Between [illegible] Democrat, and Robert P. [illegible] Republican, the [illegible] and the Boston & Maine was out of politics [illegible].

Shortly came the decision of the Supreme Court of New Hampshire that the contracts of 1883 and 1889, not to raise the rates of fare and freight on the consolidated lines, were binding, and the Boston & Maine was back in Concord saying that it was "out of politics if it got fair play." Some said that this was a high moral stand. They forgot that the Boston & Maine was out of politics because it had been kicked out.

It turned out that fair play, from the Boston & Maine point of view, [illegible] that the "rates" laws of '83 and '89 should be repealed. The [illegible] petition asking for repeal [illegible] advised the Legislature to stand firm. "The statutes authorizing the consolidation," the Governor said in his inaugural, "gave to the State a [illegible] power of control over rates that should not be surrendered. As long as they are on the statute books it should [illegible]."

After some six weeks the railroad abandoned its petition for a repeal and got down to brass tacks. The Public Service Commission, trying to get an [illegible] and [illegible] up a solution which, it was [illegible] would [illegible] protect the State and the shipper.

The plan agreed upon was to continue the present illegal rates for two years pending an investigation by the Public Utilities Board as to their reasonableness. So far as these rates are found reasonable, they shall stand. If the Commission finds them unreasonable, the shippers are to have their money back.

It was all plain sailing until President Mellen came up in person to be heard by the Rates Committee in private and to say an ugly "No." Mellen wouldn't stand for the "recovery" provision. Moreover, he wanted the right of appeal. Furthermore he said—and New Hampshire heard and winced—that the man or men who compelled him to go back to "legal" rates would "never see daylight again."

Meaning Behind the Threat.

What Mr. Mellen may have meant by this was that he would pass the buck to the great manufacturing enterprises whose freight shipments are made on "commodity" rates and leave it to the manufacturers to kill off troublesome legislators and executives. The rates on commodities have been materially lowered. The rates that have been jumped are the "class" rates [illegible] on tea and sugar and [illegible] and the other things the grocer sells the humble citizen. The manufacturers have had all the best of it. They came in swarms to tell the committee so. When they couldn't come they wrote.

[illegible] it was the Little Fellow who got it in the neck.

Ever since Rich's bold visit to the Senate Judiciary Committee, and the prompt cry of "Police" from the progressive leaders—Remick, Niles and the rest—the State has been up in arms. This explains why [illegible] in the papers Friday morning that [illegible] and said: "Don't shoot! We [illegible] down!"

Do they really intend to come down? Well, Mr. New Hampshire Progressive, maybe they do, but don't throw your gun away, and be sure to keep your powder dry.

Don't Forget the "Rider."

It is true that the House, 229 to 27, has passed the Railroad Rate bill agreed upon by the special committee on rates.

It is also true that, because of "something in the air," this action by the House has been proclaimed as the "beginning of the end."

Please, please, do not forget the "rider" placed on the Public Utilities bill in the Senate at the request of E. J. Rich of the Boston & Maine.

Do not forget that the House bill settles the rate dispute one way, the Governor's way, the special committee's way, while the Senate amendment settles it another way, Mr. Mellen's way.

Both these bills are likely to land, finally, in a committee of conference between the two branches.

What then?

Trade, barter, compromise, agreement,—what you will.

Legislators are anxious to get home. They get only $200 for the session, already the longest for years. With the railroad talking of "being good" a situation has arisen demanding the closest attention by everybody in the State.

The Lesson of 1911.

Out of the experiences of 1911 the people of New Hampshire are not unlikely to take home a lesson. They are not unlikely hereafter to ask candidates for the State Senate to say, definitely and explicitly, where they stand on the great issues. It certainly is hard to see popular [illegible] passed, almost unanimously, by a great House of nearly 400 members, and hear of their death in a little chamber where 24 men have the last word.

These New Hampshire Senators actually represent dollars, not men. Their districts are not based upon population, but on taxable wealth. From Manchester, for instance, come three Senators, two of them picked by the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company and the third a Democrat who [illegible] gone back on his party's pledges.

In the district represented by one of these Senators [illegible] 10,150 people [illegible] 17,1[illegible] the Democrat, 41,908 people.

A Constitutional convention is coming along. The members of the Senate of [illegible] will be [illegible] the Convention of [illegible] has ever been [illegible]. It will be up to Mr. Little Fellow, Mr. Small Business Man, Mr. Small Shipper and Mr. [illegible] to take an interest in the Constitutional convention and to pick its delegates as carefully as he has picked his Representatives. He should pick men close to the people; he should not pick men who are close to the corporations and the special interests.

Time to Make a Change.

The New Hampshire Senate of 1911 has shown the need and the great value of the initiative and the referendum. If elected representatives deceive the people, as sixteen Senators of New Hampshire deceived the people when they stood for office on [illegible] that they helped to build, only to go back on their solemn pledges when attorneys for the special interests began to talk softly to them, it is time for a deceived electorate to begin thinking about making its own laws and keeping a check on its lawmakers.

Twaddle about representative government will not [illegible] longer deceive a people who have been [illegible] as the people of New Hampshire have been buncoed by the Senate of 1911.

Mayor-Elect Harrison's Tribute to Mr. Hearst and His Papers

"While I feel that this is a personal victory and a gratifying vindication, in view of the outrageous attacks that were made upon me by the newspaper advocates of special privileges, still I realize that the victory was made possible and achieved through the aid and encouragement given to me by William Randolph Hearst, A. M. Lawrence and the two Hearst newspapers—the Chicago Examiner and the Chicago American.

"Without Mr. Hearst and his powerful exposition of the progressive, honest and efficient policies for which I stood THE VICTORY WOULD HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE.

"I am grateful to all my friends for their support and their good wishes. BUT THE SUPPORT THAT WAS ABSOLUTELY INVALUABLE in this successful campaign for the rights of the people as against the privilege-seeking interests was the support of Mr. Hearst, who once more proved how intense is his interest in the public welfare by coming from New York and, with his greatest writers and artists, taking personal charge of the campaign of his two Chicago daily newspapers in my behalf."

CHICAGO VICTORY NATIONAL SLOGAN

CHICAGO, April 8.—Carter H. Harrison's election as Mayor of Chicago is of greater significance, politically, than any event since the election of a Democratic Congress last fall. It marks the return to the Democratic [illegible] of the second city of the nation.

That was not the whole meaning of Mr. Harrison's election, however. The success of the Democratic ticket in Chicago was significant of a new regime in national Democratic affairs as well as in the local government of Chicago.

No matters of national policy were directly involved in the Chicago election. To the ordinary observer it would seem that the issues were [illegible] purely local. But underlying those local issues were principles which, in all human probability, will be prominent in the next national campaign.

Mr. Harrison made his campaign upon a platform definitely pledging himself to the regulation of the public utility corporations. His attitude toward all such corporations was symbolized by his pledge to reduce the gas rate of Chicago to seventy cents per thousand feet, if such a rate is shown to be fair.

In other words, the Harrison campaign was one to remove the sign of the public utility concerns from over the door of the City Hall. It had been there for the four years of the Busse regime, and the people were tired of looking at it. They said so by giving Mr. Harrison the largest vote Chicago has ever cast for a candidate for Mayor.

Now, the issue in the national campaign next year is, as those versed in politics now see it, identical with that made by Mr. Harrison.

The coming campaign is to be one to remove the sign of the big industrial and transportation concerns from over the door of the Capitol at Washington. The people have grown tired of looking at that sign also. They want it turned down.

In Chicago the corporation interests had for long been getting all the best of affairs. The gas company, the electric light, street railway and telephone companies had been able to ask just about what they pleased and to get what they asked for. So, also, in Washington have the industrial and transportation companies been getting the best of it.

GIANT AIRSHIP WILL SAIL FROM LONDON TO NEW YORK

Germany Constructing Passenger Balloon, Eight Times Larger Than Zeppelin.

By COUNT VON ELPHBERG.
Special Cable to Sunday American.

BERLIN, April 8.—Germany intends to lead the world in the construction of huge dirrigibles, and to exploit the navigation of the air on an unprecedented scale.

Two companies have already been formed for this purpose. One with a capital of ten million dollars, has decided to adopt the plans of Engineer Boerner for a monster airship with a capacity of 120,000 cubic metres. The largest existing Zeppelin has a capacity of 15,000 cubic metres, so the new vessel will be eight times larger than Count Zeppelin's latest creation. The Boerner airship will be built on the rigid system and the balloon will be divided into thirty-eight air-tight compartments to increase its buoyancy and insure safety.

Its extreme length will be 775 feet and its breadth 130 feet. The vessel will be driven by thirty motors, each developing a hundred horsepower. Its ascent will be assisted by numerous horizontal screws, while other propellers will be provided for driving the vessel ahead when in mid air. There will be six officers and a crew of ninety-four men, of which number eighty four will be chauffeurs tending the motors.

Can Carry 200 Passengers.

The airship will be capable of carrying 200 passengers, besides the crew. Elaborate arrangements will be made for their comfort, including cabins with sofas, convertible into berths at night time, a spacious dining saloon, and with promenade decks approximately 1 200 feet long with [illegible]. Every [illegible] passengers and crew will be provided with parachutes in event of disaster.

The vessel will be equipped with wireless and will carry a portable motor boat packed in sections so as to be hastily assembled in case of need. The cost of the vessel is estimated at $800,000.

According to the organizers' plans the first vessel constructed will be employed in passenger traffic between New York and London.

Owing to the great quantity of baggage expected to be carried on such voyages the number of passengers will be limited to 50. The fare will be $200 each.

A Three Days' Journey.

Boerner says that, in view of the large number of powerful motors, the transit from New York to London will be accomplished in three days. At the expiration of each voyage he will allow two days' rest for the officers and crew and for any necessary repairs, so that each airship will be able to make six transatlantic trips per month.

The promoters of the new company are so convinced that the new means of conveyance will be so popular that each vessel will carry its full complement of passengers on each trip. On this basis they calculate they have excellent prospects of earning big dividends.

Other airships will be employed on round trips starting from London and going via Paris and Vienna to Berlin and back to Paris and London. The fare for this will be $80.

Two other German engineers, Wetzel, and Schleibinger of Stuttgart, are constructing another aerial monster also of the rigid type, with a capacity of 100,000 cubic metres. This will be equipped with twenty motors, developing an aggregate of 2,400 horsepower, whereby it is calculated that a speed of forty five to fifty miles an hour will be attained.

Miss Olga Steel, a young American pianist from Los Angeles whose sensational appearance in Berlin last year has since been a matter of discussion in the musical world, has just successfully finished a remarkable orchestra debut, illustrating the entire history of music, playing in three evenings nine of the greatest piano concertos selected from the works of Schumann, Chopin, Liszt, Beethoven, Scharwenka, Grieg, Brahms, Mozart, and Tschaikowsky.

The leading critics of Berlin expressed astonishment at this gigantic undertaking and all comment on her remarkable ability.

Festivity Order for Mrs. Ward

Mrs. Ogden Reid to Be Presented

MRS JOHN WARD

MRS OGDEN REID

By CHESTER T. OVERTON.
Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, April 8. Fresh honors have fallen to that rising young member of the Earl of Dudley's family, the Hon. John Herbert Ward, who married Miss Jean Reid. He was Equerry in Ordinary to King Edward and has been made extra Equerry to King George, and now as Equerry to Queen Alexandra he has accompanied that Royal Lady on her trip to the Mediterranean.

The American Ambassador's son, Ogden Reid, who married Miss Rogers, his mother's secretary and companion, is expected in London at the beginning of next month with his bride, who will be presented to the King and Queen at one of the May courts. The English attitude toward the young couple is interesting as despite certain jealousies, a secretary is regarded as a thoroughly gentle occupation here.

The fact that Queen Alexandra postponed her departure for her yachting trip in the Mediterranean because she had lost Cæsar, the late King Edward's wire-haired terrier, has been already told in a previous cable, but some most interesting details have not been related.

Alexandra adores this world renowned dog, but her affection has not been returned. Cæsar has been thoroughly bored at Sandringham and has raised his little master terribly. He is a haughty dog and never wags his tail when stroked and he is a man's dog. The only person he ever seriously cared for was Wrightson Edwards, second valet, and Wrightson is no longer in the Royal household. So when Alexandra came to town to do a little shopping, Cæsar strolled past the sentries at Marlborough House and tried to find his way to Buckingham Palace.

For two days he wandered in the streets of London, picking up what he could to eat. On the night of the second day Cæsar, with rare intelligence, made his way toward Scotland Yard where a detective examined his collar on which was written, "I am Cæsar, the King's dog." Queen Alexandra, who was inconsolable, had of course wired to Scotland so the detective took the dog at once to Marlborough House.

Queen Alexandra, who had declined to leave London until the dog was found, presented the detective with $20 and a beautiful scarfpin. The railroad authorities are, however, inclined to curse the memory of Cæsar, as the gorgeous royal train, which was ready, had to be shunted to a siding, traffic was completely disorganized and the Dover authorities spent the day deciphering contradictory telegrams, but Cæsar remains as cold and aloof as ever.

Mrs. Ward, who has been occupying the house of her brother-in-law, the Earl of Dudley, in Carlton House Terrace has just acquired for the season the fine old house in St. James Square, owned by the Marquis of Bristol. In this same square, which is gradually being invaded by clubs, banks and insurance offices, are the town residences of the Duke of Norfolk, the Bishop of London, Marquis of Anglesey, the Duchess of Buckingham, Earl of Strathmore, Earl of Derby and Lord Kinnaird.

Mrs. Ward does not care in the least for London life and its social pleasures

SWISS COUNCIL HAS A CALENDAR PLAN

GENEVA, April 8. Many schemes of late years have been discussed for forming the calendar, all having the same end in view, a symmetrical arrangement of the months of the year so that they shall always begin with the same day of the week.

Although this would not be a difficult method to adopt, governments so far have been content to abide by the current calendar. The Swiss Federal Council, however, has just decided to call an international conference to deal with the matter and is presented with a scheme which will give every year 364 days, divided into exactly fifty-two weeks and four quarters, each quarter will have two thirty-day months and one thirty-one-day month.

New Year's Day is a special undated festival and a similar holiday will be inserted between June 30 and July 1 to provide for the extra day in leap years. This is practically the same calendar as was discussed last June by the International Congress of Chambers of Commerce at London and suggested for adoption in 1911 when New Year's Day, falling on Sunday, would consequently become the first New Year's Festival.

SUSPECT TAFT OF COVETING CANADA

European Press-Men See Deep Ulterior Plan of Acquisition Behind Arbitration Scheme.

By WILLIAM T. STEAD.
Special Cable to Sunday American.

LONDON, April 8.—It will probably very greatly surprise my American readers to know how general the impression is on the continent of Europe that President Taft's arbitration proposal is only intended to mask an impending attack upon Canada. To-day I was confidentially approached by two influential foreign journalists who asked me whether we did not perceive that this was the ultimate objective of President Taft's policy. Of course I roared with laughter, which they seemed to think very much displaced.

One of them, a Russian, said he sincerely hoped it was true because if the United States were to be involved in an attempt to conquer Canada, it would effectively limit any possibility [illegible] doing mischief to Russia in the Far East.

I only mention this to illustrate the fantasy which sway men's minds when they contemplate the course of public events from a distance of 3,000 miles.

The movement in favor of the Anglo American arbitration goes on apace. I was one of a deputation that waited upon the Lord Mayor this week, asking him to undertake officially the direction of the development movement. The Lord Mayor's reply to the deputation, which represented the Free Churches and Peace societies, was excellent in tone and taste and full of good sense. [illegible] said in effect, "I am not only able but eager to do everything I can in this direction but the appeal to the religious organizations of the country should not emanate from me, although I am perfectly willing [illegible] sort. Any such appeal [illegible] made in the first instance by [illegible] parties representing Anglicans [illegible] men, Jews and Catholics [illegible] organization which would [illegible] whole religious sentiment of the [illegible] and let that body, which [illegible] shelter itself under the aegis of the Mansion house, appeal to [illegible] organizations throughout the country first to give expression to their sentiments secondly to take the initiative in evoking a sentiment for a general mass meeting of citizens."

A Churchly Unification.

The wisdom of this advice was recognized immediately and Mr. Meyer of the Free Church Council proceeded to open communication with the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Chief Rabbi and the Catholic Archbishop of Westminster. It would be one of the most delightful of the byproducts of President Taft's initiative if he could have succeeded in [illegible] tremely important point in unifying British Christiandom on so wide a basis as to include the Jews.

The greatest satisfaction is expressed here by those who know him at the news that J. Brown Scott, formerly one of the American delegation to the Hague [illegible], has been appointed permanent secretary, that is to say, the executive of the administrative office of the Carnegie endowment for international peace. I had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Scott almost daily during all the critical times of the last Hague conference and an [illegible] [illegible] those who worked in the cause of peace and arbitration I formed the highest idea of his gifts, tenacity of purpose, his clear grasp of fundamentals and his tireless activity.

The veto bill has been struggling this week through the obstacles which has been piled in its path by the opposition. It is a short bill with the fewest clauses but in order to obstruct its progress some amendments have been put down by the [illegible] [illegible].

If debate were allowed to any length the bill would not get through committee until next Christmas, even with an continuous session.

Liberals Will Be Drastic.

But there is no intention on the part of the Liberals to allow any such carefully engineered obstruction to stand in the way of giving effect to the nation's will. After a certain number of days and nights have been consumed [illegible] the earlier amendments [illegible] passed by a [illegible] such so much time will be given [illegible] [illegible] by the use of [illegible] guillotine.

There is not the least [illegible] part of the Liberals to adopting [illegible] drastic measures that [illegible] while on the other side there is an increasing realization of the fact that the veto bill is [illegible] moderate [illegible] way thank their [illegible] stars that they have been allowed to get off so cheap.

59 YEARS IN ONE PULPIT IS RECORD

PORTSMOUTH, April 8.—Rev. Dr. Edward Roble has just attained his ninetieth year and is still vigorous in mind and body. He is one of the oldest clergymen in the world. Ever since [he] was ordained [on] Feb. 25, 1852, he has been pastor of [the] Congregational Church.

[Th]is is a record of fifty-nine years in one pulpit, and it is doubted here if it can be equaled anywhere. He has never been away from his church except when he went on two trips to Europe. He is still a [vigorous] preacher. Thirty-five years ago Dartmouth College honored him with the degree of Doctor of Divinity.

He has always been studious and when [seven] years ago he attended the Harvard University Summer school he was the oldest student at any educational school in the world.

The March of Human Progress

Progress is only another name for applied energy, initiative, speed in thought and action. Progress never slows down, but keeps moving all the time.

The present generation has seen the smooth-running automobile come into being, as well as the mile-a-minute train, the aeroplane and other swift and easy-moving devices.

To this list O'Sullivan's Heels of New Live Rubber must be added.

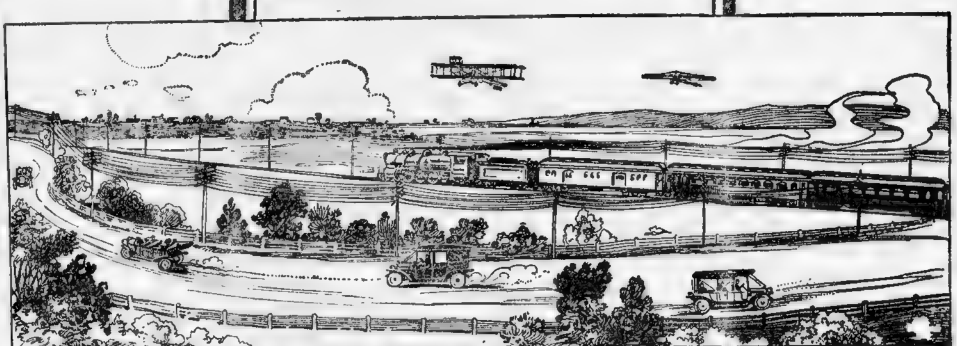
They are to the human body what a shock-absorber is to an automobile.

They take up the jolts and jars and protect the delicate machinery of the nervous system from the daily grind.



O'Sullivan's HEELS OF NEW LIVE RUBBER

They are for busy men and women who need to conserve the energy that Nature gave them.

A million people wear them, a million "live wires."

O'Sullivanize your walk. Get the live rubber stride, and get in touch with the age.

No successful man ever shambled and slouched through life. The man who is going to get there walks with a light spring and vigorous step.

O'Sullivan's Heels of New Live Rubber mean easy walking. They will give you the step and bearing of the alert and successful. They take the constant pounding of hard leather heels and stony pavements off the nervous system.

With them you can walk farther, walk easier, walk more gracefully, and accomplish more.

P. S.

Go to your shoemaker to-day, pay him 50 cents and have a pair of O'Sullivan's Heels of New Live Rubber attached to your shoes. Be sure to ask for O'Sullivan's by name, for the name O'Sullivan is the guarantee of quality.

FINANCIAL

COTTON CONTEST OF 1910 BEING REPEATED

Forces the Same Except That Spot Interests Are Not on Short Side.

By EDWARD LOW RANLETT.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The forces arrayed against each other in the cotton market are in some respects the same as fought out last year's campaign, with this exception—that the larger professional and spot interests of New York are not heavily committed to the short side, as was the case last year.

The price of July on April 1 was 13.98, and large purchases were made, followed by further covering [illegible] Monday. The advance in May and July was almost entirely the result of this support. The short interest established during March had become unwieldy and included a large number of Wall street firms and Western operators.

Commitments Speculative.

These commitments were purely speculative, few having any idea of delivering actual cotton in either May or July. Indeed, it was not seriously contended that cotton could be purchased in the South and sold profitably in New York until after May had crossed 14.45 on the advance.

The bull position is based on the conviction that lower prices are not justified by the supply and demand. No more cotton is available for the remainder of the season for spinners' takings than existed at the same time last year. Not only this but there is a chance the crop will fall short of the amount stated in the ginners' report, as it is now known that the world's spinners hold less reserve than on the corresponding date in 1910. European trade conditions are excellent and nearly all advices from England are that supplies of American cotton, both as to quantity and quality, will barely meet the prospective demands of spinners.

It is admitted that spinners' takings in America will be reduced through curtailment, not even under these circumstances September 1 will find, according to the opinion of the leading bulls, less cotton in America than was held on September 1 of the previous year.

Crop Conditions Favorable.

New crop conditions continue highly favorable, though enough rain has fallen throughout the Mississippi Valley and [illegible] would be detrimental to the early [illegible] development of the crop. [illegible] The weekend statistics show the amount [illegible] to have [illegible] for the week [illegible] 2,9,000 [illegible] against 205,875 last [illegible].

CHICAGO MARKET IN PATIENCE CONTEST

Prolonged Dullness in Stocks Is Having a Bad Effect on Nerves of Brokers.

By BOERSIANER.

CHICAGO, April 8.—The endurance contest in patience in and around the stock exchange has proceeded [illegible] Is the lot of [the] stock exchange member a happy one? Judging by the last twelve months the answer is emphatically in the negative.

Dullness more palpable and prolonged than the stagnant period that preceded the Northern Securities Company case decision has reigned. Several brokers have gone out of business. Many branch offices have been closed and clerical forces reduced in at least half of the going houses. Floor traders, men who operate for themselves only, have done little or nothing, though they are at the negative advantage of having no business expenses.

Still, neither the past nor the future has been judged by the present, which is abnormal. The apathy of to-day has occurred [illegible] only long intervals in the annals of the American exchanges. Activity is the normal state of the boards. Booms and slumps—both are profitable to the commission house—are frequent and overwhelmingly compensate for the rare seasons of unprofitable lassitude.

Waiting for the Tide.

The difficulties of a stock exchange career are not in the lethargic periods, which in reality are simply seasons when the stock exchange man waits for the tide, the tide that makes up in a month for the inactivity of months.

Possibly the profession or business of broker is not what it used to be in years gone [illegible] competition makes itself felt [illegible] more keenly. Two decades ago [illegible] paid well for getting [illegible] were accepted as a matter of course. The rates were higher. Cost of telegrams were paid by clients. However, traders are more numerous to-day, and they trade far more heavily than in the past. One active operator who is not a member of the stock exchange can pay all the expenses and more of a first-class house. It is nothing for such a speculator to give orders averaging 10,000 shares a day.

There are [illegible] strictly in [illegible] But these are few, and every member of the stock exchange knows it were sheer affectation to pretend that the exchange as a whole could live by investment alone. There is not enough of it to go [illegible] and were it not for speculation pure and simple, the passive roster would be largely increased. Nor is it at all certain that the rank and file of members would wish the condition otherwise were they given the choice. [illegible] attraction to the profession is the constant [illegible] it affords.

Stock Broker's Contempt.

This gives zest to the stock broker's career. [illegible] from that of other business men. If one [illegible] latent or unconscious contempt for what he regards as the humdrum life of tradesmen. He thinks these, as a rule, live the lives of old men contentedly. They are timidly conservative at an age at which every healthy human being ought to be aggressively excited. They have all, in the broker's eyes, settled down like balloons that have lost their lifting margin of gas and to the broker it is evident that the process of settling down will go on until they have settled into their graves.

To the stock exchange man those tradesmen who are sufficiently enlightened not to believe in the story of Jonah and the Great Fish, are all the readier to believe that metals can be transmuted and all diseases cured by radium and that men can live for 200 years by drinking sour milk. At bottom, to the broker's thinking, they are merely capable of discussing each other's "solvency and respectability" with some shrewdness. Of course the law of retribution operates in disfavor of the stock exchange man in that his nerves are generally taut. He makes money rapidly when he makes it at all. Then he is beset with temptations of which other business men know nothing.

Brokers Born, Not Made.

Houses that do not speculate are numerous. There are hard and fast contracts between the members which stipulate the absolute exclusion of speculation. But members are frequently tempted to play the game. And here one may open a parenthesis to note a not generally known fact: a very small percentage of stock exchange members fail, indeed, even among professional speculators failures are lower in percentage than in manufacturing and mercantile lines.

But the genuine broker is born, not made. He must have an initiative as well as an acquired knowledge of values. He must have an instinct for general economics; must be a [illegible] of business, must have a genius of making valuable friends and a still greater genius for keeping them.

Comparison in the New Gold Mining Camp

So Far Small Veins in Porcupine District Assay Better Than the Large Ones.

The rapidly increasing public interest in the new gold fields at Porcupine, Ontario, is generally witnessed by the formation of new mining companies in quick succession. No sooner has one been successfully launched than another has been floated. All are bidding for popular favor and in almost every instance the public is [illegible] quite generously for Porcupine stocks.

Meantime it is of interest for the investor to notice how favorably the pioneer companies compare in the matter of holdings and capitalization with their younger sisters. Some of the pioneers in the Ontario camp started with relatively large holdings and moderate capitalization. Now this position is almost entirely reversed by many of the newer companies whose capitalization per forty-acre claim range from $250,000 to $1,000,000, thus showing a wider appreciation of prospective values in the camp.

As an example of the change of attitude the Porcupine Gold Mines Co., one of the early companies offering stock to the public, started with nine claims in Tisdale and a capitalization of $2,000,000; to-day not far from its properties there is a company with one claim capitalized for $[illegible],000,000.

A little later the Porcupine Central Mining Company was organized with a capital of $1,000,000, and with 15 claims generously distributed in the very heart of the township of Tisdale, thus giving a valuation of only $70,000 per claim. Adjoining one claim of Porcupine Central there are three newly formed companies with properties whose capitalizations range from $750,000 to $1,000,000. In other words, it is made to appear that a 40-acre claim may now be looked upon as sufficient to form a million-dollar mining corporation.

Some of the newer companies are the American Gold Fields, Ltd., with two claims of $2,000,000 and West Dome, four claims, and $3,000,000 capital, Dome Extension five claims, capital, $3,000,000; Preston East Dome, four claims, capital $3,000,000; Apex Porcupine, two claims, capital, $2,000,000.

So far as work has progressed in Porcupine it has been found that the small veins assay better than the larger ones. On the Vipond the vein is three feet wide on the [illegible] been taken out and on the 100-foot level at the same width, ore was found carrying if anything a little increase in value. The vein widens in places.

SPECIALTIES HOLD MARKET ATTENTION

Supreme Court Decisions Immediate Factor; Utah Consolidated and Gas.

By E. A. WILKINS.

STATE STREET, April 8.—Stock prices [illegible] their way with no apparent [illegible].

[The] Wall street list furnishes specialties from day [to] day which help to hold attention to the stock market at [illegible]. These it is [illegible] the important Supreme Court cases are the immediate factors in the situation, while [illegible] is the extra session of Congress.

[illegible] Monday [illegible] the first business day of the coming week [illegible] attention will be riveted on Washington. If there is to be a recurrence of what happened last Monday the stock exchange might just as well keep its doors closed as utter stagnation ruled throughout the entire five-hour session. The same thing is likely to happen again next Monday pending the handing down of the Standard and American Tobacco decisions, and if nothing is then given out on these cases each successive Monday is likely to witness a repetition of the same conditions until the Supreme Court adjourns, the latter part of May, for the Summer.

Crop Prospects Are Favrable.

Crop prospects appear to be entirely favorable. The ground is full of moisture and the weather is now favoring the farmer for ploughing and seeding. These conditions are also market factors and are only as important as those previously [illegible]. [illegible] market reflects expectations of a big crop, while Winter wheat is expected to be of generous dimensions. Wheat and corn prices are always at variance with railroad issues. Big crops mean much to the railroads while a short crop favors the bulls in these commodities.

At [illegible] 470,104 pounds in the [illegible] not quite [illegible] had as expected, and had no [illegible] prices. The [illegible] conservative normal [illegible] express company tively [illegible]. That is the situation in a nutshell. The metal is quoted the lowest since 1902 and some holding companies that are maintaining dividends are in a hazardous position when it comes to be matter of their continuance unless conditions improve shortly.

Utah Consolidated and Bay State Gas

The Boston interests that are making a fight for control of the Utah Consolidated Mining Co. [illegible] meeting with [illegible] occur April 18 and to-day they have received proxies of between 90,000 and 100,000 shares. If successful George J. Walker will be elected president and [illegible] offices [illegible] to this city.

The late flurry in Bay State Gas has excited comment [illegible] this [illegible] talked of [illegible] to the front again. [illegible] liberal [illegible] to get be asked what extent Delaware State charter could be to this combination if the Federal statutes decide [illegible] in restraint of trade.

Activity in Wool of Fair Proportion

Best Demand Coming from Small Mills—Prices Are Unchanged in a Buyers Market.

[illegible] which developed in the wool market last week continues of fair proportion [illegible] the value of takings has not been as [illegible]. Manufacturers who were the heaviest buyers last week now seem [illegible] satisfied, and the best demand [illegible] from the small and medium [illegible] while taking some [illegible].

[illegible] not the tariff is tinkered [illegible] at the extra session of Congress [illegible] at the [illegible] one in December [illegible] to be an accepted fact that some time [illegible] wool [illegible] schedules will be revised downward.

There is no doubt that the position of the market has been immeasurably bettered by the activity of the past fortnight but the trade are now more interested in what the future will bring forth than in present conditions. The new season is opening up in the West, but there is very [illegible] among Boston dealers and [illegible] a long, drawn-out season with considerable consigning of the new clips, unless the growers are willing to accept considerably lower prices than prevailed last year.

Prices are not much changed, but it has become even more of a buyer's market than prevailed on the first of the month. However, the market is still unsettled and prices depend greatly on how each dealer finds himself fixed.

The demand has run practically in the same channels it did last week. Staple [illegible] have been wanted and [illegible] fleeces also have been freely called for while clothing territories of fine long enough to be worked in the French combs also have found favor with the buyers. Medium wools have not done especially well, though there has been some trading in fleeces of this class and a good-sized block of New Zealand crossbreds is included in the week's business. But the supply of medium [illegible] and that fact may be in part responsible for the lack of activity. A steady movement of scoured wools is noted and the new Arizona wools continue to find a moderate demand, while [illegible] sales of Texas clip are reported.

MISSOURI PACIFIC TRADING MYSTERY

Wabash Terminal Bonds Should Advance, but They Were Also Weak.

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The fact that the day after to-morrow is Monday [illegible]

[illegible] the possibilities of the day, was given as the reason in Wall street to-day for [illegible] session on the stock exchange. Missouri Pacific and Wabash Pittsburg Terminal bonds were the only issues to attract attention and both of these were weak.

As there is good reason for a decline in Missouri Pacific and equally good reasons for an advance in the [illegible] the activity in these two issues was mystifying. It is probably due to [illegible] an attempt of insiders to [illegible] prices to a level that will [illegible] to accumulate more of the bonds. [illegible] it is perfectly safe to sell Missouri [illegible] either long or short stock that is [illegible] an admirable club for picking up the [illegible] bonds.

Railroad Earnings Favorable.

Railroad earnings were very favorable and a good bank statement was made.

[illegible] the Associated [illegible] attention to the [illegible] because it is [illegible] has given a [illegible] control of [illegible] at [illegible] of course [illegible] court rendered [illegible] the [illegible] be the [illegible] company [illegible] manufacturer to make a contest [illegible] interests respecting the retailers to sell his goods at a specified price was a surprise to the Street and will mean much to the general [illegible] competition in prepared foods and patent medicines.

The Chicago election resulting in a victory for the political party which stands for seventy-cent gas caused selling of Peoples Gas stock but on a very moderate scale. Seventy-cent gas does not mean ruin. The [illegible] Company [illegible].

Interest in State Banks.

The banking situation in Oklahoma is [illegible] to attract [illegible] because several State banks which applied for national charters have not received them. There is a dispute over the [illegible] required for the [illegible].

[illegible]

Directors representing the National City Bank, the First National and the Chase [illegible] in the board [illegible] preferring [illegible] the chief banks and trust companies in New York city are under one [illegible]. The deal to this effect was [illegible] early in 1907, and all the technicalities necessary to carry it out are now completed.

[illegible] Support as [illegible] Are Favorable.

By JOSEPH F. PRITCHARD.

CHICAGO, April 8.—[illegible] of a round lot of wheat at Winnipeg said to have been purchased [illegible], was the feature of the week. It may be learned later that [illegible] shipped abroad, but was taken by speculators in the hope of [illegible] reciprocity treaty [illegible] give [illegible] a chance [illegible] the [illegible] of the United States.

[illegible] Northern wheat of Canada is [illegible] fine quality [illegible] this country [illegible] on this side of the line.

Bulls Must Have Support.

[illegible] wheat must have good support [illegible] a large export demand for [illegible] flour and maintain prices around [illegible] level although the feeling at the [illegible] of the week was less bearish than at any time in several months past. [illegible] news from the Spring wheat country as [illegible] acreage and conditions for seeding is favorable.

[illegible] Southwest have reported [illegible] green bug in [illegible] other [illegible] of parasites [illegible] parasitic destructive in Texas [illegible].

Southwestern [illegible] experts believe that Kansas will [illegible] 90,000,000 bushels of wheat and [illegible] early every one of the States in [illegible] Winter belt the prospects are far better [illegible] they were at this time a year ago. [illegible] not far from another harvest [illegible] of the mills [illegible] of a lack of demand for their output.

Small Interest in Corn.

The open interest in corn at Chicago [illegible] holdings of one or two concerns [illegible] elieve that with [illegible] show a [illegible] that is [illegible] movement [illegible] then will be a [illegible] on shipping account.

Boston-Idaho Mining To Stockholders and Investors

In accordance with the latest reports received on April 3d direct from the mines, the new silver-lead mill, 100 tons daily capacity, will be in operation by May 1st, also the shipments of high grade silver-lead ore in car lots will begin in May that will net the company $2,000 to $3,000 per car.

The severe weather and heavy snows during the past winter retarded somewhat the work of installing parts of the mill, which caused a delay in starting as early as was predicted.

The Company is formulating plans to develop its silver-lead mines at lower levels this year, which will largely increase its tonnage. It is known that the ore bodies continue to a great depth. It is also planning to build its tramways and to install auto trucks for the transportation of its ore to railroad, instead of team hauling. It is calculated that these latter equipments will make a saving to the Company of $3.50 per ton.

The books of the Company for eleven months ending January 31st have been audited by a Massachusetts Certified Public Accountant. His report will be sent to each stockholder immediately after the annual meeting.

The Company's Treasury Stock is in good demand and is being taken up by the conservative and better class of investors at its present selling price, $3.00 a share.

BOSTON MEN EQUAL WOMEN AS GOSSIPS

Dr. Cortland Myers Declares Talking About Others Has Become Habit.

Boston men are as big gossips as Boston women. This is the surprising statement of the Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers, the observing pastor of Tremont Temple.

"If Christ came to Boston any day and dropped into many business offices after 3 o'clock in the afternoon he would find them buzzing with gossip," Dr. Myers observed. Nine-tenths of the people gossip about other people, he says.

"Why do they do it?" the clergyman was asked.

Dr. Myers hesitated for a moment and then, looking directly at the questioner, replied:

"I suppose it is mainly habit with some people. They get so accustomed to it that it becomes their second nature. If you go into an office in the afternoon when the [illegible] of business is done for the day, a few [illegible] congregated there [illegible] a chat [illegible] this incessant gossip [illegible]. It is so [illegible] it becomes nauseating.

HUGH BANCROFT TELLS HOW REAL BOSTON CAN LEAD THE WORLD AS COMMERCIAL CITY

BOSTON, wake up! Business men, get together! Boom the Real Boston, the city of a million and a [illegible] busy, prosperous, happy people! Build docks! Welcome [illegible] manufacturers! Boost Boston twenty-four hours a day!

This is the big [illegible] program of Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Real Boston Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, who shook up things by telling Boston business men that they have been talking too long about booming Boston and [illegible] together and bettering the city, but not getting together [illegible] any booming.

"Boston can easily become the first [illegible] city in the world if it will make the most of its splendid opportunities," says Mr. Bancroft in the following straight from [illegible] talk which he gives to the readers of the Sunday AMERICAN.

By HUGH BANCROFT

Chairman Chamber of Commerce "Real Boston" Committee.

HUGH BANCROFT

Boston is on the threshold of the greatest material development in its history. It is [illegible] [illegible] deliberately [illegible] to accept its opportunities, unless Boston continues [illegible] pessimism and [illegible] in which for [illegible] years [illegible]

Boston [illegible] and a half people, just as truly as Philadelphia is just as truly as Chicago [illegible] million [illegible] a city of [illegible] we cultivate a state of mind in which we think of ourselves as a city of [illegible] hundred thousand we prove ourselves unable to grasp big ideas [illegible]

Tenth City of the World.

Yet, because we always have seen Boston in every table of population as a city [illegible], we have all been thinking of [illegible] a city of only 600,000, [illegible] [illegible] I [illegible] to such a proud position, content to be exhibited in twenty [illegible]

There are some people who profess that they cannot see any material advantage to be gained from having Boston's true position [illegible]

May Yet Get Right Rating.

There seems to be a little confusion over what can still be accomplished in the way of getting Boston's true figures [illegible] its proper place in the census tables, without any qualification, because a bill [illegible] pending was defeated [illegible] The census figures are of the date of April 1, 1910. Real Boston might perfectly well have been created before that date. Since it was not, any figures that the Census Bureau may now publish for real Boston must necessarily appear in a footnote.

The [illegible] publication of the Census [illegible] far as getting [illegible] Boston is concerned [illegible] [illegible] way of a footnote, to [illegible] metropolitan Boston has been created, with a [illegible] 1,423,000. This [illegible] referred to by every [illegible] of the world, and it is safe [illegible] will be quick to adopt the [illegible] given. If the [illegible] in every pocket [illegible] population the world over.

Means True Federation.

The problem has been to create a com[illegible] disturbing existing conditions, and preserving to the component cities and towns intact their [illegible] are police and health departments.

The leaders of Boston 1915 realize that the creation and recognition of the real Boston by the method of a true federation is of vital importance in carrying out their far-reaching plans for civic betterment. To them "Boston 1915 does not [illegible] Greater Boston, the [illegible] city in the United States and the [illegible] largest city in the world."

The Annexation Bogey.

The opposition to the pending Real Boston bill comes down to a fear that in some way or [illegible] prove an entering wedge for annexation. This fear seems to persist in some minds, though it is over twenty years since the first [illegible] was [illegible] though the people who are in favor of real Boston are opposed to annexation, though the most strenuous objection to the Real Boston bill has come from those who believe that the whole metropolitan district ought to be annexed to Boston, because they realize that it will prevent annexation. By creating real Boston nearly all the advantages of annexation are secured, without any of the disadvantages, and the growing sentiment for general annexation [illegible] effectively checked.

There is no city in the world better situated for future development than Boston if Boston will only make the most of [illegible] fourth, the third, or even the second city in the United States. It is the natural [illegible] instructors as the Canadian tariff wall presents seem to be disappearing.

The Canadian Northwest is destined to be the granary of the world, and Boston is its natural outlet.

BIG TECH CONGRESS TO OPEN TO-MORROW

Alumni and Students to Observe Fiftieth Anniversary of Granting of Charter.

A congress of Technology will begin in Boston [illegible] to commemorate the fiftieth year of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. It will be one of the most noteworthy events in the scholastic annals of this city. To-morrow will be the fiftieth anniversary of the granting of a charter to the institute by Governor Andrew.

The congress will begin in Huntington Hall at 2:30 p. m., when Dr. Richard C. Maclaurin, president, will deliver an address. He will be followed by distinguished scientists who will read papers. The exercises will be open to the public and will be attended by hundreds of the Tech Alumni, including captains of industry, manufacturers and educators. A big feature of the Congress will be the "All Technology" reunion, graduate club, smokers, feasts and banquets.

Smoker in Symphony Hall.

There will be many such social gatherings around town Monday evening. The big alumni smoker will be held at 8 o'clock in Symphony Hall. Arrangements for the [illegible] are in charge of George B. Gill [illegible] and at the head of the reception committee is Everett Morss '85, a member of the Technology corporation. Moving pictures will be one of the "stunts" [illegible] by young and old Tech boys.

On Tuesday papers will be read in Tech buildings on various subjects by men who are recognized as foremost among experts [illegible]

[illegible] the big banquet [illegible] to seats at the [illegible] students, instructors, the senior class and invited guests. The balconies will be open to ladies. L. C. Pierce '83-'84 is chairman of the banquet [illegible]

[illegible] the papers [illegible] divided into the [illegible] groups.

Subjects to be Discussed.

[illegible]

The papers will cover architecture, [illegible] and distribution, materials and manufacturing processes, the reclamation of [illegible] and other general subjects.

2 SPELLBINDERS AT WORK.

Filene Employes Deluged by Eloquence, Pathos and Humor.

Great enthusiasm prevailed at the meeting of the Young Men's Club, of the Filene Co-operative Association, held in their rooms in the Filene building. The meetings are held semi-monthly. There was a dinner, furnished by the restaurant in the building [illegible] by the employes, after which [illegible] entertainers held the [illegible] a short time.

At this meeting the feature of the programme consisted of an address on newspaper work by Clement T. Pollock and [illegible] humorous readings by [illegible] Callahan, both Boston newspaper men. The young men of the club were out in force and gave their visitors a big send-off. Following the entertainment feature of the evening the members of the club had a business session.

WHAT'S DOING AND WHY IN THE LEGISLATIVE AND POLITICAL ARENA

By A. POLITICAL SHARPE.

MR. J. OTIS WARDWELL being elsewhere engaged last week, the business of sticking the knife into the income tax on Beacon Hill has been attended to by Representative Russell D. Crane of Cambridge. Mr. Crane is the young man who had charge of the opposition to woman suffrage in the House a few days ago. It was that fight, conducted by him, which caused the proponents of equal suffrage to say "For heaven's sake cut out the burlesque and give us one sound argument against the measure."

But they can't shoot anything like that at the young man from Cambridge when he takes the floor against the income tax next Wednesday. Mercy no. He's got enough arguments to sink a ship. Uh huh. The only fault with them is that they're no good.

But you mustn't blame Crane for that. The arguments are not of his own discovery. I would not be surprised if they had been given to him by his friend, Jimmie Myers, former Speaker of the House, and one of the best friends of Standard Oil, so some folks say, who ever argued before a legislative committee.

If you have attended a session of the House this year or last, and seen Crane in debate, you don't need to be told that [illegible] one of the biggest [illegible] in the Legislature. Yes, indeed. Weighs [illegible] and stands over six feet. Think of [illegible] that picking on the poor [illegible]

Be Easy on Him.

IT isn't known that the speech which Representative Crane will deliver against the income tax [illegible] week is to be the work of somebody [illegible] it is suspected that a railroad speech which the Cambridge man delivered some time ago was written by our old friend, Bill Turtle, of Pittsfield.

[illegible] harsh with Mr. Crane on [illegible]

Martin P. F. Curley; He's at It Again.

IN the State Senate the other day [illegible] reconsidered the defeat of the "Interrogatories in Civil Actions" bill, and sent the measure back to the Judiciary Committee. Mention should be made of Roger Sherman Hoar's change from a position against the bill to one in favor of it. He explained to his associates that he had been completely fooled by the arguments against the bill in the preceding debate. Good boy, Roger.

Mention ought also, to be made of Senator Martin P. F. Curley's failure to vote on reconsideration until [illegible] voted, and the [illegible] had been licked by a wide margin. Then he voted on the people [illegible]

Nothing like having a [illegible] record.

A Word to the Wise.

SENATOR JOSEPH P. LOMASNEY has a good roll-call record in this year's Senate. But we'd like to offer Joe a wee suggestion. For appearances' sake, Joe, please vote when your name is called. Don't hold back your vote until the entire roll has been called. You've done that on almost every roll-call this season. Looks too much like waiting to see which way the wind blows. Rather a bad example to a [illegible] set by a man who is supposed to be the Democratic whip in the Senate.

The Silly Season. Candidates Galore.

IT certainly is the silly season in politics. Everybody, or almost everybody, is announcing his candidacy for some office or other. Senator White of Tisbury and Representatives Langtry of Springfield and Barlow of Lowell are campaigning for Henry Turner's job as State Auditor. Senator Melvin S. Nash of Hanover is the latest "receptive" candidate for the Republican nomination for Lieutenant-Governor. Almost every Republican in the upper chamber would like to be President of next year's Senate. Candidates for the Speakership of next year's House are thicker than gypsy moths in Medford. Go to it. Nothing like getting your name in the papers.

Over the Fence and Out.

THE State Senate has batted Sunday baseball over the fence. Members who admit that they can play Sunday baseball in their own communities without molestation by the police voted against allowing the small boy in cities to knock up flies in a back lot after working for six days in some department store or factory during the Summer months.

Senator George Holden Tinkham of the Back Bay, who led the fight for Sunday [illegible] amateur baseball [illegible] continues to show that he's not as much of a blue-blood as was once popularly supposed. Senator Charles H. Pearson of Brookline who is supposed to be something of a high brow, has absolved himself of a [illegible] against popular legislation this year through his vote to give the small boy a chance.

Ditto for Senator John F. White of Tisbury. Senator Joe Hibbard of Lowell was [illegible] Republican who voted for the measure [illegible] Joe has a pretty good record as a friend of popular [illegible] To the credit of the Democrats [illegible] that every one of them excepting [illegible] of Worcester voted for the Tinkham bill.

If you watched the progress of the [illegible] and heard the debate on [illegible]

[illegible] Speaker [illegible] are two [illegible] legislative blufs [illegible] their ducking. The other kind votes consistently for the corporations and then wins re-election on its votes against liquor bills and open-Sunday bills.

'Sh! Here's A Secret. Mack Was Pinched Once.

SENATOR JOHN H. MACK [illegible] Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, admitted in the Senate lobby the other day that he has a police record. John was berating some of the tight-laced senators who voted against Sunday baseball.

"I'd [illegible] ashamed of yourselves," he said. "You go out on Sunday in your automobile and have a good time, but you won't give the small boy a chance to bat out a few flies. I'll bet that nearly all of you get into a Sunday ball game now and then. I know I do."

"Better be careful of what you say to these fellows, John," said George Tinkham. "Some of them might have the State police go up to North Adams and pinch you."

"Doesn't worry me a bit," said Mack. "I was pinched when I was ten years old for playing ball on Sunday, and I'm as proud of it as I am of anything in my life."

LOWELL TO CELEBRATE FOR SIXTH REGIMENT

Fiftieth Anniversary of March Through Baltimore to Be Observed on April 19.

LOWELL, April 8.—The fiftieth anniversary of the march through Baltimore of the Sixth Massachusetts will be celebrated here on April 19 as Lowell's greatest day. The Sixth was an organization from this vicinity and was sent to Washington to protect the national capital against Confederates when President Lincoln was inaugurated in the Spring of '61.

On the way to Washington the Sixth had to March through Baltimore to get another train. The Massachusetts militiamen were attacked on Pratt street and there was brief but bloody battle. It was about the first armed conflict between the North and the South in the fratricidal struggle which lasted four years and perpetuated the Union.

In sending the Sixth Regiment to Washington Massachusetts was the first State to strike for the Union. Therefore this [illegible] has a great record. Lowell claims it as its own regiment and is going to go the limit in celebrating the semi-centennial. There will be a parade, patriotic exercises and a banquet. The parade will start at 1.30 p. m., and the organizations which have accepted invitations to take part in it are the old Sixth Regiment Association, Company F, Irish Volunteers, delegation from Post 63, G. A. R., Natick, Catholic Young Men's Lyceum of Lowell [illegible] companies of the A. C. Cadets of Lowell; Lowell High School regiment, Greek Holy regiment of Lowell and visiting companies; F company of Boys' Brigade, First Trinitarian Church; Garde Frontenac of Lowell, Post G. A. R., Meroree Guard of Honor of Association Catholique, Butler Ames Company [illegible] Rank, K. of P., Camp Farragut Sons of Veterans [illegible] Guards, Meagher Guards, five Lowell [illegible] of the A. O. H. [illegible] department, United Spanish War Veterans, [illegible] Regiment [illegible] Lowell Grand Army Posts [illegible] Lodge, A. C. [illegible] Lowell Nest of Owls, [illegible] Post 48, G. A. R., of Lawrence; General Barry Post 40, G. A. R., Malden, the [illegible] military organizations and the [illegible]

[illegible] of the day will be Colonel Edward F. Jones, former Lieutenant-Governor of the State of New York and a [illegible] Colonel Jones commanded the Sixth [illegible] in its march to Washington.

LAWYER SMASHES WILL.

Not in Court, Either; Just by Stubbing His Toe.

BUCHANAN, Mich., April 8.—Shortly before the death of Hudson Burton five years ago he talked into a phonograph [illegible] placed the record in the [illegible] of his lawyer. In his will Mr. Burton stated that he had buried a large sum of gold and that its location was recorded on a phonograph record which was not to be heard until after he had been dead five years. Yesterday the heirs gathered to hear what the phonograph [illegible] lawyer with the [illegible] entered the house and as he [illegible] he stubbed his toe, tripped over a [illegible] and broke the record in many pieces, rendering it useless.

KING GEORGE GODFATHER.

Earl of Crewe's Heir, Lord Houghton, Christened.

LONDON, April 8.—King George to-day became the godfather of the Earl of Crewe's heir, Lord Houghton, who was christened in Chapel Royal with the King [illegible] sponsor.

Do You Want to Share in the Enormous Profits of the Magazine Business?

HAVE YOU MONEY YOU COULD INVEST if we could show you an investment that is safe, conservative and at the same time gives promise of profits far above the ordinary? You are offered an opportunity to purchase stock in the BASEBALL MAGAZINE CO.—the pioneer and only one in the field. The Company paid 8% dividends last year from actual earnings.

THE BASEBALL MAGAZINE CO.,

CAPITALIZATION, $100,000 Incorporated under the laws of the State of Massachusetts PAR VALUE $10 PER SHARE

¶ Mr. Frank A. Munsey, who started in the magazine business in Boston, has stated that his magazines pay him over a million dollars a year profit. The Curtis Publishing Co., owning the Ladies' Home Journal and the Saturday Evening Post, makes more than $2,000,000 a year.

¶ $100 invested in Munsey's stock in the early days of that publication will to-day, it is said, yield you a net income of over $1,000 annually.

¶ DID YOU BUY any of the above? Use your good sense and judgment—purchase stock now in the BASEBALL MAGAZINE CO.

¶ There are approximately 43,000 Newsdealers throughout the country. If each one of these dealers sold only 5 copies monthly that would give us a circulation of over 200,000. Can you imagine the dividends we could pay on that circulation?

¶ Buying stock in the BASEBALL MAGAZINE CO. is not taking a chance, but it is a careful, well planned investment that should in a few years make you independent.

¶ The Stock offered you is Eight Per Cent. Preferred PARTICIPATING Stock, bearing eight per cent. a year and participating in additional earnings.

¶ That means a great deal to you. Remember Munsey's Magazine stock, McClure's Magazine stock and the Saturday Evening Post stock were all cheap when they started. LOOK AT THEM NOW. Pretty soon Baseball Magazine stock will be out of reach too.

How Fortunes Are Made

¶ Not by individuals acting alone. Not by piling one dollar on top of another in a savings bank at 3½ or 4 per cent. a year. No! The interest from bank savings may keep you out of the poorhouse, but it will never lead you to "Easy Street." Invest your spare money in the same way that Bankers invest it FOR you and soon you will be on "Easy Street," with independence for ever.

¶ Everybody knows that banks make money; if they merely allowed their deposits to accumulate in their vaults they could never make a dollar. They make their money by investing your money in bonds, mortgages, and the very stocks which you might as well buy for YOURSELF. They pay you 3½ or 4 per cent., but the big earnings they keep for THEMSELVES.

¶ It is a positive fact that most of such great profits are earned through investments in industrial stocks, and while banks are great money makers the REALLY big dividend payers are the INDUSTRIAL CORPORATIONS.

¶ Every day you rub shoulders with people who have grown enormously rich from a few hundred dollars invested in the beginning in Bell Telephone, in Singer Sewing Machine and in Munsey Magazine Stock.

¶ It is clear, therefore, that your way to fortune lies through an investment in this Industrial Stock Company, which has been proven sound—and paying dividends already. If you wait your opportunity will be gone.

¶ Now can you afford to accept from 3½ to 6 per cent. on your money with such an opportunity before you?

¶ Don't you owe it to yourself to make your money work just as hard for you as you work for it? If it is only earning 4 per cent. it's lazy money and only working half time.

¶ Don't wait till this stock has gone to $50 or $100 per share and is paying dividends accordingly.

¶ If failure to INVESTIGATE lost you an opportunity that would make you independent for life, would you be sorry?

SONIA—"WHY, PAPA, DARLING, I HAVE PLEASURES. SOMETIMES I GO TO CENTRAL PARK AND SEE THE MONKEYS, AND SOMETIMES I GO TO THE MOVING PICTURES REGULAR, ONCE EVERY MONTH

DAVID ARONSON, a rich silk importer, is expecting the arrival at his sumptuous home of his little daughter, Sonia, whom he has not seen for years, and for whom he has until now hunted in vain. Years before, Aronson had left Russia for America a poor young man, promising to send for his wife and their daughter as soon as possible. Before he could do so the inhabitants of the little Russian town were massacred. His wife was one of the victims, and little Sonia was one of the few who escaped. All trace of her, however, was lost. Aronson has waxed very rich, but all the while mourned his unfortunate wife and longed and hunted for his little daughter. He has married a proud, haughty woman who cares only for society and dress. Finally Aronson learns that his daughter reached America in company with a sister and he sends for her. His wife is enraged when she learns that the child has been found in the Ghetto and is to come to live with them, and says that the child will disgrace them. Her brother, Monte, who has sponged on Aronson, is also furious, knowing that the child will inherit the money. There is a fashionable dinner party at the house the evening Sonia arrives. The scene is in the library. Sonia and her father have a pathetic meeting, and then—

DAVID (with trembling voice):
Tell me you love me.

SONIA:
I love you, I love you a whole lot, Mister Father.

DAVID:
Not Mister Father; just plain father.

SONIA:
You ain't plain—you're dressed up father. Papa, won't you kiss me? Kiss me a whole lot of times. (Throws her arms around him.)

DAVID:
My Sonia. My little Sonia, my little Sonia (Kisses her repeatedly.)

SONIA:
Have I got any brothers and sisters?

DAVID:
Well, not at present. You see, we didn't know you were coming. You've worked very hard, my child. (Picks up her hands.) What have those little fingers been d

SONIA:
Why, papa, darling, I have pleasures. Sometimes I go to the Park and see the monkeys, and sometimes I go to the moving pictures regular, once every month.

Well, you certainly have been going the pace. (Mrs. Aronson enters.) Irene, here she is—this is our little daughter. (Mrs. Aronson ignores her.) I said this is our little daughter.

Greatly upset.

MONTE (who has heard sonia's last speech, enters):
Your new daughter, Irene, promises to be vastly entertaining.

SONIA:
They don't like me, father.

DAVID:
This matter concerns no one but my wife and me.

MONTE
Your wife is my sister.

DAVID
That is her misfortune.

MONTE
I fancied you realized your obligations sufficiently to consider my feelings.

DAVID:
Obligated to you?

MONTE:
Yes. Do you suppose our friends will ever receive that girl as an equal?

DAVID.
Let us hope not.

MONTE (with a shrug):
Well, if my sister is satisfied, I have nothing more to say.

DAVID—"You're a thing the world would be well rid of. You tried to break up my home; you told me that I am not good enough for you; you insulted my little girl."

MRS. A.:
But I am not. If you wish to provide for this girl, let it be in her proper surroundings—among people of her own station.

DAVID
She is my daughter and her proper place is in my house.

MRS. A.:
Her presence here will cause unpleasant gossip among my friends.

DAVID (firmly):
Your friends cannot regulate my affairs.

MRS. A.:
Possibly not, but I don't intend to be made ridiculous.

DAVID.
You mean that?

MRS. A.:
I do. The choice rests with you entirely.

DAVID (to his wife, sternly)
She's going to stay here with us.

MRS. A.:
Then you wish me to go?

DAVID:
Not at all.

MRS. A.:
I shall if this girl remains.

DAVID:
She will remain and so will you.

MRS. A. (to she exits)
I shall leave in the morning.

SONIA.
Father, I love you so much and I only make trouble for you.

MONTE (insolently)
If my sister leaves you, our acquaintance is at an end.

DAVID
I will try to survive the shock.

MONTE
You will lose every dollar you invested in Guatamalo if that concession is not signed.

DAVID
What has this deal to do with my domestic affairs?

MONTE
Everything. Naturally, Cousin Felix will sympathize with Irene, and, on hearing of your treatment of her, I think you'll find he'll call the deal off, which means the loss of nearly all you have.

DAVID:
Call it off? Because you wish to injure me, eh? Felix is a business man, not a pirate.

MONTE (close to David)
But I happen to know something about Felix's connection with the failure of the Commercial Bank, and after I've had a little chat with him I believe he'll do just as I ask him to do.

DAVID
In the future, Monte, kindly seek head quarters elsewhere.

MONTE:
You may have cause to do likewise, for that concession will never be signed. (He exits.)

DAVID (to himself):
A man learns sense until he's seventy—then he dies a fool. So the concession won't be signed—Hm! Family trees and pedigrees.

SONIA (interrupting his thoughts):
Father, you're worried, ain't you?

DAVID:
Just a little, dear.

SONIA
Please, papa, dear. Come to my house. They don't want you here. But I want you a whole lot.

DAVID:
Thanks for the offer, but where will you put me?

SONIA:
We've got lots of place, plenty. I'll put you in the front bedroom. There's only uncle and two boarders in it. There used to be six.

DAVID (smiling):
Only three now, eh? Well, I should say there would be plenty of room for me.

ALBERT (entering):
A telegram for you, sir. It came some time ago, but the maid left it in the hallway, and I have just found it. (David reads the telegram and a smile of grim satisfaction spreads over his face.)

MONTE (entering as David folds up the message):
I'm going to see Cousin Felix. You realize my sister intends to leave you.

DAVID:
My wife has no reason to.

MONTE (contemptuously)
Has certainly has. Being the mother of a girl from the Ghetto doesn't appeal to Irene's delicate sensibilities.

DAVID (stung to action at last).
Monte, you've said enough——

MONTE.
I'll say what I please.

DAVID (to Monte):
I'm through with you, do you understand?

MONTE
Yes. You forced my sister to leave you and now - -

DAVID
Your sister has not gone yet—but you—you've got to go.

MONTE.
Oh, have I?

DAVID
I've let you stay to keep peace in the family, but now I'm done with you.

MONTE:
Do you think I'd live here if I hadn't been well paid for it? Do you think my sister married you because she thought so much of you? No!

DAVID:
I know what you mean, and she can still have more. But you, you can't, you sneak.

MONTE (furiously):
I've always despised you. Now I'm going to break you.

DAVID.
Go ahead run and speak to Felix. But you're a little too late. The concession is already signed.

MONTE (recovering from his surprise and chagrin):
All right, keep your money and spend it on that aristocratic daughter of yours. She'll be an ornament to you.

DAVID (towering over Monte in wild anger)
Stop! You're not fit to breathe the same air as that little girl. I'll tell you the truth about yourself. You're a creature not fit to be called a man. You haven't got an honorable bone in your body. You never did an honest day's work. Your whole life is a lie. You live on other men's kindness; you've no heart, no soul, no conscience. And you call yourself a gentleman? Why, you're a thing a world would be well rid of. You tried to break up my house; you told me that I am not good enough for you; you insulted my little girl. You coward! You dog! You snake! You cur! You scum! Get out of my sight—get out of my home; get out of here, before I knock your worthless head off.

MRS. A. (entering, excitedly, closing door after her):
David, there are guests in the house. Have you lost your senses?

DAVID:
Why wouldn't I lose my senses when I listen to the insults of that contemptible brother of yours?

MRS. A:
Try to remember you're supposed to be a gentleman.

DAVID:
A gentleman to you is simply fine feathers and soft talk.

MONTE:
I'm going, Irene—— (Exit).

MRS. A.:
He's gone; you're satisfied? Did you expect Monte to go into ecstacy over a girl he knows nothing of?

DAVID:
I expected nothing from him, but women should have sympathy. What sympathy have you shown that little girl?

MRS. A. (trying to control herself).
Listen to me, David——

DAVID:
I have listened to you long enough. The time has come for you to listen to me. When I married you, I gave all I had to give. I didn't ask for love; I wasn't a young man. But I did expect some companionship and a little interest in me. And what have I gotten from you?

MRS. A.:
We've never understood each other.

DAVID:
And when my child comes to fill this empty place in my life, you want to send her away.

MRS. A:
I am no longer interested in what you do. I'll leave in the morning.

DAVID:
Sonia, you are going to remain here always.

SONIA
Thank you, papa—and lady; I'll wash the dishes for you every day.

MRS. A.:
In the meantime consider my wishes sufficiently to keep your daughter out of the way for to-night.

SONIA.
Lady! Father, I want to go home—I've made too much trouble for you already. Please let me go. I'll come to see you sometimes.

DAVID.
No, no, Sonia, dear; you mustn't talk like that—you've made me very happy. But if you leave me, I wouldn't be so happy.

ALBERT (at door):
Supper is served, sir.

DAVID:
Supper is served? Then, Albert, announce to all the guests—Mr. Aronson and his daughter, Sonia.

WHAT SHE KNOWS.

"THE girl who likes to be on the street in a thirty-mile gale shows poor taste."

"Perhaps so; but she shows good form."

ANY WAY HE LIKED.

A MAN who was entirely bald except for a rim of hair just above his collar line went into a barber shop and asked: "I'm in a great hurry; can't you cut my hair with my collar on?"

"Sure," said the barber; "I can cut it with your hat on, too, if you like."

NO LOSS TO HIM.

THE MARKETER—Aren't you wasting a good deal of that steak in trimming it?

The Butcher—No, ma'am; I weighed it first.

OUTWITTING THE LINEMEN.

SOME linemen were very busy putting up telephone poles through a farmer's fields. The farmer presently appeared and vociferously ordered them off his land, whereupon they showed him a paper giving them the right to plant poles wherever they pleased. The grainger did not seem over much impressed, but strode away. In a little while a big and vicious bull charged the linemen, while the old farmer sat on the fence and yelled: "Show him yer papers, darn ye, show him yer papers!"

THE CYNICAL FARMER.

PHOTOGRAPHER—I have been taking some moving pictures of life on your farm.

Farmer—Did you catch my laborers in motion?

Photographer—I think so.

Farmer—Ah, well, science is a wonderful thing!

TAUGHT HER A LESSON.

SUBURBAN HOUSEWIFE—Look here, now, young man, you promised that if I would give you your dinner you would mow the lawn for me.

The Hobo—I'd like to, ma'am, but I gotter teach yer a lesson. Never trust th' word of a total stranger.

ONE KIND OF A SETTLEMENT WORKER.

"AND what occupation do you follow, my poor man?" queried the kind-hearted farmer's wife as she handed out a gooseberry tart.

"Ah, mum," responded Faded Fagin, as he lifted his tattered hat. "I'm a settlement worker."

"Well! Well! I have often heard of them! And what are your duties?"

"Why, to 'work' every settlement I come to, mum."

FATHER KNEW.

CURIOUS CHARLEY—Do nuts grow on trees, father?

Father—They do, my son.

Curious Charley—Then what tree does the doughnut grow on?

Father—The pantry, my son.

REAL DESPERATE.

LITTLE WALTER was always carefully guarded against germs. The telephone was sprayed, the drinking utensils were sterilized, and public conveyances and places were forbidden him.

"Father," he said one night, in a tone of desperation, "do you know what I am going to do when I grow up?"

"What?" asked his father, preparing for the worst.

"I am going to eat a germ.'

HOW STUPID!

MRS. WAYBACK—Are the city people as smart as they say, Ezra?

Mr. Wayback (lately returned from the city)—Well, I should say not. Talk about ignorance. They've even got to have signs in their subways telling them which way is north and which is south.

BETTER DAYS COMING.

"SIR," began the thin man, "I have seen better days."

"So have I," interposed the fat man, "but these days are not fair specimens. The weather will improve next month."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A HUNGRY customer seated himself at a table in a quick lunch restaurant and ordered a chicken pie. When it arrived he raised the lid and sat gazing at the contents intently for a while. Finally he called the waiter.

"Look here, Sam," he said, "what did I order?"

"Chicken pie, sah."

"And what have you brought me?"

"Chicken pie, sah."

"Chicken pie, you black rascal!" the customer replied. "Chicken pie? Why, there's not a piece of chicken in it, and never was."

"Dat's right, boss—dey ain't no chicken in it."

"Then why do you call it chicken pie? I never heard of such a thing."

"Dat's all right, boss. Dey don't have to be no chicken in a chicken pie. Dey ain't no dog in a dog biscuit, is dey?"

THE FEMININE POINT OF VIEW.

"MRS. CHUBBY, if you had the ballot would you vote for your husband in case he was a candidate for office?"

"No, indeed. I'd vote for some other man, just to make Henry jealous."

CAN'T BE BEAT.

"OH, yes, we have a wonderful climate," said the man from Southern Texas. "Why, only last season we raised a pumpkin so large that, after sawing it in two, my wife used the halves as cradles in which to rock the babies."

"Yes," replied the man from Boston; "but in my State it's a common thing to find three full-grown policemen asleep on one beat."

ONCE WAS ENOUGH.

A FARMER riding on a certain railroad asked the conductor on a recent trip: "How often do you kill a man on this 'ere line?"

"Just once," replied the conductor.

HIS DELAYED REWARD.

LEANING upon a two-tined pitchfork, Satan gleefully contemplated the new arrival.

"So," observed the boss of the nether world, "you are the man who invented the long hatpin?"

"Yes, sir," replied the quivering wretch, "I am the man."

"Quite enough. Imps, hurl him into Retort No. 978,765!"

TANGLED HUSBANDS AND UNKNOWN LOVE

As They Appear in Fritzi Scheff's Show at the Shubert

Published by permiss[illegible]

"M'LLE ROSITA" is the name of the three-act comic opera by Victor Herbert in which Fritzi Scheff is now playing at the Shubert Theatre in this city, but she is better known as plain Rose throughout the soothing presentation.

Her father, Aristide Boutonniere, the keeper of a Paris flower shop, agrees with Adolphe, Comte de Paravante, that she should become the nobleman's bride, but the aged father of the doddering Count strenuously objects to his son marrying beneath his station. To elevate her is the question that the Count solves by offering 500,000 francs to his friend, Philippe, the Marquis de Montreuville, who is about to sail for Algiers, if he will marry the girl and then leave the country. Philippe who is already in love with the girl, consents, believing that the bride is Angelique, the sister of Rose's father. The condition of the marriage is that Philippe must remain away for three months.

Philippe jumps at the opportunity because he is heavily in debt, signs the book in the civil marriage and immediately sets sail without seeing the bride, Rose, who also readily consents to the marriage rather than sacrifice herself to the Count Paravente.

It is not until the three months are nearly up that she is informed by the Count himself of the plot, and then her father insists upon the divorce on the grounds of desertion that she may marry the Count, he having attained the title of Marquis. She refuses, declaring that the Marquis, whatever he may look like, is a perfect husband because of his continual absence and the way he lavishes money upon her.

The day before the end of three months Philippe returns to win and woo Rose, believing, of course, that he is the husband of Angelique, Rose's aunt, who is in love with the Count and threatens breach of promise proceedings if he does not marry her. When Philippe and Rose meet accidentally they recall the meeting in the flower shop. Both reluctantly confess that they are married, but that the next day they will be free. Philippe grows suspicious and demands to know who Rose is, to which his friend replies, telling him that she is his own wife.

Rose becomes infuriated, declaring Philippe to be a vagabond and offers herself to the Count, but at the last moment Philippe compels her to listen to his pleadings, in which he assures her that she was the one he loved all the time, and then Rose surrenders. Stripped of its tuneful lyrics, the dialogue is given below:

The bargain has been [illegible] the latter's [illegible], then secures for her [illegible] tween Paravente and Rose's father for divorce and [illegible] her himself—the father her marriage to the former, but she does not know it. Other suitors appear and Paravente drives them away.

ROSE—By what right did you drive them away?

PARAVENTE—Right? Every right. But, of course, you don't understand —that is—as yet.

ROSE—I wish you would not make yourself so ridiculous.

PARAVENTE—I know it is ridiculous—but I can't help it. I love you. I have asked my father and your father to consent to our marriage. Your father has consented, and I am only waiting to hear—Oh, joy! here is a letter! 'Tis love's reprieve! Bless his heart! There's a father-in-law for you! You'll love him, I'm sure.

ARISTIDE—We both shall.

Exit Paravente and Aristide. Enter Philippe while Rose is speaking.

ROSE—Don't include me in the love feast. Romance, I think, is extinct.

PHILIPPE—A pretty girl like you should not be a cynic.

ROSE—I'm not—but I'm very practical. I've studied men.

PHILIPPE—I wish you knew me better.

ROSE—I wish I did. No, I don't think you'd wear well. None of them do.

PHILIPPE—But I think you could trust me.

Philippe, who is desperately in debt, is alone on the stage when Paravente enters. The father of the latter has refused him his consent to marry a flower girl and Paravente hits on a scheme to marry Rose to Philippe so she can have being satisfied because she has thus become "noble." Philippe believes he is speaking of Angelique.

PARAVENTE—Ah, Marquis! Philippe, my friend! My brother! Will you marry my wife? I am madly in love with the most beautiful woman in the world. You should see her.

PHILIPPE—I have seen [illegible] thought her a rather peevish sort of person. She told me of your engagement and conveyed the idea that she was marrying you for spite.

PARAVENTE—You are wrong. (He then tells Philippe that he knows him to be in need of money.)

PHILIPPE—If you were [illegible] plaint [illegible] be more specific.

PARAVENTE—If you [illegible] Mlle. Boutonniere and promise to stay away from Paris three months I will give you an order on my bank for half a million francs.

PHILIPPE—I will [illegible]

(Philippe goes to Aristide [illegible] him to become his father [illegible])

ARISTIDE—Your father [illegible] talking about yourself?

PHILIPPE—Of course [illegible] Philippe Auguste [illegible], Marquis de Montreuville [illegible] of your daughter.

ARISTIDE—My daughter [illegible]

PHILIPPE—Your daughter [illegible] rage. Do you consent?

ARISTIDE—[illegible] Don't I [illegible] Marquis?

PARAVENTE—[illegible] marry a Marquis, and he's doing it to oblige me. In three months Rose can divorce him for desertion.

ARISTIDE—Why, confound you! [illegible] Still it's not a bad idea. In fact, it seems a very simple way.

The marriage is so arranged as to be performed by a notary, neither bride nor bridegroom seeing the other and Philippe going at once aboard a troop ship for Algiers. Just at the last he remembers the fair face of Rose and hesitates.

PARAVENTE—Don't leave me in the lurch, I beg, if you're a friend of mine. The notary is here.

PHILIPPE (after signing books)—Inform my bride I'm gone to sea. I wish her luck.

Exit. Just as he is gone Rose enters.

ROSE—I'll wed the Marquis as you say. That seems to me the [illegible] way that I'll get rid of [illegible] Paravente)

NOTARY—Then sign.

ROSE—And now [illegible] hand.

ARISTIDE—He's [illegible]

ROSE—Then [illegible] I'm free.

GOOD STORIES TOLD IN BOSTON

Got His Chance

Some member of that famous East Boston organization, the "Oogah Wallahs," passed this one along till it reached the City Club dining hall.

DURING the Winter a certain East Boston business man visited Milton, Queen's County, Nova Scotia, and put up at a small hotel located in that town.

"You come from Boston, eh?" asked the proprietor of the place, surveying his guest.

"Yes," was the reply.

"Know anyone up there who can run a hotel?"

"Sure I do."

"Well, I want to git some one to run this place and I'm willing to pay twenty dollars a month to the right man. Can't you give me the address of some such chap. If he knows his business I might make it twenty-five a month."

That was the reason that Charles Belden, proprietor of the American House, and one of East Boston's wealthiest residents, received a letter a few days later which greatly astonished him by an offer that he go down to Milton and make good as a hotel manager at twenty-five dollars a month at the very most.

His Version

By C. A. Nelson, No. 67 James street, New Bedford, who was in town during the week.

HOW is this for some graveyard poetry?

A friend told me he copied it from a tombstone down on Cape Cod, during his Summer vacation.

"Here lies our wife, Selina Proctor,
Who ketched a cold and wouldn't doctor
She could not stay, she had to go.
Praise God from whom all blessing flow."

His Definition

Told in the wharfinger's office at T Wharf, where the skippers occasionally gather.

HE came down on the wharf and looked the vessels over. Some were sheathed in ice, and he grew enthusiastic over the bravery of the boys who went to sea in Winter weather.

"Ah," he cried, as he approached a weather-beaten chap clad in oil skins and shook the latter's gnarled hand, "I suppose you have been up against it?"

"No," was the reply, "I reckon I hain't. Least, not since I took ther pledge."

Different Methods

Rapid fire comment from Pemberton square.

FIRST LAWYER—I see there [illegible] case over in New York where [illegible] fellow has sued a young woman friend because her dog bit his leg.

Second Lawyer—That chap was lucky. Suppose she had pulled it?

Her Classification

By J. E. Samuels, prominent Providence insurance man, who occasionally visits Boston.

THE train was rushing over from New York and some folks in the diner were just getting comfortably seated for luncheon when a woman approached one of the tables, threw a book that lay upon the seat aside and dropped into the chair.

A moment later a man hurried up and protested:

"I beg your pardon, madam, but it is my seat. I was called into the Pullman and left my book here to show that the seat was taken."

The woman flashed out a look [illegible] "Do you know," she exclaimed, "that I am one of the director's wives?"

"I don't care, madam, if you are the director's only wife. I must insist on having my seat," was the reply. And he got it, too.

His Own Opinion

By William McGee, who used to pitch for Louisville and Worcester in the old days, but is now a resident of Boston

I WAS down in Fall River a few days ago and while there came upon a chap with whom I used to play ball in the New England League [illegible] years ago. He was down and out and more or less under the influence of the flowing bowl and I gave him a "panning."

He seemed to feel pretty bad about the way he had gone down the ladder and promised to take the pledge. Glancing around I saw a sign out marked "Mission."

"Here's your chance now," I said. "Go right in there and swear off now."

He entered the place and was gone so long that I went up and peered in. I could see him sitting all alone on the front settee. No one else was in the place, so I entered and addressed him.

"Well, did you sign the pledge?" I asked.

"Not yet," he replied. "I spoke to the chap in charge, but he went out."

"Where did he go?"

"I can't say for sure, but between you and me I think he went out to call a cop."

What It Cost One Young Man to Learn the Worth of a Faithful, Loyal Wife and Price the Wife Paid

By Bertram Lebhar

SYDNEY BLACK was quite sure that the lack of three hundred dollars was the only thing which stood in the way of his becoming a great lawyer.

Ruth, his wife, was equally confident that if it were not for that obstacle her husband would attain to great heights in the legal profession.

The money was needed to pay the tuition fees at the university evening law school—one hundred dollars per term for three years.

"If I could afford to take the course," declared Black to his wife, the light of ambition sparkling in his dark eyes and illuminating his swarthy face, "I could be a full fledged lawyer three years from now. Just think of it! Then I would throw up my present job, open up an office and practice the profession in which, I feel, I was born to command success.

"Inside of five years from my admission to the bar I should have a practice which would be the envy of many a lawyer who has been in the game for years. I feel sure of it. I have no fear of failure. The clients are bound to come in a rush as soon as I have demonstrated my ability."

Ruth nodded, her large, coal black eyes reflecting the glow of ambition which shone in his. "Yes, I am sure you would make out all right, dear. If we could only raise the money! I'm afraid we couldn't very well save it up out of your salary. In these days of high prices it is hard enough, as it is, to get along on eighteen dollars a week. Even by the most rigid economy——"

"It is out of the question—I know that," he interrupted her almost savagely. "No need to rub it in, Ruth, by reminding me how little I earn. I'm doing the best I can." He frowned gloomily. "I suppose I must put aside my ambition and go on being a bill clerk in a wholesale grocery house for the rest of my days. I guess I won't be the first unlucky wretch whose life has been spoiled by the lack of a few dollars capital."

"Couldn't you borrow the first year's fee, Syd?" she inquired wistfully. "Our luck may change before the next comes due."

He shook his head hopelessly. "Who on earth would lend me a hundred dollars without security?"

"Well, there's my engagement ring," she faltered. "Maybe if you were to pawn it, Syd, you might get that much on it."

He gave her a grateful, loving look. "You dear, unselfish, little wife. Yes, I guess that stone would pass for a hundred at least. I paid more than two hundred for it originally. But, Ruthie, I couldn't think of letting you do it. It's the only decent piece of jewelry you've got and I'd feel like a beastly cad if I were to let you part with it."

"Don't be a silly boy," she retorted, "I can get along all right without a diamond ring. And, besides, it won't be like parting with it altogether. We'll get it out of pawn when—when you win your first big lawsuit."

He allowed her to persuade him after a little further argument. The next morning he took the ring to a loan office and exchanged it for five twenty-dollar bills.

As soon as he had left the flat, Ruth donned her hat and coat and hurried down to the street. It was half-past six that evening before she returned. She looked very tired and worn, but there was a happy smile upon her pale face.

She was just starting to cook the evening meal when her husband came home. He was somewhat surprised to find that he had to wait so long for his supper, for she generally had everything in readiness by the time he arrived. "Hurry it as much as possible, please dear," he said. "I want to go around to the law school to register. I am so impatient to enroll that I can scarcely wait."

At the supper table he noticed how pale and worn she appeared. "What's the matter, girlie?" he inquired, anxiously, "you look all played out."

"I am all right," she answered, with a sweet smile. "I have a bit of a headache—that's all."

"You need fresh air. Have you been out to-day?"

"No," she answered, her eyes downcast. "I have not left the flat at all."

"Ah! That's what's the matter," he exclaimed. "You should make it a point to take a little walk every day, Ruthie. Surely you can spare the time from your household duties."

The next evening when he came home from his work he found that again she was behindhand with the preparation of the evening meal. He frowned with vexation and impatience. "Now, really, Ruth," he said reproachfully, "you must do better than this in future. I've got to get away each evening in order to get to my law school on time. I don't want to miss any part of the lectures. Please try to be more prompt."

"It shan't occur again, dear," she replied him meekly. "I—er—the gas stove wouldn't work properly to-day." She had reasons of her own for not telling him that the reason the supper was delayed was that she had entered the flat only four minutes before he rang the bell.

He bolted down his food and kissed her a hurried good-by. "I'm sorry, dear, to have to leave you all alone evenings," he said tenderly. "I'm afraid my studying law is going to be rather tough on you, isn't it."

"No matter, Syd," she answered, smiling at him bravely. "It is only for three years. We must be willing to make sacrifices for the sake of the future. Think how proud and happy I am going to be later on when you are a great lawyer. That will be more than enough compensation for all that I have to give up now."

"Please go away and leave me alone with my dead."

He bent down and kissed her. "My plucky little wife!" he cried, taking her in his arms. "What a splendid girl you are! I'm afraid I don't really deserve such a treasure as you."

"Foolish boy!" she murmured, patting him caressingly on the shoulder; and, she added, pleadingly, "you'll hurry home just as soon as law school is over, won't you, dear?"

"What a question!" he replied, reproachfully. "You can rest assured that I'll leave the classroom each evening like a fire engine horse responding to a third alarm."

On his way to the law school his thoughts were all of Ruth—how sweet and self-sacrificing she was and how fortunate he was to possess such a good wife—but half an hour later he forgot all about her as he sat in a big lecture room, the centre of a group of earnest students, listening to a bespectacled professor who was giving him his first lesson in law, and taking many notes.

Suddenly he was disturbed by his right-hand neighbor plucking gently at his coat sleeve. So absorbed in the professor's discourse was he that he was angered by this distraction and turned with an indignant frown under the impression that it was a man who was thus annoying him.

To his great astonishment he discovered that his right-hand neighbor was a woman, a very comely young woman, blond haired, blue-eyed, attired in a natty, tailor-made suit which fitted her well rounded figure like a glove.

"I beg your pardon," she whispered, but would you mind lending me your pocket knife. I am sorry to disturb you, but I have broken the point of my pencil."

"Won't you let me sharpen it for you?" he offered courteously. She handed him the pointless pencil with a sweet smile.

That was the beginning of Sydney Black's acquaintance with Miss Dorothy Root, freshman at the university evening law school.

He did not exchange any further words with her that night; nor did she, then, occupy much space in his thoughts. He merely said to himself, as he hurried home to Ruth, "It is rather extraordinary that a girl as pretty as that should possess enough brains to study law, and any desire to do so." Then he dismissed her from his mind.

When, later that night he was telling his wife all about the law school and how much he had enjoyed the first lecture he did not mention the fact that his right-hand neighbor was a woman. He knew that Ruth, the most loyal, devoted wives, possessed a jealous nature. He was afraid that she might be worried if she learned that he had started in his study of law by sharpening a pencil for a blond-haired, blue-eyed, very comely young woman who wore a natty tailor-made gown and smiled most sweetly as she thanked him. Yes, Ruth would probably be jealous if she heard that—needlessly so, of course, he told himself.

For the first three weeks of law school Black continued to rush from the classroom as soon as the lecture was over and hurry home to his wife with all possible speed. Then he began to be less prompt in getting home.

One night he was two hours late in arriving at the neat little flat. Ruth was in such a frenzy of anxiety that she was just about to go out to notify the police to send out a general alarm for him. He explained that he had been detained by an extra lecture at the law school. He avoided her eyes as he offered this explanation.

As a matter of fact, he had been to escort Miss Dorothy Root to her home. That was the beginning of his infatuation for the fair girl who sat at his right hand in the lecture room.

As the weeks passed by, his infatuation increased. He fought against it as hard as he could, realizing that it would almost kill poor little dark-eyed, white-faced Ruth if the truth should become known to her.

It was no use, however. The mind of Dorothy Root was as brilliant as her face was beautiful and the combination proved irresistible for the fascinated young man who had fallen a victim to her charms.

He escorted her to her home nearly every night now, explaining to the wife who watched and waited for him at the front window of the little flat, that the study hours at the law school had been increased, which made it impossible for him to get home earlier.

And every time he reached home after one of those trips he looked at pale, thin little Ruth and could not help thinking how poorly she contrasted with the dashing, brilliant, young beauty whose laughing "good-night" was still ringing in his ears.

Every day his wife seemed to grow more faded, worn and commonplace; every day the girl who sat beside him at law school appeared in his eyes more irresistibly charming.

The other students soon noticed his infatuation and, with good-natured grins, predicted that there would be a class romance before graduation day. They did not see anything amiss in the incident, for they did not suspect that he already had a wife.

To the girl justice she, too, was entirely in ignorance of the fact that the handsome, swarthy young man who was more interesting to her than any other fellow in the class, was a married man. During those rides he did not mention to her anything about pale-faced little Ruth who was waiting and watching at the front window of the neat little flat.

At length there came a day when Sydney Black felt that he could no longer withstand the yearning to tell Dorothy Root that he loved her.

"I shall have to tell her the whole truth," he said to himself. "I shall confess that I am a married man and ask her to wait until—well, Ruth has always been unselfish. If I go to her and beg her to free me I don't think she will stand in the way of my life's happiness."

It was a Saturday afternoon, and the wholesale grocery house in which he was employed closed at 4 o'clock. He went direct from the office to the law school. There were no lectures on Saturdays, but he knew that he would find Dorothy there, for she always spent the afternoons in the law library looking up cases.

At 4:45 he and she left the building together, and as they walked he said to himself, "Now is the time to tell her."

"Dorothy," he began, "there is something——" He never finished that sentence. He was interrupted by hoarse shouts from several men, the piercing screams of women and the distant shriek of a fire engine's siren. People were running across the square, crying out as they ran, and pointing wildly upward.

"Dorothy turned and her little gloved hand clutched his arm fearfully. "Oh, look!" she gasped, "it's a fire. Good heavens! How terrible!"

He turned, too, and saw smoke and flame coming from the top floors of a tall factory building adjoining the law school, and women and young girls, terror-maddened, leaning from the windows.

They ran with the crowd toward that terrible scene, their horror-fraught voices joining the chorus of those who were yelling to the poor, doomed wretches not to jump—that the firemen were coming.

As everybody knows, those warnings were not heeded—could not be heeded—and as the frenzied women hurled themselves from the high windows to the sidewalks, Dorothy placed her hands over her eyes and gave vent to a moan of anguish.

But her companion did not cover his eyes. He was gazing, a look of horror upon his pallid, upturned countenance, at the slender figure of a young woman who stood on the ledge of a window on the ninth floor, her body poised as though about to leap.

"Ruth!" he shrieked. "Ruth, my darling wife! Stay where you are for a moment longer! Help is coming! For God's sake, don't jump!"

It was only a brief second that she stood swaying on the window sill, but it was long enough for him to realize how much he loved her; and his infatuation for the cowering girl who stood beside him with her hands covering her eyes died at that moment.

Then, as a puff of red-tinged smoke blew out of the window, Ruth, poor, pale-faced, faded, worn Ruth, extended her arms toward heaven and leaped, landing at his feet.

As he knelt on the sidewalk beside her and pillowed her head on his arm he noticed a little, square manila pay envelope clutched in her broken right hand.

She opened her eyes and smiled up at him bravely. "Syd," she whispered, "you will find a hundred dollars in the second bureau drawer at home. It is to pay—your next year's—law school—fees. I earned—every cent of it—stitching—shirt waists—up there. That's—why—your—suppers — were — sometimes — late — dear——"

As her eyes closed her husband fell, sobbing, over her.

Dorothy Root touched him gently on the shoulder.

"Please go away and leave me alone with my dead," he said in a cold, hard voice.

Mirandy on the Idle Housewife

By Dorothy Dix

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

"LAND alive," exclaimed Mirandy, "but you has to go away from home to hear de news. I'se sort of been in de way of thinkin' dat I was a hard worked woman, an' I didn't know dat I was one of dese head, 'ristocrats what sits wid deir hands in deir laps, wid nuthin' to do but des rock deyselves, until Ma'y Jane read me in de paper what dat census man says about women what ain't got no occupation, sep'n bein' wives an' mothers.

"My sakes, but dat census man must be a wonder. I specs dat he was one of dem incubator babies what was des hatched out in a steam-heated flat, whar de meals come up on a dumb waiter, an' dat he never had no Ma, nor need a woman a-flyin' around de house doin' forty things at once.

"For dis is what dat man says. He says: 'We ain gwine to make de census ridiculous to please some housewives who thinks dat dey are employed when dey ain't. Nobody ain't employed who don't earn anything an' de housewife don't earn nuthin'. A man or woman earns jest as much as he or she gits in money.'

"Will you listen to dat? A housewife ain't employed. Well, maybe I ain't, but I sho' does go through de motions of lookin' employed.

"Now Ike, my ole man, he's employed, an' he wuss eight hours a day good an' steady, but in de mawnin, long befo' Ike is awake, I gits up an' gives de baby his milk, an' den I stirs around an' starts breakfast.

"When I gits de water bilin' for de coffee, an' de biskits made, an' de pork chops startin' to fry, I goes an' shakes Ike, who turns over on de odder side an' says: 'Go away, old woman, don't you wake me up yit for I ain't got to hurry to my work. You jest hustle along an' git breakfast, an' help my plates so I can eat in a hurry an' dat'll give me time to take one more snooze.'

"Den I goes an' wakes up Ma'y Jane an' Thomas Jefferson Abraham Lincoln, an' dresses little Teddy Roosevelt, an' betwixt an' between I sprints to de kitchen to see dat dere ain't nuthin' burnin' on de stove, an' de cookin' is coming on alright.

"Well, we has breakfast, an' den I gits Ike off to work, an' puts up his snack to eat at noon, an' sews on a couple of buttons, an' I hunts up Thomas Jefferson Abraham Lincoln's books dat he done lost an' his cap dat he done hung up under de bald, an' I sees dat he done washed behin' his ears an' blacked his shoes. Or I helps Ma'y Jane do up dat three-story pompadour of hers, an' tie a stiley bow on her bad, an' den I washes up de dishes an' cleans up de house, an' puts de baby to sleep, an' goes out an' buys de dinner, an' den I comes home an' settles down to de wuk of de day.

"If it's Monday hit's de washin', an' ef it's Tuesday hit's de ironin', an' ef hit's Saturday hit's de scrubbin' an' in de between days hit's makin' de fambly clothes, an' cookin' de fambly meals, an' squeezin' every dollar so tight hit makes de eagle squeel.

"Dey ain't no hours rest for me at noon, because, den I has got to be on de jump givin' de chilleu somethin' to eat an' settin' 'em back off to school, an' at night, after dinner, when Ike gets down to smoke his pipe I'se cleanin' up de dinner dishes an' scrapin' de pots, an' long after he is asleep I'se settin' up puttin' a patch on little Teddy Roosevelt's knee or makin' a frock for Ma'y Jane to wear to de picnic.

"Maybe dat census man is right, an' doin' dem things dat I is done ain't bein' employed, but all dat I've got to say is dis—if wives an' mothers is idle, we is de a lot mo' hours a day dan de employed is employed.

"But hit's funny how dem dat ain't tried hit thinks dat runnin' a fambly is a job you can do wid one hand tied behind you. Now Ike, he's always sayin' dat he wisht dat he didn't have nuthin' to do but jest to stay home an' take care of de house an' mind the babe. Leastways he used to say dat, but he don't now, for one time I gave him his dose.

"Yassum, I cert'nly did. One Fourth of July, when he had a day off, I jest up an' dressed myself an' go off on an excursion an' stayed a day an' a night, an' I left Ike to wrastle wid de chilleu an' de cookin' an' de house cleanin'. Well, sir, when I got back dere was dirty dishes strewed from one end of de place to de odder an' de furnitcher looked lak a cyclone had tore hit all up, an' Ike was dat frazzled out dat he was right white around de gills.

"Mirandy,' says he, 'if I'se pulled dat baby out of de wash tub once I'se done hit four million times, an' I'se buttered seven million slices of bread for little Teddy Roosterevelt, an' he's still hongery, an' I'se stood over dat cook stove until I was ready to drap, and I'se wore out four brooms on dis floor, an' whipped de chilleu an' kicked de cat, an' I'se dat exhausted dat do only way dat I se kept up my strength is by makin' Thomas Jefferson Abraham Lincoln keep de path hot between here an' de corner saloon.

"'Gimme,' he says, 'something light an' easy to do, lak totin bricks in a hod up to de top of a ten-story buildin'.'

"Yassum, hit's because we do a lot of wuk dat no man could stand up to dat has got us women fooled into thinkin' dat we is employed, when de census man says we ain't. But he's right about one thing, when he says dere ain't nobody dat wuks as cheap as a wife. Dere ain't no 'sputtin' dat, an' dat's de reason dat dere ain't scarcely no widdowers. An' when one dies an' Mr. Widower has to dig down in his pocket to pay somebody to do his cookin' an' washin', an' mendin', an' baby tendin', he des hikes out an' marriges agin.

"But I sho' would hit to know if dat census man's wife thinks she is employed or not."

Funny Parody Contest

(Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

THE City Life Section's Funny Parody Contest grows more popular each week. If you have not sent in a funny parody, it is high time you did. You will laugh while you are writing it. Try it and see. REMEMBER, YOU GET YOUR PAY BY MAKING OTHERS LAUGH. The parody must be ORIGINAL, funny, not too long, and on some simple, well-known poem. This contest is as big a joke as the poems it inspires.

Here are the best ones of last week:

THE LAST WORD
(Parody on "The Lost Chord.")

Seated one day at the table
I was restless and ill at ease,
And my fingers wandered idly
Over the pale Swiss cheese.
I knew not what she was saying,
Or what I was suffering then,
But I heard the noise of talking
Like the sound of a frightened hen

It flooded the crimson gaslight
Like a sunset down on the farm,
And it dampened my fevered spirit
With a touch that was never calm.
It brought me both pain and sorrow,
Like fire and murder and strife;
It was the Whole Thing, not the echo,
The talk I heard from my wife.

She jumbled and perplexed meanings
Into a maze without peace,
And trembled, but never gave silence—
I knew she never would cease.
I have sought, but I seek it vainly,
That one word divine
Which comes from my wife's vocal organ
And never will be mine.

It may be that death's bright angel
My constant prayer will have heard,
But I know that this side of heaven
I never will have the last word

THE CHARGE OF THE NIGHT BRIGADE
(Parody on the "Light Brigade.")

Half a dime, half a dime
Half a dime only,
All into the Subway
Poured the vast hundreds.
"Forward the Night Brigade!
Charge for the cars!" he said.
All into the Subway
Poured the vast hundreds.

At last the cars they've won
And on the straps are hung,
Forward and backward flung.
Each dreaded station
Pushed in unwelcome scores
Through end and middle doors,
While each his neighbor jaws
In desperation,
So, till they reach their goal
And liberation.

This one crawled, sad and worn
This with his collar gone,
Filled with dejection,
As he his way doth wend
Homeward, his face to mend,
Vows, "All things have an end,
Wait till election!"

A GARDEN VARIETY.
(Parody on "Excelsior.")

It was the busy hour of four,
When from a city hardware store
Emerged a gentleman who bore
1 spade,
1 hoe,
1 wheelbarrow.

From thence our hero promptly went
Into a seed establishment
And for the following things his money spent:
1 pack of bulbs,
1 quart of mixed seeds,
1 job lot of shrubs.

His garden now is under way,
And if he should be lucky, say,
He'll have, about the last of May,
1 squash vine
1 egg plant,
1 radish.

A New Weapon —THE HANDKERCHIEF

By Wex Jones

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

EVERYONE may need a weapon for defense at some time or another, so the discovery that an ordinary handkerchief may be used as one is welcome to those who live in cities likely at any moment to be submerged in a crime wave.

The discovery of the handkerchief as a weapon gives the following method for capturing a man who tries to kick him: Open handkerchief around the man's foot as it rises in the air, catch the ends together, pull, and the man will fall softly.

This was enough to show the value of the discovery, and after careful experiments the City Life Section's corps of athletic experts have formulated the following rules for the employment of the handkerchief in almost any emergency:

IF CLUTCHED AROUND THE THROAT FROM BEHIND: Twist your head around until you can see your assailant's face. If he appears to be in earnest, pull out your handkerchief and tie it around his eyes. When he is thus blindfolded, it will be easy enough to avoid his punches, and to do it until aid comes from the nearest police station.

TO RAVELLE A MAN WITH A GUN: There are two methods of doing it. One is to tie a loop in your handkerchief, loop the gun and jerk it out of the man's hands. As the gun may be accidentally exploded by this method, it is preferable to pull the handkerchief into a hard ball and jam it in the muzzle of the gun, which is then considered harmless.

IF ATTACKED BY A DOG: Quickly knot the handkerchief about the dog's tail and swing him around your head until he grows giddy. In this condition it will be helpless and you can do nothing but chase his own tail in a circle.

TO STOP A TRAIN: Stand on the track and wave your handkerchief in the air. The train will probably stop. If not, your insurance company will suffer a loss.

TO AVOID FALLING IN A SUBWAY CAR WHEN YOU CANNOT OBTAIN A STRAP: Take the ends of your handkerchief in one hand and run it around the neck of a tall guard. This will serve almost as well as a regular strap.

IF TUMBLING DOWN STAIRS: Quickly—the quicker the better—knot your handkerchief around the banister and hang on tightly. Unless the latter injunction is carefully obeyed, the scheme is of no practical value.

TO CAPTURE A BURGLAR: First detect a burglar in your house. Then pick up your trusty handkerchief and advance stealthily upon him. Throw him to the floor by pulling his legs from under him with your weapon, and then, with a lightning-like movement, bind his feet together. This done, take the handkerchief from his feet and tie his hands with it. Your capture is then thoroughly trussed, and may be placed in the cellar until wanted.

TO SAVE YOURSELF FROM DROWNING: Should you fall overboard take your handkerchief and look around for a reliable fish, avoiding such as flounders, which usually stay near the bottom of the sea. Having found one which will stay at the surface, tie your handkerchief around it and let it support you until help arrives. If you fall overboard in a bathing suit you will probably have no handkerchief with you and will drown miserably. So do not fall overboard when wearing a bathing suit.

TO SAVE YOURSELF WHEN FALLING FROM AN AIRSHIP: The method of doing this is similar to the above. Tie your handkerchief around the legs of a parachute and let it flutter gently to earth with you.

TO STOP A RUNAWAY HORSE: Flip him gently on the left ear with your handkerchief, and continue the treatment until he stops. Then carry him quietly back to where he started from.

[NOTE: It may seem from this that the handkerchief is invincible, and so it is, save in one respect—it cannot resist the attacks of a laundry.]

Grin's Modern Fairy Tales

The Prince and the Beggar Maid

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

ONCE upon a time there was a Handsome Young Prince who had every thing except brains. At times his rough old Father would wonder what he could do to make the Prince show signs of intelligence.

"Do not fear," said his Godmother to the Prince's Father, "all will be well."

'But he really isn't smart, you know," stormed the Father.

B. patient," cautioned the Godmother, who had waited for three decrees nisi and knew all about patience; "some woman will make him smart!"

Alas, the good Father knew not how true the Godmother spoke

It so happened that in a distant city was a little Beggar Maid of great beauty. A man named Rosenthal noted her beauty and gave her a nice pink tight-fitting costume, and allowed her to sing and march on his stage at the Royal Theatre. Shortly after this the Prince was occupying a box at the theatre when he ... d the Beggar Maid. She was the third from the ... in the front row.

All at once the Prince was smitten. "She is a dream!" he exclaimed to the Lord Chancellor, who sat with him.

"A nightmare!" ... ted the Lord Chancellor, who had seen them with their make-up off.

But the Prince was not to be balked. (He was not a Balkan Prince.) 'I will see her," he declared Mister Rosenthal gladly promised an introduction, as he was planning to have his wife presented at court the next week, and did not wish to antagonize the Prince. With great tact and cunning he brought about the introduction.

"She is so shy and modest and fearful, your royal highness," explained Mister Rosenthal to the Prince, bowing so low his head hid for a moment the two-ounce diamond in his bosom, "but I think that for your royal highness' sake I will attempt to persuade her to meet you," whereupon the kind Mister Rosenthal bowed low once more and departed to the dressing rooms.

"Hey, you Gibby!" he shouted, and the Beggar Maid, wrapping one of her gloves about her to keep her from the draught, came to the door and said sweetly:

"Well, what is it now, another fine?"

'Sh-h-h!" whispered Mister Rosenthal, excitedly, "don't be a bonehead; look your prettiest, the Prince wants to meet you."

"Drag me to him?" exclaimed the timid Beggar Maid, and in five minutes she was in the rear room of the royal box talking with the Prince.

The Prince was so happy that night, dreaming of the modest little Beggar Maid and her tight-fitting pink costume, while Mister Rosenthal promptly arranged to make Gibby, for that was her stage name, the Leading Lady. But he did not allow her quite so much costume.

The weeks went on and grew into months. The Prince remaining madly in love with little Gibby, the one-time Beggar Maid. Every night after the performance he would hand her a bunch of pearls or a group of rubies or a sprig of diamonds, and the Prince was extremely happy, while little Gibby was simply tickled to death.

Then one dark, rainy day the Keeper of the Exchequer and the Lord Chancellor and the Royal Secretary all visited the strong boxes of the kingdom and found not sufficient funds wherewith to purchase 1911 model automobiles. After a hasty consultation they decided that as long as the Prince loved Gibby there would be no rake-off for them, and so they plotted, as the hangers-on about royal courts always plot.

While they plotted the Prince was merely potted until the day came when the soldiers drove him away from his kingdom and changed the government. In that manner the taxes of the populace were more equally divided among the officials.

Even to this day as Gibby, the modest little Beggar Maid, prances and kicks about the brilliant stage, she remembers the Prince. She laughs gaily as she adorns herself with eleven or twelve pounds of the diamonds, and rubies, and pearls, and emeralds, and such things, and emerges from the immense chateau he once gave her.

And so little Gibby lived happily ever after.

THE END.

OUR COZY CORNER---Foolish Questions Answered Here

MANY a dear girl would be happily married but for one thing—Opportunity. But, on the other hand, many a girl would be happily single but for the fact that she had this same "Opportunity" to get married. Thus, catching them going and coming, your Aunt Dotty will answer a few appeals for advice from two classes, "Wish-they-were" and "Wish-they-were-not."

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have been married four times and am about to be married again. I want very much to wear a white gown and bridal veil, but I have heard somewhere that bridal veils are only for first marriages. What are bridal veils for, anyway?

PERSA VER ANCE.

Bridal veils, Persa, are supposed to hide the blushes of the sweet young brides. If you think, after living with four men and in the act of grabbing a fifth, that you have a single, solitary blush left, for the love of Adonis, Persa, do not cover it up with a veil.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have a friend who has been divorced three times, and she makes fun of men for living with the same husband all the time. She says it isn't smart? How about it? MRS. AMY M'FUDDLE.

Your friend, Mrs. McFuddle, is a simpleton. It takes a smart woman to live with the same husband all the time. Any fool can be a quitter.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have a sweetheart I admire very much, but mother objects to him because he does not dress swell enough. He owns an ice company and a coal yard and has a half interest in an automobile factory. I would like your advice. MARY GOODE.

My dear, fortunate Mary, tell your mother to remember what a yap your father was when she married him. Also marry your sweetheart, even if he does not dress swell. You can then do enough swell dressing for the whole family.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I am going with a pretty girl, but an awful flirt. I saw her bow to a man the other day. Please advise me. REGINALD MUSHKNOBB.

Shake her, Regg-e; she is a forward creature, and who knows but some day she might actually speak to another man, or perhaps even shake hands with him.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have three sweethearts, all in business. One runs a millinery store, another owns a college ice and ice cream and confectionery shop, and the third owns a big place where only French gowns of the latest design are sold. Which one, Dear Aunt Dotty, shall I marry? I forgot to mention that all three have proposed. LOTTA LUCKE.

You've got me going, Lotta. I've been puzzling on this a week and I will have to give it up.

THE CARE OF CHILDREN.

EVERY time there is a wedding some acquaintance of either or both victims always springs that ancient wheeze about hoping all their troubles will be "little ones." That settles it. In a majority of cases, when anything like that is wished on a couple, it "takes." For this reason your Aunt Dotty has many inquiries for advice regarding the care of children.

MRS. LIZZIE BIZZY—The next time Hortense sprinkles the cat with the contents of the sugar bowl to play he is a piece of frosted cake, lay her (Hortense) face downward and apply wooden side of hair brush as per diagram. (This diagram is personal and should be destroyed after studying it.)

FOND MOTHER—You are needlessly alarmed. What if Morris has swallowed your watch? It will run down by to-morrow and then the annoying ticking sound will cease.

HENRY PICKKE—No; you are not expected to make the children's dresses. Washing, dressing and feeding them, together with taking care of them throughout the day, is certainly your share. If you were to engage a beautiful nurse girl to help you, there is no doubt that your wife would take more interest in them and not ask you to sleep in the nursery.

MRS. GWENDOLIN M'PHIRST—Try a little soap and water for the dark circles on the child's wrists. No doubt you are right about the baby. If you had closed those safety pins he doubtless wouldn't have cried so much during the night.

HUNCHES FOR HUSBANDS

WATCH your wife closely. If she fails to brush the threads off your sleeve or beg you to shave oftener and does not get jealous when she meets you buying your stenographer a noon-day lunch, get busy at once and find out who the other man is.

RESTLESSNESS on the part of your wife at breakfast, traces of tears, unusual affection, mushy conversation and a few remarks about the new Spring outfit her neighbor has should not be overlooked. To avoid storm, get out your check-book and ask, hastily, "How much?"

WHENEVER you find your wife's mother in the house upon your return from the office and note her Etah glare, and also see signs of violent weeping in your wife's face and feel a cold, distant, shivery atmosphere, feel hastily but surreptitiously in your inside coat pocket, as the chances are your wife has found a letter there signed "Your Own Phyllis," and you must give your wife credit for being able to remember that her own name is Mabel. If you can explain that, you are a wonder. Your Aunt Dotty cannot help you.

WHEN YOU bring home company for dinner, without previous warning to your wife, and she gets behind the door and makes grotesque signs, hastily excuse yourself, go out the back way and beat it for the delicatessen.

HEART-TO-HEART TALKS.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I am 5 feet 11¾ inches tall, but I weigh only 94 pounds. How can I increase my weight?

MISS NELLIE GNARROW.

You are so tall your food doubtless becomes discouraged before it reaches your digestive organs. The quickest method of gaining weight is to make pockets in your skirts and fill them with buck shot.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I live at home with mamma, who is too busy cooking and sweeping and washing dishes and floors and setting table and doing such things to advise me, so I appeal to you. Do you know of any exercise that will develop my neck and arms?

SUSAN SHIRKER.

Do your mother's work for six months. This will develop your arms and neck, also your disposition. We knew a girl who did this who also caught a wealthy young man when he learned she was running the house.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have several wrinkles between my eyes. What shall I do to remove them?

MRS. IMA CATTE.

Try smiling at your husband for a change.

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—I have rings under my eyes and fear I am so unattractive that I will never win a husband. What will I do? MISS VERRA WORREDD.

You mean that with rings under your eyes you get no rings around your fingers? Yes, thanks; quite clear. Get a job as a telephone girl and "ring off."

DEAR AUNT DOTTY—At a theatre dinner a week ago my husband spilled a plate of consomme in the lap of my new French gown. He seemed alarmed, but I said, "It is all right, dear; I would have smiled had any one else done it, and as I think more of you than any one else, why should I complain?" My husband left the room tearing his hair, and now they have put me in a home for the demented. What shall I do?

Stop telling such whoppers. If, however, by any chance, this is the truth, they were justified in putting you in an asylum, for you are doubtless the first woman, sane or otherwise, to make such a break.

BEAUTY HINTS.

MISS DE SPOTTE—For those freckles, make up the following:

1 ounce vitriol.
1 ounce iodine.
½ ounce hydrochloric acid.
9 grammes phosphorus.

Apply to each freckle, separately, taking care not to let the lotion run over the edge of the freckle. In about a week you will not care whether you have freckles or chilblains.

MISS CROOKER—"I am heartbroken because I have bow [illegible] that is, my limbs are somewhat curved." How natural this appeal sounds, Miss Crooker. I have received many of them. Here are a few simple rules:

Do not join a burlesque company.
Do not swing in a hammock or a swing.
Wear long skirts, heavily weighted.
Do not go into the surf.
Do not ride a bicycle.
DO NOT WEAR A HAREM SKIRT.

Further than that, my dear Miss Crooker, we must leave you to your own discretion.

SABRINA—You should not be needlessly alarmed; many women who were mere girls during the Civil War now have gray hair. Try this on your thatch:

Barrel of one fountain pen.
Fill same with dull black Jap-a-lac.
1 can white varnish.

Dip each hair separately in the barrel of the fountain pen filled with the Jap-a-lac and when dry apply the white varnish. This will prevent the black from wearing off. If you do this every morning no one would ever know you had gray hair.

A Funny Bit of Conversation Between the Vaudeville Favorites, The COURTENAY SISTERS

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

FLORENCE—Hello! Fay. I heard that new young man of yours called you up on the telephone.

FAY—Yes, he proposed to me over the 'phone and wanted to send me a diamond ring.

FLORENCE—And what did you say?

FAY—I said: "Ring off! Party engaged!"

FLORENCE—Why, I heard that joke when I was ten years old

FAY—My, what a memory some girls have!

FLORENCE—You have the meanest disposition. If you were my husband I'd poison you

FAY—If I were your husband I'd take it!

FLORENCE—Well, I guess you never saw my husband

FAY—No, I never could see your husband. By the way, what is the name of your present husband?

FLORENCE—My present husband! He is the only husband I ever had, and his name is Bush

FAR—Oh, I understand. Then his family tree is only a bush.

FLORENCE—Nonsense

FAY—Listen, Florence.

FLORENCE—What is it?

FAY—Your husband's name is Bush

FLORENCE—Yes'

FAY—Then your name is Mrs Bush?

FLORENCE—Certainly.

FAY—Florence, whisper! How are all the little shrubs?

FLORENCE—There are no shrubs. We are not running a nursery

FAY—Why, I thought you were interested in horticulture!

FLORENCE—I was chairman of the W. C. T. U. Arbor Day Committee

FAY—And I suppose that it was your office to set out a lot of trees on Arbor Day

FLORENCE—That's the idea, exactly

FAY—Such a committee of women can never successfully set out a lot of trees

FLORENCE—And pray tell me why?

FAY—Well, they would plant the tree all right, but then they would start to fight, and in trying to get at the root of the matter the poor tree would die By the way, Florence, do you believe in love at first sight?

FLORENCE—Oh, sometimes. Why? Have you fallen in love?

FAY—Yes, I was riding in the park the other day and a swell young chap dashed by in a big touring car A friend of mine recognized him and said to me: "Fay, that fellow has twelve million dollars in his own name and he is not married." I fell in love with him at once.

FLORENCE—Fay, do you believe in dreams

FAY—They say that they go by opposites, but it isn't true. I showed my fellow a dream of a hat the other day and he had to go buy the real thing

FLORENCE—Well, the other night I dreamed that I was dead, and ——.

FAY—And the heat woke you up. That's nothing, I went to sleep and dreamed that I was awake, and the funniest thing about it all was that I woke up and found my self asleep.

FLORENCE—Ah, I love to dream of romance!

FAY—And I love to dream of money. Last night I dreamed I had found $30,000

FLORENCE—Why didn't you put it in the bank before you woke up

FAY—I did. At least, that is what I dreamed, only when I woke up I saw by the papers that the bank I had dreamed I had put my money in had failed. So, you see, I was $30,000 ahead of the game.

FLORENCE—Oh, well, there is nothing safe nowadays, anyway

FAY—Nothing except poached eggs

FLORENCE—That's the only way to order eggs.

FAY—I ordered some the other day. I told the waiter that I wanted them poached and no other way. He went out into the kitchen and I heard them breaking eggs for the next half hour. Pretty soon the waiter came back, with a tired look, and said: "Say, Miss, wouldn't you just as soon have a steak?"

FLORENCE And what did you say?

FAY—I said: "Under the circumstances I wouldn't take a chance on a steak. Bring me some Roquefort cheese. That's the only kind of food that improves with age."

FLORENCE—Have you heard of the new parody contest in the City Life section?

FAY—Yes, it's a good idea. I'm going to send one in FLORENCE—I don't believe you know what a parody really is

FAY—I certainly do. It's the same meter, measures the same number of feet, only there is something funny about it

FLORENCE—Well, that seems to be a good definition.

FAY—That's why I call my gas bill a parody.

FLORENCE—Call your gas bill a parody?

FAY—Yes It's the same meter, measures the same number of feet, but there is something funny about it

FLORENCE—Did you ever make up a real parody in your life?

FAY—Yes. I made up one the other night on my way over to Cambridge.

FLORENCE—Let's hear how it goes

FAY—It's something like this:

We stood on the bridge at tw'light,
In the jam of the day's rush hour,
Expecting to wait till midnight.
Some one had shut off the power.
All hungry, mad and fretful,
Up spake a man, belated.
"I'd like, by gum, to meet the rum
That runs this Elevated."

How's that?

FLORENCE—That's great

FAY—I called on my friend the doctor the other day. There was a man in his office with a strange complaint. He said: "Doctor, I have a terrible thirst. Can't satisfy it. I take a drink in the morning before going to business, a couple more at noon, and keep a bottle on my desk all day. At night I stand up to the bar and just pour it down. It's a terrible thirst. Can't you give me something for it?" And the doctor said: "Give you something for it? Why, I'd give you a thousand dollars for it."

THE aeroplane has been wrongly named. It should be called the "aeroplain." It will never become popular with those who prefer a regular business life as it means they must have too many ups and downs in this life. They would be too often "up in the air" over some trivial thing and would be likely to "wander through cloudland." Then again they'd be "soar" on the hot air and therefore would have a frequent grouch All these are plain facts—aeroplane facts

* * *

NEWPORT society has taken up the "African Dodger" game as a parlor amusement. The "African" is at one end of the hall and the society set throws baseballs at him which he tries to dodge. Tax Dodging, which is so popular in Boston society, differs from this in many details.

THEY have a new self-perpetuating, perfumed, imported and doubly civilized potato down at Newport which threatens to put our common garden variety of "spud" on the retired list. Who'll set out ordinary potatoes when by one planting of the new kind he can insure a perpetual crop which supplies food, does its own cultivating and furnishes a delightful aroma? No wonder it can do all these things, it has the best of scents.

WHENEVER a crooked bank fails in New York, municipal money is sure to be found in its "care." And the funny part of it is that the city officials never find out that there is anything the matter with those banks. They have to wait for an insane man, like Robin, to come along and tell them.

Robin is getting a lot of sympathy through his testimony. He claims that there is a gigantic clique of dishonest financiers who are appropriating the people's money, and he claims that he is the goat.

With all due respect to Mr. Robin, he is not the goat The public is.

I tell you the way things are going in nearly every city today, a fellow hasn't got a chance with his money at all. They are even raiding all the gambling houses to keep men from losing it so that it will be still softer for some of the banks.

But if these banks keep taking people's money away at the rate they have been, pretty soon the people won't have any money left and a thief won't be able to make an honest living.

Look at the Carnegie Trust Company in New York.

They shouldn't have called it the Carnegie TRUST Company—it should have been called the Carnegie STEAL Company.

According to Robin, Carnegie himself lost two hundred dollars in it.

And Carnegie is the man who has maintained right along that it is a disgrace to die rich, and that he wanted to die a poor man.

Well, a few more Carnegie Trust Companies and he will die in the poorhouse.

Just imagine two Mexican armies standing around for two years looking at each other and doing nothing. And then Taft had to send twenty thousand of our soldiers down there to help them to nothing.

Taft says that the reason he sent our army down to Texas is to keep the Mexicans from carrying arms and ammunition over the border.

Why prevent them?

Even if the Mexicans did take arms and ammunition across the border they would never use them anyhow.

Why, in one of those revolutions down there it's follow over fired a gun he'd be arrested for waking up the General.

What's the use of Carnegie giving ten million dollars for peace when we can have wars like that Mexican revolution. You can't have anything more peaceful.

We wouldn't even know there was a revolution if J. Pierpont Morgan hadn't got nervous about his mines and railroads down there and had Taft call out the army.

THE Reverend [illegible] that the best place [illegible] for young people to make love is in church.

We have always looked upon the church as a place of "worship," but not exactly that kind of worship. Of course there have always been some spinsters who have attended church assiduously simply to get acquainted with "hymns"; nevertheless, to turn church into Cupid's bowers would be a decided innovation and most undoubtedly a radical departure from the original purpose of such institutions. To have the plan sponsored by an eminent clergyman is rather surprising. We predict that most of the Rev. Thompson's brothers in the cloth will take issue with him. A church full of loving couples on a Sunday morning would probably be a charming sight, and with holding hands, hugging, kissing and the other usual exercises in the manual of love-making, not only permitted but encouraged in church, it would undoubtedly serve to keep everybody who awoke during the sermon

Another thing—with the pastor countenancing, nay, insisting in church he could always be sure of a large attendance. One objection, though, when the collection plate was passed around we fear that it would be sadly neglected, as the young men would be too busily occupied to dig in their pockets for money.

If the theory of the reverend gentleman from Chicago is generally accepted, our choirs will have to learn a lot of new songs.

Of course such a hymn as "Abide With Me" would be appropriate when the young men are proposing to their sweethearts. "Face to Face" would also take on a new significance. "I Need Thee Every Hour" would fit admirably. But we predict that with the church an institution for making love the choirs would soon be rendering "Cuddle Up a Little Closer," "Baby Doll," "Put Your Arms Around Me," "Kiss Me" and "I'm in the Right Church, but the Wrong Pew."

Excerpts from "Everywoman"

Soon to Come to Boston

(Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner, Great Britain Rights Reserved.)

TO be a woman meaneth flower, star, queen—and more, much more, besides a Everywoman's mirror is her best and bravest friend.

Plead truth now, but beware the time when thou shalt seek flattery in thy mirror and find only truth.

Time hath summoned all manner of actor to enact strange scenes on the stage of life and rung down many tragic curtains.

Outside the stage door alone many satellites dance attendance on the star.

The fascinating glamour of the footlights scorches the wings of foolish young girl flies.

It seemeth folly thus to dally leave the sunshine of life for the mockery of the dusky stage; to nightly pander to the throng, wait for the most part, lack hearts to sympathize for brains to understand.

Why do the good and true play such minor parts upon the stage of life?

They say that conscience hath a still small voice, but oft 'tis wondrous sweet

The female sex doth ever shun what most it seeks.

Love—the king of kings, the soul's sweet starlight, the strength of the weak, the salvation of the doomed the god of Everywoman.

'Tis said that money talks, yet wealth talks in a whisper to most men

Time is the call boy of the soul, who comes to warn us for our final scene.

If a woman fall—if one false step hurl down the path to perdition, her youth and beauty dead—oh, who will lend a kindly hand to lead her back again? In the whole world there is no hope for such a one.

'Tis not given for Everywoman—until her hairs grow gray—to know that Love is ever born of Truth; that Truth is mother to Love.

Even Love knows not what wonders Every woman can perform when Love hath come to her.

To Van Der Dauber's studio our Winnie went one day
To buy a picture—but the price was more than she could pay.
"It's such a gem!" sighed Winnie as she gazed upon a scene
Of blue sheep in a purple field, 'neath skies of murky green.

2

The busy artist was at work upon a canvas big;
A model, as Diana, posed in classic hunting rig.
But though the little model had a very pretty face,
Her pose was inartistic, and quite devoid of grace.

3

"Good gracious me!" cried Winnie, "that girl's not posing right!
She ought to stand on tiptoe—like an eagle poised for flight!
She hasn't any action! She hasn't any tone!
I'll show you how!" And Winnie sprang upon the model throne.

4

The artist was delighted at Winnie's nerve and power.
He said: "My dear Miss Wynne, if you will pose for me an hour,
Wearing the model's costume, I'll gladly give to you
The picture that you fancied—that little meadow view."

5

"Indeed I will!" cried Winnie, and with a dashing grace
She took the pose and held it as the Goddess of the Chase.
The artist painted swiftly, he seemed like one inspired;
At last he had achieved the very model he required.

6

A knock! "Come in!" And Philip Strong entered the studio.
"Winnie! What are you doing? You shan't disgrace me so!"
"I want a picture," Winnie said, "and—Philip—don't you see?"
"No!" Winnie smiled. "NO!" Winnie SMILED! "Yes—I see, dear," said he.

BIG LEAGUE BASEBALL OPENS IN BOSTON

BOSTON TEAMS FIT FOR THE FIRST BATTLES IN THE PENNANT RACES

Tenney Says the Rustlers Open the Season 25 Per Cent. Stronger Than 1910 Nationals.

By FRED TENNEY.

Telegraphed expressly to the Boston Sunday American by the manager of the Boston National League baseball club

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 8.—The Boston team that faces Brooklyn next Wednesday afternoon in the opening game of the season will be at eam for the occasion, in the best shape possible, and a team that is fully twenty-five per cent. stronger than the one which represented Boston in the National League last season.

On the eve of the 1911 opening, I can see a bright future for the Boston club and am confident that we will acquit ourselves honorably in the big fight.

To me it appears that everything is up to the pitchers. If they will do what I expect of them, we will have no cause to be ashamed of our showing. I can promise that the fielding and batting will be strong enough to support the men in the box.

In Goode, Herzog, Miller and Ingerton, I believe I have four high-class hitters Sweeney, Clarke and I will try to hold up our end.

The infield is immeasurably stronger than it was last year, and the outfield is a better looking aggregation. So I say that if the pitchers live up to my expectations we will make things hot for every other club in the League.

The team will go into the fight this year with much better spirit than that which characterized its work in 1910. Every member of it will be trying and trying all the time. They ask the support of the Boston public. But we do not ask more than we deserve. We will play a brand of ball that will be worthy of support and I believe our team will bring honor to the city it represents.

By PATRICK J. DONOVAN.

Telegraphed expressly to the Boston Sunday American by the manager of the Boston American League baseball team

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 8.—The Red Sox are ready for the bell to usher in the American League season. The boys under my care never were in better condition to tackle the long grind

I'm a booster, and above all I believe in pushing ahead young men, encouraging them to stand up to big jobs, trying them out and developing them to face older men positions. The boys I have taken in hand have never gone back on me, and the young men on whom I depend to win this season's pennant for Boston are youngsters just winning their spurs. A young man full of ambition and energy will work much harder than an old timer. That's why I have so much confidence in the team this year.

It is my intention to pitch either Wood or Cicotte in the opening game. Madden will probably catch if Wood pitches, as the sturdy Roxbury stand by is holding Wood's fast shoot [illegible] than the other catchers. If Cicotte pitches Kleinow will likely catch

Bradley will not be in shape to play first base. Williams will play at first. He has been [illegible] very well, by the way, and has been hitting pretty heavy. Engle has shown some great class and will play [illegible]. There is no reason why he should not continue in that position through the season if he keeps up [illegible] pace.

This has been a great trip for the team and we are in condition to begin the fight for the pennant [illegible] the very start.

Tenney Men Ready For First Battle With Brooklyn

Rustlers Start for Home and Play Yale On the Eve of the Opening of the South End Grounds—Mattern Will Pitch the First Game Here Wednesday

By R. W. LARDNER.

Sunday American Correspondent with the Rustlers.

R. W. LARDNER.

LYNCHBURG, Va., April 8.—Clarke, l.f.; Good, c.f.; Herzog, ss.; Miller, r.f.; Ingerton, 3b; Sweeney, 2b; Tenney, 1b; Graham, c.; A. Mattern, p.

That is the way the Rustlers will face Bill Dahlen's improved Brooklyn club in the opening game of the National League season at Boston next Wednesday, if accidents do not break up the combination, and IF Peaches Graham can be persuaded to sign.

You can be sure every effort will be made to guard against accidents during the remaining two days of preliminary work. You can also be sure that every effort will be made to secure Mr. Graham's valuable signature.

Tenney rests his case. There remain only the unimportant closing arguments, one of them at Baltimore Monday and the other against the Yale University nine at New Haven Tuesday afternoon. Wednesday it will be up to a jury composed of a goodly crowd of the citizens of Boston to decide whether or not the new team is guilty or not guilty of being worth while.

Tenney Is Confident

Mr. Tenney is confident of receiving a favorable verdict. So are his players, and so is President Russell. There is hopefulness and to spare in the Boston camp, hopefulness that the club will be looking down on at least two, and possibly four, opponents at the end of the campaign of 1911.

More than anything else, the Rustlers are anxious to get away to a good start. They will be a disappointed set of athletes if they fail to trim the Dodgers in the first battle and astonished if they do not win the opening series. Brooklyn is one of the two clubs which every member of the Boston team believes the Rustlers will beat out in the race for the pennant. Therefore, there will be genuine sorrow in Tenney's crowd if two victories over Dahlen's aggregation are not gained right at the beginning.

The opinion seems to be general that Al Mattern will pitch the opening game. Matty has been groomed for this performance and has pronounced himself fit. There are few left-handed hitters in the Brooklyn outfit, only two, Wheat and Daubert, in the batting order recently used, but Mattern is one of the southpaws who works successfully against sluggers of all brands.

It is expected that the Rustlers also will be asked to face a southpaw "Nap" Rucker will be the man if he is in shape, and "Nap" is a mighty hard man to beat. But he needn't expect to find as weak a club at Boston as was there last season. There are good hitters in abundance in Tenney's new line-up. That much has been demonstrated by the club's showing in the South. To be sure, the pitching was nothing to boast of, but it takes good hitters to pound the ball as unmercifully as the Rustlers have been pounding it, no matter how bad the pitchers may be.

Entire Team Remodelled

The entire remodeled team will be watched with interest by the people of Boston, but particularly prominent in the public eye will be Manager Fred Tenney and the two new regulars, Josh Clarke and Scotty Ingerton. There will be interest, too in the showing of Bill Sweeney and Charley Herzog in their new positions, and fans may rest assured that if there is anything surprising in the performance of this pair, it will be pleasantly so.

The game will start at 3 o'clock, but the regular starting time for games thereafter will be 3:30 except on Saturdays and holidays. Long before 3 o'clock there will

DORCHESTER BEATEN 10-1 BY MEDFORD IN THE OPENER

Fahey, for Winner, Proves Puzzle to Heavy Hitting Red Players.

EARLY PLAYS STAR GAME

Brennan and Gill Pitch Good Ball, but Are Not Well Supported.

DORCHESTER HIGH opened its baseball season yesterday afternoon on the Dunbar avenue grounds and was handed a trouncing by the Medford High School, the scoring being 10 to 1.

The Dorchester team was weak at the bat and lacked the snap that the Medford boys displayed. Medford played a fast fielding game and used the stick to good advantage, ripping off many long hits. Brennan, Fraser and Rochelle, who usually hit in good style, were unable to hit Joe Fahey.

The big feature of the game was the great playing of E. Early, who played first base for the Medford team. Although but fourteen years of age, he handled himself in major league style and brought the spectators up several times by his great stops.

The boys of the suburban town started off with a score in the first inning and again in the third, two runs in the sixth and three each in the seventh and eighth. They hit the ball hard when hits meant runs. Dorchester scored its only run in the sixth inning when LaRoche slammed out a two-base hit and scored on a sacrifice and an error.

Brennan, who up to the seventh inning was pitching fair ball, having eleven strikeouts to his credit, was taken out and Gill went on the mound. Gill pitched fair ball, but his infield did not support him and the poor playing gave Medford several runs.

The score:

YALE FRESHIES WIN.

Brown Classmen Have Lucky Innnig and Get Three Runs.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 8.—The Yale freshmen opened the baseball season today by defeating the Brown freshmen, 9 to 3. The features were a one-handed running catch by Reynolds of Brown in the second inning, which spoiled a home run, and the pitching of Brown, who occupied the box for Yale the first three innings.

Rustlers at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 8.—The Boston Nationals arrived her late to-night, and will play the first of a series of two games with the Baltimore Eastern League team to-morrow. The games at Lynchburg, Va., and Roanoke, Va., were declared off to-day because of rain.

Plate Glass Lands Rich Norfolk Race

Double Tumble in the Steeplechase Furnishes Great Crowd With Excitement.

NORFOLK, Va., April 8.—Plate Glass, a flashy black Hamburg gelding, easily captured the Hotel Monticello handicap this afternoon at the Jamestown course.

Vreeland finished second and Aldrian third. Guy Fisher, the star at Jacksonville, was anchored with 120 pounds, and finished last.

Plate Glass was played from 3 to 5 to 4 to 5. The Hamburg gelding ran the mile and a sixteenth in 1:50 2-5, very good time considering the going.

The opening event was won by Doodle Dandy, a Hamburg colt, belonging to Albert Simons.

The Steeplechase furnished the spectators with thrills galore for Black Bridge and Merry Man fell at the same jump, and it looked as if their riders, Yorke and Lucas, were badly injured. The boys lay senseless for five minutes, but when they came around it was discovered that they escaped with a few bruises.

The winner turned up in St. Abe.

Antenor, which won the third race in a common canter by six lengths from Capsize, ran the five furlongs through the sea of mud in the fast time of 1:02 3-5, which was very fast.

WELLESLEY HIGH WINS.

Hopkington High Is Swamped by 13 to 1 Score.

The Wellesley High school baseball team found little difficulty in defeating Hopkington High yesterday afternoon at Wellesley, winning the game hands down by the score of 13 to 1. The visitors were never in it for a moment, the Wellesley "biff" artists putting the game away in the strong box in the very first inning when they secured four runs.

Winton of the winning team, contributed the feature play of the game, he spearing a terrific drive with one hand, which was labeled for extra bases. The score

YALE PAPER IS PEEVED.

Claims Harvard All Wrong in Selecting Race Date.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 8.—There seems to be growing dissatisfaction here over the date selected for the Yale-Harvard boat race. Last year the choice was conceded to Harvard on the supposition that Yale would get a chance to have her commencement throng see the races this year, but Harvard again refused. The Yale Daily News, usually ultra-conservative so far as criticizing another college is concerned, to-day condemns Harvard's course and adds: "To our way of thinking Harvard decidedly has the wrong end of the controversy and few who read the history of the negotiations between the two managements will think differently."

As Harvard has refused to make any concessions for next year, it looks as though the future of the classic race might be doubtful.

RED SOX THE VICTORS IN 4-3 GAME AT KANSAS CITY

Boston Team In Crippled Condition With Even Doc Green Laid Up.

By MERTON E. BURKE.

Special Correspondent With [illegible] Red Sox

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 8.—After what threatened to be a free for all fight over baseballs, John I. Taylor's Red Sox won from Kansas City's strong team this afternoon by a score of 4 to 3 in an exciting finish

Manager Patsy Donovan was hard up for pitchers. He was saving Joe Wood for Sunday's game, Joe being an old time Kansas City favorite.

Charlie Smith, Killilay and Frank Smith were all complaining of bad limbs and for that matter nearly the whole squad has one complaint or another. Wagner, Gardner, Hooper and Lewis have colds contracted in sleeping cars. Even Doc Green is laid up.

Somebody said he tried some of his own rubdown dope and got spinal meningitis.

Charlie Hall was put in the box. Hall is in much better form than when he left California, but he still needs some hard work to put him in proper condition, and up to now he has been getting by pretty easily.

Red Sox Looked Lost.

After the Sox had gone out in one, two, three order on infield wallops, the Kansas City boys started the excitement in the first by scoring twice on a base ball, two hits and an error by Janvrin.

In the second Lewis scored on two errors and a sacrifice by Williams, but the locals came back at them with a home run. The local fans promptly went wild

In the first of the third Boston got one more on a hit by Gardner and an error by centrefield. From then on it was goose eggs and one, two, three put outs till Hall landed a two-bagger and scored Janvrin who had walked and been sent to second by Madden's sacrifice

At the end of the first half of the seventh a small riot was let loose. The Boston boys claimed the umpire was springing soft balls on them and quit the field

In the argument that followed Wagner, Wood, Frank Smith and Charlie Hall started something and only the intervention of eight cops and a sergeant saved the umpire Fight Over the Balls.

Some new balls were dug up and the game proceeded.

In the first of the ninth, Madden reached second on a long fly, which the left fielder dropped, got third on Hall's wallop, which the third baseman dropped and scored the winning run while Hall and Gardner were being caught at second and [illegible]

Fans Are All Excited Now

Whirled from Boston on February 18 aboard a special train, speeded across the [illegible] 5,500 miles from snow-clad New England to the sun-kissed land of orange blossoms and palm trees in Southern California, the young athletes who are going out to win fame for Boston have been entertained in half the States of the Union as no other aggregation of baseball players has ever been feted before

Nearly all of the Boston Red Sox are young college men, boys who were once in athletics along with diplomas for excellence in Latin, Greek, philosophy, civil engineering psychology and all that stuff. A number of the boys are still college students, earning their education by their proficiency in the great American sport. Some of them are studying law.

John I. Taylor certainly has a way of picking good gray matter. I think his scouts must confer with college professors before making their selections

To-night Manager Donovan dealt the cards [illegible] and shuffled off the regulars to Washington and the irregulars, recruits, "also-rans," "never-wases" and "used-to-bes" to Boston

Of the squad which has been travelling as the Regulars under Manager Donovan's watchful eyes these men leave Chicago to-morrow for the short route to Washington: Madden, Kleinow, Carrigan, catchers, Wood, Collins, Hall, Karger, Cicotte, Killilay, Pape and Charles Smith, pitchers; Williams, Gardner, Wagner and Engle, infielders, and Lewis and Hooper, outfielders.

Donovan Comes to Boston

The rest of the team will go to Boston, whither Treasurer McBreen and Manager Donovan will also go for a conference with President Taylor

Of the regular squad who will be transferred to the Boston bunch will be Frank Smith, whose arm is a little bad; Bradley, whose knee is still stiff; Purtell, whose arm is off, and Mahoney and Janvrin, who will cover centre field and third respectively, for the Colts in their game with Harvard

Following the Harvard game Manager Donovan will take Nunamaker, catcher; Perry and Riggert, outfielders; Yerkes, infielder, and Speaker, who has been resting up and curing a cold in Boston, and join the Washington delegation.

The others of Taylor's fifty-seven varieties of base-be "dishes at the ball park." Orders similar to those that usually attend season openings. It will be an invitation affair and cards have been sent to members of both houses of the Legislature to Governor Eugene N. Foss and Lieutenant Governor Louis A. Frothingham and to others as prominent. Mayor John F. Fitzgerald has consented to throw out the first ball. He will be an honorary member of the board.

The park also will be graced by the presence of President Tom Lynch of the National League. He too, besides a host of President Russell and Vice President Wirt, Manager Tenney and Treasurer I. Miller pay have sent some invitations of their own and no regrets have come in.

The American Under Band and O. Nesbitt has been engaged to discourse sweet music before and during the pastime and will play for the marches of the rival teams to parade from the stand to the centre field flagpole, where Managers Tenney and Dahlen will put the ropes that will raise a new American flag to the April breezes. The teams then will parade back and the struggle will be on in earnest.

Park is Improved.

There will be new features about the park itself for the "dopes" to gape upon. The right and left field fences have been reconstructed and a steel wire screen tops the left field wall, to decrease the number of unreserved home runs. The clubhouses have been overhauled and the club boasts of quarters unequalled in the league for cleanliness and healthfulness. The entrances and the grand-stand itself have been improved. These facts were gathered from Secretary Peter Kelley, who is justly proud of his and others' handiwork.

Despite the unkindness of the weather in Virginia, the team that faces Brooklyn will be in shape. The long days of warm sunshine in Augusta have had their effect and the recent rains and cold winds encountered have tried in vain to offset it.

People who see the Rustlers in Wednesday's game may not see a first class team. But they will see a club that is full of fight, a club that will try its hardest to win and a club several points stronger than the one Fred Lake handled in 1910.

The regulars will leave Lynchburg at 2 o'clock to-morrow evening. They will reach Baltimore in time for breakfast and church. In the afternoon they will rest their travel-worn bodies. Monday afternoon a game will be played with Jack Dunn's Orioles and then there will be a rush for the Federal Limited, which will carry the party northward.

One or two of the pitchers, Mattern and whoever is picked as the alternate for the opening game, probably will be shipped straight home from here. The regular team will play the Yale University nine at New Haven Tuesday, and the Yanigans will make their final appearance of the Spring at Lynn. Tuesday night will find both divisions in dear old Boston once more, and glad to be there.

Will Surprise Boston Fans.

Asked his opinion of the National League pennant race, Manager Tenney said today:

"I don't want to make any more predictions, for I am not good at prophesying I have said before that I didn't think we would finish last. I will say now that we will finish as high in the race as we can, and that the height we reach may prove a surprise pleasant to baseball followers. Every other club in the league will be striving for the honors. But I am sure we will be able to give our rivals some mighty interesting arguments.

"We have worked earnestly in preparation for the hard days to come and we are willing to take our chances and leave it to the public to judge whether or not we have labored in vain."

PRESIDENT RUSSELL SAYS TEAM IS BETTER THAN IN YEARS

By WILLIAM HEPBURN RUSSELL

Written Especially for the Sunday American by the President of the Boston National League Baseball Club

WM. H. RUSSELL.

I HAVE been with the team during its training under the guidance of Manager Tenney. I have no hesitation in expressing the opinion that the team, individually and collectively, is stronger, both as a batting and a fielding organization, than it has been for some years past.

Graham and Rariden remain as catchers and both of them are in the very top notch of condition and at the highest point of their playing ability. Graham is batting as consistently hard as he ever has done, and the batting of Rariden has greatly improved. Both of them are throwing well.

The pitchers are all in excellent condition. We have no doubt that individual [illegible] Tyler, Mattern and [illegible] Tyler and Mattern are in better condition than ever. All of them express the greatest possible confidence in the team that is to support them this year.

[illegible] The [illegible] are showing up [illegible]

Fred Tenney is in better physical condition, in my judgment, than he has been for five years. He is leading the team admirably, and I have no doubt will continue to do so. His batting seems to be up to his best standard and that is very high. As a manager he has the confidence and respect of his men. They work cheerfully and willingly under him and give the most implicit obedience to his directions.

Shrecengost at second base is making a great success. He is, in every respect, admirably fitted to the position. Ingerton at third base is a strapping fellow, bigger than Arthur Devlin and a tremendously hard hitter. Butler and Spratt, other possibilities for third base, have both shown up so well, both in fielding and batting, that it is hard to say who is in reality the best man for the position.

Herzog at shortstop, so far, is playing wonderful ball. He is a natural shortstop and I think will have no superior in that position in the National League this year.

The outfield as now made up is composed of Clarke, Goode, Miller and Collins. It is hard to say which three of these men will play most regularly. All of them are fielding and batting [illegible] are very fast on their feet and are batting strongly.

I am not to make predictions as to where the Boston team will finish in the league race, but we have a team that is made up of willing workers. It contains no quitters. Every man on it will be striving his utmost in every game until the last man is out, or a ninth inning; hence, I believe that the Boston Nationals will put up a [illegible] game that they play this year, and that the Boston club will finish much higher up in the pennant contest than it has in years past.

BROOKLYN, TOO, IS GOING UPWARD NOW

Dahlen Thinks His Men Are Slated for a Higher Position in League Race This Year

By J. S. WINFIELD.

BROOKLYN, April 8.—The Brooklyn baseball team will start the season with a general idea that they are going to be further up the ladder than last year. The team has been bolstered in every department and looks good. Owner Ebbets has spent thousands of dollars for new material in the past two years and has unearthed some star men. Bill Dahlen has harmony among his players.

The infield is strong outside of the shortstop position. Jake Daubert has made a hit at the first corner and it would take a big man to replace him. Hummell is a fixture at second and Zimmerman has the regular position at third clinched. The shortstop position is the only weak point, south is a fair man but not good enough for a pennant winning team.

Outfield is Good.

Davidson, Burch and Zack Wheat will play the outfield again. Davidson is a slow man to come around, but this season he should get going in good style. Wheat is a fast man and a heavy hitter, which lifts him just about the average.

The battery men are good. Herger, Reil, Rucker and Scanlon will be the regular pitching staff. They are several youngsters out for the mound work and one or two may be retained. Bergen, Erwin and Miller are strong catchers and the team will be well taken care of behind the bat.

The team starts for Boston Tuesday confident of capturing a majority of the opening series from the Rustlers, although Dahlen realizes that Tenney's team has been doing great work in the South. Reports say that the Brooklyn and Boston teams have shown more improvement this year than any other teams in the National League, and both of them count on starting the season with a rush in the hope that an early spurt will give the men sufficient confidence to carry them along.

Rucker Will Pitch.

The Dodgers will start off Wednesday at Boston with the strong Southpaw, Rucker in the box. He has been going well in the Hot Springs trip, and Dahlen thinks he will be a wonder this year.

President Lynch Predicts a Great Race in National

By THOMAS J. LYNCH.

Telegraphed Expressly to the Sunday American by the President of the National League

NEW YORK, April 8. I predict a great race for the National League this season. From a disinterested standpoint it looks to me as though all our teams are more evenly balanced than last year and that no one of six clubs may win the championship.

It's an Open Race.

The second division teams are going to give the first division teams the battle of their lives to hold their positions.

With not a position in the championship race clinched, I look for a big fight for the pennant.

Good reports have come in this office as to the condition of the players of the various contenders, and there seems to be a feeling among all teams that they will better their positions in this season's race.

The reports from the South are very flattering to Manager Tenney's young Boston players, and it would not surprise me to find them well up in the race. The present world's champions a few years ago were in the experimental class, much as the present Boston team, and the wonderful baseball management and cooperation of the players worked in making a championship team is possible to be repeated.

I cannot see but what, with Manager Tenney's experience and his willing team of young players, the Boston men have a chance to make themselves a good baseball club.

Umpires Most Important.

The umpire reports to this office show that all the men are umpiring exhibition games and getting in good condition for the opening. The umpiring part of the game is, in my opinion, of more importance than the playing end. An umpire's poor work will spoil any game, no matter how well played. So I am in hopes that the umpiring of 1911 will be of such a high standard that it will help materially to make the game and the present season's race an enjoyable one from every angle.

BRESNAHAN SAYS HIS MEN ARE AGGRESSIVE

New Blood in the Cardinals Seems Most Promising; Improvement in Pitching Staff

By W. C. HOWLAND.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 8. The injection of new blood in the catching ranks seems most promising if preliminary action counts for anything. The aggressiveness shown by the new-comers and co-operated in by such men as Huggins, Konetchy, Mowrey, Hauser, Evans, Oakes and Wilhelm, make Roger Bresnahan's club a strong aggregation.

The pitching department so far looms up formidable, and, in all candor, the added improvement over last year by the coming of Dale Gear only experimented a modest company without clockwork competition and it may happen that the Cincinnati, Brooklyn and Boston coming situation a new story may be told later on.

Roger Bresnahan, who is now confined to his room with a severe cold bordering on the grippe, says it is too early in the season to express an opinion, but he feels that there is much life, vigor, tenacity and willingness in his boys and he hopes to better things the coming season.

CUBS START OFF WELL BUT THEY MAY GO BACK

By B. O. OWEN.

CHICAGO, April 8.—Johnny Evers will go to bat first for the Chicago Cubs this season. Johnny broke a bone in his leg late last year and this may bother him for a time, but he will be in shape for the inauguration.

The Cubs seem to be as strong as last year in all departments but the outfield. Brown, Leifield, Richie, Foxen, Willis, McIntyre and Weaver are all in line, but they will miss Overall, who has quit the game. Hicks was the mainstay in the early part of last season and kept his team in the running by his work.

Steinfeldt will be missing in the infield, but Zimmerman can fill the hole. Chance, Evers and Tinker will be the other three infielders, and they should be there again with their clock like playing.

Same Outfield Again.

Sheckard, Schulte and Hofman will again hold down the regular positions in the outfield.

The Cubs will not be the favorites in the pennant race this season. The absence of "Three" Overall, and the possibility that Evers will be out of the game for a part of the year is too great a handicap against a team like the Giants. Manager Chance still has the fighting spirit however, and he will start right in with the idea that he can win. That helps a lot.

Last season his team took the lead in the last week of May and from then till the season ended was never headed. During the latter part of the season Overall went to the bad. Evers was injured before the world series.

Has Good Substitutes.

Chance has several substitutes, if anything happens to his regulars, and he has Dave Shean, whom he secured from the Rustlers to play second base, Schreckengost, Graham, Archer, Kling, Richie, Foxen, Willis, McIntyre and Weaver are all in line, but they will miss Overall, who has quit the game. Hicks was the mainstay in the early part of last season and kept his team in the running by his work.

Steinfeldt will be missing in the infield, but Zimmerman can fill the hole. Chance, Evers and Tinker will be the other three infielders, and they should be there again with their clock like playing.

REDS ARE PICKED TO MAKE 'EM HUSTLE

Griffith Has a Nearly New Team and Dopesters Figure They Should Be In First Division

By C. G. ZUBER.

CINCINNATI, April 8.—The Cincinnati team will be nearly a new organization. The four-man deal with the Philadelphia Nationals has strengthened the team considerably and dopesters are counting on them in first, second and third position. Groat, Bates, McQuillan and Moren were the men secured by the deal and all are strong.

Groat is boomed as the best third baseman in the league. Bates has clinched an outfield berth and McQuillan and Moren will be regular pitchers.

Beck and Grant Will Help.

Hoblitzell will play first again and Egan second. "Hobby" is a good man on the bag and a fine stick-er while Egan is one of the players with the brains. Fred Beck, who was with the Doves last season, will play in the outfield with Bates and Mitchell.

The battery men are good and they should hold their own against all teams. McLean and Clarke are two formidable men, behind the bat and McQuillan, Moren, Suggs, Fromme and Gaspar will be the mainstays in the box. McQuillan has been picked to twirl the opening game of the season on Wednesday. He is in good condition and he predicts that he will start right in with a winning streak.

Tannehill Signs His Contract.

Pitcher Tannehill, formerly with the Pittsburg Nationals, the New York Americans and the Boston Red Sox, late to-day signed his belated contract to twirl for the Reds, and further added to the optimism of the fans.

It was a long time ago that Cincinnati had a first class baseball team and the fans here are overjoyed now at the prospects of having another. The Reds now count on being the strongest rivals of the Giants and Cubs for top-notch honors. In every trade made since last season they seem to have benefited, and the trades were numerous.

Hoblitzell points to an enormous crowd for the opening Wednesday with the Pirates. It looks like McQuillan and Moren will be the Reds' battery and, if so, the "fans" look for a victory at the very start. The Pittsburg bunch have not underestimated the strength of the Reds this year and it should be a lively, hard-fought battle.

August Hermann, head of the National Commission, declared to-day that he was counting on the rejuvenated Reds to carry off the National League pennant. He expects to be present at the opening game next Wednesday.

LOOK WHO'S HERE! DOOIN AFTER FLAG

Manager of Phillies Says His Team Is Greatly Improved and Is Out for the Pennant

By BERT CROWHURST.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—The rejuvenated Phillies will start out their 1911 season with brighter prospects than for a few years and Manager Dooin is confident that his aggregation will prove a stumbling block for several clubs.

His trade with Cincinnati has given him men who will work in harmony with the other members of the team, and he figures that it was discord which ruined his chances last season. Then, too, he has secured a couple of twirlers who look to be the goods, and he is satisfied that the Phillies will easily be a first division position this year.

"Other clubs don't want to feel themselves about the Phillies this year," said Dooin to-day. "For we are considerably stronger than last season. The disturbing element has been eliminated, and the bone now with the club will work together for the good of the game.

"Personally, I think we are twenty per cent. stronger than last year, and if such proves to be the case, we shall be knocking at the door of first place, much as all prediction will surprise the experts. My batting staff is stronger, because we can depend upon the men we have now, and the other departments are equally as good as they were last year, so watch out for us."

NEW YORK FIGURES GIANTS AT TOP

McGraw's Men Look Very Good as Pennant Possibilities—Batteries in Gilt-Edged Condition

By D. C. O'CONNOR.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The New York Giants are pennant winning possibilities this season. They are well supplied for every position and have star utility men. They are supplied with several star box men, heavy hitters and good fielders. They will have no new men on the team.

Doyle has made good at first base and is a fixture there. He will play second. Devlin third base and Fletcher will be at short stop.

The outfield will be played by Devore in left, Snodgrass in centre and Murray in right. Snodgrass predicts that he will strike his batting streak early this season and will hold it, and not gradually drop off as he did last year. Devore and Murray are both fast men and good batters.

Batteries Are Strong.

The Giants' strongest point is in the batteries. They have seven good twirlers with at least three of the first water. Mathewson, of course, is the leader, and he is still one of the greatest in the country.

Then Raymond is good when he is right, and Marquard, Ames, Wiltse, Crandall and Drucke are all above the average. Chief Meyers and Schlei will do the work behind the bat and both are good.

The Giants have been in the running for the last two years, but each time the Cubs have come out and won. They are still dangerous, and many of the baseball experts pick them to win this season. They have one of the best pitchers and all the men back of him are capable of playing the best of ball and batting when hits mean runs.

Giants in Good Condition.

Manager McGraw has had his men in training for the last six weeks, but letting them go along slowly so that all are in perfect condition for the season. Christy Mathewson has been working to his own batting. It is expected that he will be on the mound next Wednesday.

The team is well supplied with utility men and if any of the regulars go wrong it will be easy to fill in. Becker, formerly with the Boston Rustlers, is the utility outfielder, and he is a better ball player—both fielder and sticker—than many of the regulars on some of the teams in the league. There are many youngsters now with the team who will be released before May 20, but when the Giants settle down to real playing just watch them.

Great Crowd of Giants.

Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants to-day brought the biggest aggregation of baseball players to New York ever assembled under control of one man. There were forty-five men in the squad.

The weeding-out process will now be commenced to establish a quota of players for the season, which opens next Wednesday. Manager McGraw believes that New York will have the strongest team this season since 1905, when the Giants won the world's championship. On the field the Giants will begin with nearly the same team that closed the season last year.

Bresnahan Is Sick.

ST. LOUIS, April 8.—Roger Bresnahan, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, is seriously ill at his hotel here, and the National Leaguers will have to start the season without the services of the ex-Giant.

PIRATES WILL START WITH NEW STRENGTH

Fred Clarke Is Optimistic—He Puts Hunter at First Base and Picks Up New Twirlers.

By R. S. DAVIS.

PITTSBURG, April 8.—The Pittsburg Pirates open the National League season in better condition as a team than for several years. Their training trip was an uneventful one, little time being lost on account of unfavorable weather.

All of the men rounded to quickly, most of them being in good shape when they reported.

Clarke enters the campaign with one change in his line-up, Hunter having supplanted Flynn at first base. But the latter will be retained as a utility hitter and extra catcher. The Pirates have only five pitchers—Camnitz, Adams, White, Leifield and Phillippi—and with them will doubtless fall most of the work during the early months.

Has Some New Pitchers.

However, he has picked up some promising young pitchers, and has decided to keep several of them for the present—Gardner, Steele, Faber, Nagle, Smith and Prassy.

As usual, Gibson will do most of the catching, with Simon as first assistant. No changes have been made in the outfield, but two extra gardeners being carried—Cary, from South Bend in the Central League, and Bates, from Jackson in the Cotton State League. One of these will be let out by May 15.

Manager Clarke is very optimistic, but he is making no pennant claims.

"I know that I have a better team than I started out with last year," he said today. "However, I am content to wait now till I see how things are going to work out before I make any claims.

"Predicting the outcome of a baseball race is a difficult task and one to which I don't profess to be equal. I believe that Hunter will strengthen our infield, and that both Wagner and Miller will play better ball than they did last year.

Says Pitchers Are All Right.

"Others have said that our pitching staff lacks balance. Wait and see. Camnitz and Adams ought both to have good years, and I think Kirb White will also do much better. Leifield is in better shape than I have ever known him to be in this stage and I think he will feel them all this year.

"Our new pitchers look very good. Indeed I was never privileged to handle a more earnest, willing and capable lot of recruits. I think I have selected the best of these, and will get some good returns out of them before the season is over."

The Pittsburg fans believe that with a more determined spirit this year the old team can win the pennant. The players themselves agree that the Pirates went into the race last year over-confident that they would capture the pennant, and that they did not give the others credit for being as strong as they were.

JOHN I. TAYLOR CONFIDENT THAT THE RED SOX ARE WINNERS

By JOHN I. TAYLOR

Written Expressly for the Sunday American by the President of the Boston American League Baseball Team

JOHN I. TAYLOR

AT the beginning of no previous season have I felt more confidence in the Red Sox than now. On the whole it is much stronger than last year's team and will be in the pennant fight from the start till the very end.

We are away ahead of last year in the box and behind the bat. The veterans have demonstrated that they can be relied upon, while in the recruits, Moser, Bedient and Killilay, we have three whom I anticipate will prove surprises.

I expect that after the season has been under way for a few weeks we will use Williams behind the bat. In Nunamaker we have a "find." Then, with Madden, we will not have to place all of our reliance on Carrigan.

Williams will open the season at first base, but just as soon as Bradley comes around all right he will be put at the initial bag. I have confidence that Bradley will turn out to be a star first baseman. If I am mistaken in Bradley's work at first, I will put him back to catching and send Williams over to first. If Bradley and Williams should fall down, I'll leave no stone unturned to secure the signature of Jake Stahl to a contract.

Purtell is in bad shape to cover third, but I don't think we have lost anything with Engle in his place. He was all right last year and he is much faster this [illegible] ...

YANKEES ARE FIRST PLACE MATERIAL NOW

Hal Chase's Bunch Look Like They Will Go Right Out for the American League Pennant

By D. C. O'CONNOR.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The New York Yankees should be right there in the final up of the American League pennant race. A year ago they were considered a second division team, but the acquisition of several good twirlers put them right up among the leaders, and they finished second. Prospects this season indicate that they will be as strong if not stronger. Ford and Vaughn, the two men who lifted the club last season, are again in fine shape and should do as well on the mound this season.

Hartzell has strengthened the team at shortstop, Knight has been shifted over to second, where he plays a strong game, displacing Gardner. Chase will again play first base, and it is expected that Johnson will be at third.

Cree, Wolter and Hemphill will start the season as the regular outfielders, but Daniels is a strong man and good hitter and may displace one of these before the season is long on its way.

Some Ordinary Pitchers.

The pitching staff is not any too strong, although the Yankees have two of the best twirlers in the league. Ford is a wonder, and Vaughn has a puzzling delivery that will win many games. Quinn, Warhop and Fisher are about like the average pitchers who are liable to develop a winning streak and also a losing streak. The catching department is not any too strong, as both Williams and Sweeney are only about fair.

Last season the Yankees started with a lot of new men and their followers immediately booked them for about the sixth or seventh position. The youngsters, however, sprung a big surprise and waded right out from the start. They were third in May, first position for one week in June, third in August and in the second position at the end of the season.

Ford put one over on everybody. He went into the league for a tryout, like any other youngster, and his peculiar delivery drew the manager's attention and he was retained for a thorough try-out. He made good from the start and at the end of the season he had a record of twenty-six games won and six lost.

Twenty Games Counted.

Those twenty games net that he won [illegible] the position that they [illegible] this season the club will fail with him. Quinn also pitched good ball last season and won eighteen and lost twelve games.

Hal Chase has now full command of the team. He has restored perfect harmony among his players and all hands are satisfied. He has a great ball team and good judgment, and will start right in next Wednesday to win the pennant.

ATHLETICS ONCE MORE OUT FOR THE PENNANT

By BERT CROWHURST.

PHILADELPHIA, April 8.—Connie Mack has already decided upon the main personnel of the Athletics for the coming season and now he is in the South trying to pick out the best of his Yanigans to make up the balance of his team. There will be few changes from the aggregation which landed the world's championship from the Cubs last fall and Mack is confident that he will again land the coveted flag for Philadelphia.

From present appearances "Big Bill" Hogan, the California recruit, will be seen in left field, with Hartsell and Strunk as capable substitutes. Should Hogan fall off in his hitting, however, Strunk will be given a trial there and "Topsy" Hartsel will be held in reserve as a reliable. The pitching staff will be augmented by "Lefty" Russell, the "$12,000 beauty" from Baltimore, and Mack has no doubt that that southpaw will deliver the goods.

In an interview to-day, Connie Mack said:

"My team was not at the zenith of its powers last season, yet we won the American League pennant and then the world's championship. So far as I can see we shall repeat again this season unless our pitchers go bad, and they don't give any sign that way at present.

"With Russell to help us out we are strengthened in the box, and Hogan and Strunk will be of great assistance in the field in case any of our men go bad.

"I am not overlooking the fact that several of the other teams have been strengthened, however, and we are not anticipating a walkaway by any means. New York and Chicago seem dangerous, and if the Boston team can strike the gait which marked its early performances last season it will make all kinds of trouble for some would be pennant chasers.

"At any rate, I am satisfied to stand pat with the team that I have at present and I shall be mightily disappointed if the Athletics finish worse than first. Our Southern trip did the boys a lot of good and we should start in the season with as good prospects as any other club."

JENNINGS WILL PLAY PAT WITH HIS TIGERS

But the Detroit Manager Must Develop a New First Baseman to Take the Place of Jones

By PAUL H. BRUSKE.

DETROIT, April 8.—Manager Hugh Jennings will have his Tigers in the pennant race again this season. He will stand pat on his team of last year with the exception of first base. Tom Jones has been thrown to the discard and the Detroit fans think that the management made a serious mistake. Gainor and Ness are trying out for the position.

Although a good fielder and a fair hitter, Gainor has lapses at times and is subject to slumps. Ness is a minor league first baseman. Tom Jones had his nose broken in St. Louis by stopping a red hot liner, and since then has never been able to play his old game.

The loss of the first baseman will mean a lot to the winning aspirations of the Tigers this season. If Gainor and Ness prove unworthy, Manager Jennings will have to shift his infield. Jennings would have to send Moriarty to first base and shift O'Leary to third base.

Two Good Infielders

Delehanty and Bush are anchored safe at second and shortstop and they will have to carry the infield. Bush was one of the leading shortstops in the league last season and much more is expected this year. He is now a fully experienced player.

Ty Cobb, D. Jones and Crawford will again play the outfield. It was reported that Cobb had gone back and had slowed up, but when he saw that he was being criticised he sharpened his spikes and tore up the ground as fast as ever. Ty said that he was not right at the beginning for the Spring season but that he will be on the job as fast and will steal as many bases as in any other year.

Old Mainstays in Box.

Donovan, Mullen, Willett and Summers will be the mainstays on the mound, with Killian and Pernol taking occasional turns. All of these twirlers have proved to be good, and with any kind of luck they are capable of holding up any good team.

The feud that has existed between several of the players on the team is now supposed to be at an end. The owner and the manager have been working with the players throughout the Spring training trip, and it is hoped that the men will work together in perfect harmony.

"CY" WANTS FIRST GAME.

Young Asks Permission to Pitch Cleveland's 1911 Opening.

CLEVELAND, April 8.—Cy Young, aged forty-four years, the man who has outlasted them all in point of continuous service, wants to pitch the first 1911 league game for the Naps. According to advices received by the Cleveland management here to-day, Cy has requested this honor, and says it is the only favor he will ask this season. It is extremely probable that his wish will be granted. Although Cy has not been with the club as long as some of the other twirlers, notably Addie Joss, his admirers believe the veteran should get the chance.

NAPS OUT FOR PLACE IN THE TOP DIVISION

Jim McGuire Dopes Them Out for Fourth or Better; Mitchell Likely to Pitch Opening Game

By ED F. BANG.

CLEVELAND, April 8.—The Naps are a fourth position certainty, a third position probability and a second place possibility. That's how Manager Jim McGuire of the Cleveland team has it doped out.

He admits that his hopefuls have practically no chance to beat out the world's champion Athletics in the struggle for the 1911 American League flag. He thinks that the Naps will have no trouble beating out St. Louis, Washington, Chicago and Boston.

He says the Naps will probably finish ahead of New York and may possibly top Detroit at the finish.

All Well But Joss.

McGuire's boys are all in fine fettle for the opening of the coming campaign; that is, with the exception of Addie Joss, whose lame salary wing still gives him trouble. Joss was always at his best in the Spring of the year, but this season he may not work until May 15.

McGuire has practically decided upon the lineup for the opening game at St. Louis Wednesday, April 12.

Graney appears to have the left garden patch sewed up and will bat first. Turner will play third base and will be next to bat. Jackson has his job of centre fielder cinched and will bat after Ole. Then comes the old reliable, Napoleon Lajoie, in a clean-up position in the batting order. Larry will be at his old stamping grounds at second.

Esterly To the Outfield.

Esterly has evidently proved to Manager McGuire's satisfaction that he is an outfielder of class for Jim has him slated for the right garden and fifth place in the batting list. Stovall will be back on the job at the initial sack and will bat after the former Nap catcher.

Olson will be introduced to American League fans at short and will follow Stovall to the plate. Grover Land will catch, as he is the Naps' most dependable backstop and is picked to do two-thirds of the heavy work during the season.

Willie Mitchell will probably be on the mound. Willie was eminently successful against the Browns last season. Then, too, he is in excellent physical condition and just aching for the honor to pitch the opener.

Of course, if Manager Bobby Wallace has too many right handed batters to send against him, Sardis, Cy Falkenberg, Fred Blanding or Crum Kaler may be Manager Jim's selection.

DUFFY'S WHITE SOX COUNTED AS WINNERS

Chicago Americans Look Like Coming Into Their Own Again With Lord and McConnell

By R. C. O'BRIEN.

CHICAGO, April 8.—The Chicago White Sox is one of the American League teams that is expected to show up much stronger than last season. Duffy has acquired several new players who have already been tagged as stars and the pitching staff will be strong.

He has the best third baseman in the country in Harry Lord, and Amby McConnell, ex-Red Sox second baseman, is in great form. The latter will head off the batting list for the White Sox this season and Lord will follow. These two men have bolstered up the infield a hundred per cent as both are brainy and can pull off the plays. Jones, a new man, will play first base and Zeider will play shortstop.

Dougherty, McIntyre and Meloan are the three foremost men for the outfield, but if any one falls down Manager Duffy has several old men who can fill in. Freddie Parent, J. Callahan, Messenger and Bodie are all veterans and good players.

"Big Ed" Walsh will again be the mainstay on the mound. His spitter is working as good as ever this season and he predicts a banner season. Walsh, Lange, "Young Cy" Young, Scott and Olmstead are all in line and will work their hardest to lift up the ... The catchers are good and with Sullivan, Payne and Block for back stopping the team will be well taken care of.

Youths Will Honor Janvrin.

Tickets for the Harvard game are now on sale at ... No. 344 Washington ..., Wright & Ditson's, Herrick's Copley Square Ticket Agency and in Cambridge at Wright & Ditson's, Leavitt & Peirce's and the Harvard Athletic Association.

Ban Johnson Says It Will Be Banner Year in American

Telegraphed Expressly to the Sunday American by the President of the American League

CHICAGO, April 8.—Baseball being our national pastime, it is safe to predict a great season. As it is a growing sport it should also mean a greater year than last, and I am certain that this will fit the American League.

SCORES OF SCHOOL TEAMS CLASH ON THE DIAMOND

Season Is In Full Blast Now and Many Games Are Scheduled This Week.

THE high school baseball season is on its way and will be on in full blast this week. About seventy five games are on the schedule, with Wednesday and Saturday the big [illegible]

The season opened a week ago with one game, three were played Friday and nearly a dozen yesterday. The official season was scheduled to open Wednesday, but snow and [illegible] the players inside, and the games were indefinitely postponed.

All of the high schools had outdoor practice last week and they received plenty of it. The teams are all in shape and most of the school's have decided upon their line-ups. The warm weather Thursday [illegible] the [illegible] squads and the coaches had their first good look at the talent.

Two games will be played Monday with Melrose High and Arlington High meeting at Melrose and Newton High clashing with Volkmann School at Allston. Melrose High opened its season Friday with a game with the Boston College High team and the lads proved that they are ready to cope with the strongest teams. "Rube" Cram is pitching in top form already and held the Boston [illegible] down to two hits in the full nine innings. Arlington High has a strong team and will put up a good battle. It is a member of the Mystic Interscholastic League and is the favorite.

Three Games Tuesday.

Three games are on the schedule for Tuesday, with Brookline High meeting Roxbury Latin at Brookline, Chelsea High playing Hyde Park High at Chelsea, and the Dean Academy second team meeting the Woonsocket High School team at Woonsocket. Roxbury Latin should have a strong team this season, but its pitchers are weak.

Brookline has a bright outlook. At the beginning of the season several of the star players were declared ineligible, but McGrath, Kelly, W[illegible] and Jack Ke[illegible]her have been reinstated and they at once became the [illegible] for a winning combination. [illegible] High is out to cut a big figure in scholastic baseball this season. It has the star twirler, Goodhand, who pitched wonderful ball last season, and he should hold the team against the strongest schools.

Wednesday afternoon will be the first big day of the season, weather permitting. About fifteen games are on the schedule and all of the best teams will be out. Boston Latin will open its season with Cambridge Latin on Rindge Field, North Cambridge; Boston English High will battle with the Groton School at Groton; Everett High will meet Stoneham High at Everett; Malden High will open its season with the Boston College High School at Malden; Waltham High will have the Boston University for its opponents at Waltham, and many other games will be played on the different diamonds throughout the State.

Two Fast Teams Play.

Medford High will play the High School of Commerce Thursday. Both these schools have fast teams and this should be a real live game. Medford High won the Suburban High School championship last season and has most of its old material back this season, and the High School of Commerce won the Boston High School championship.

Newton High will play its second game with a preparatory school Friday, clashing with Stone School at Newton. Malden High and Roxbury Latin, Wellesley High and Brown & Nichols, and Weston High and Concord will also play Friday.

Dorchester High and South Boston High will clash in the big game Saturday, with twenty other school games being played throughout the State.

THOSE BASEBALL "KIDS" ARE RIGHT UP TO DATE THESE DAYS

The youthful diamond magnates have boost[illegible] baseball right into the front ranks. They have their training seasons, their reserve lists and their own official stationery. Here are a few samples of the youngst[illegible] [letter]heads taken from the hundreds that are sent daily to the AMERICAN sporting department; together with a half dozen of the star players.

DIAMOND DITTIES
HOMEWARD BOUND
By Damon Runyon

WELL, we've seeded the Jungles with Spring recruits as we've left the old South astern;
We've planted a crop of next year's grief when they'll come for a second turn.
But we pound our ears to the carwheel's croon with a good, glad tunk in our heart,
For we're shed of the kids who threatened our jobs, and it's soon that the salary starts.

WE'VE left all our aches and pains at the springs where we stripped from our Winter ease,
And we josh the boobs at the kidtown stops with many an old-time wheeze;
We raise our voices and raise our bets with the faith that a flush imparts—
As we sift from the South and the winds o' March to the time when the salary starts.

WE'RE booming along through some bush league dates to our places as first-page news
(And a Pullman's a pretty soft berth, my boy, when you're sure of your regular's shoes!)
So we dream to the drone of the drumming wheels with a peace in our minds and hearts.
And we hope that the kid from the Six Gun League breaks a leg ere the next year starts!

HARVARD NINE FACES THE RED SOX TUESDAY

Crimson Has Been Delayed In Practice, but Men Are Well Trained

By E. V. B. PARKE.

HARVARD swings into the baseball world for the season of 1911 next Tuesday afternoon, when the Crimson nine meets the Red Sox on the Huntington avenue grounds, and Harvard rooters will have a chance to look over their pets and judge for themselves what their caliber is this year.

Harvard is a week or more behind the other colleges in playing its first scheduled game, but the Crimson has had very poor weather conditions. The make-up of the nine is still very much unsettled, and will continue so until after the team has taken the Southern trip, upon which they start next Friday.

The first game Tuesday will be watched with unusual interest by Harvard men. The squad this year is under a new coach and every one is anxious to find out how it is coming along under the tutelage of Dr. Frank Sexton, the former Brown University and Boston National twirler.

The squad does not seem to be as replete with born ball players as in former years, but to make up for this lack it is evident that the men will round into ball players of first class college ability, and develop a nine of greater strength than Harvard has been blessed with for some years past, even when better material was available.

The men have been divided into two teams for daily practice games recently, and from these lineups, which have been made of as nearly equal strength as possible, some fairly good estimate of the worth of the players can be made.

Felton is the most likely man in the box. He is only a sophomore, but his schoolboy record is good and his performances this spring have been excellent. But he is not eligible, being on probation. He has great speed, with good curves and good management. The next man is Babson, the former Cambridge Latin twirler. He played an outfield position off and on for the varsity last year, and he was not needed, with Hicks and McLaughlin in the box. Babson is a small man, but he can work up good speed, and, besides, he has good control. In addition, there is Captain McLaughlin himself, who seems to be slated for the third sack job this year. His work in the box last year was exceptionally steady and good.

Unless Felton gets off probation, and Captain McLaughlin is used, the pitching staff of the Crimson does not promise much strength, for Ohler, Hardy, Bartholf and Ernst are very ordinary performers and can hardly be relied upon to take the brunt of some of the harder game at the end of the season.

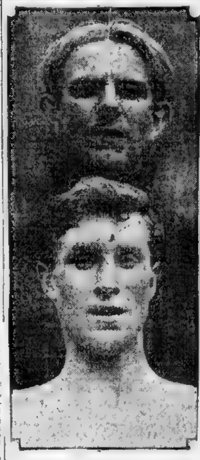
DEAD HEAT RUNNERS IN THE CATHEDRAL LONG DISTANCE RACE



E. L. Clem (above) and F. J. Madden, who crossed the tape together in the 10-mile cross-country run.

COIN FLIP DECIDED LONG RACE WINNER

F. J. Madden of the South Boston A. C. and E. L. Clem of the Lynn A. C. ran a tie race in the ten-mile cross-country run of the Cathedral Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon. After the race a coin was tossed; Madden won and was awarded the prize.

There were eight prizes, including the time prize, which went to James Heligan of the North Dorchester A. C., who covered the ground in fifty-three minutes and seven seconds.

The following contestants were awarded the prizes, finishing in the order named: F. J. Madden, S. B. A. C., E. L. Clem, Lynn A. C., 55.48; F. F. Piggott, Medford A. C., 53.48; H. F. Maguire, Providence A. C., 53.51; J. M. Martin, S. B. A. C., 56.05; C. L. Clark, Chelsea Y. M. C. A., 56.36; James Heligan, North Dorchester A. C., 53.07.

Following these runners came Robert A. Stone, St. Joseph's A. C., and John Walsh, Brooklyn Gymnasium Association.

The ten-mile course was as follows: Union Park street to Harrison avenue to Massachusetts avenue to Columbia road to Blue Hill avenue to Morton street and return same route.

One of the surprises was the entry at the eleventh hour of Michael Thomas, the Indian sprinter, who was placed at scratch with Joseph Silva of the S. B. A. C. and John Cook of the Brooklyn Gymnasium Association.

When the fleet footed Red Skin made his appearance there were murmurs of discontent among the sixty-seven sprinters, and half dozen who felt that they had a chance for first place became stricken with frigid feet and donned their civilian attire.

This did not deter Thomas from getting into the run, however, and when he appeared on the street in front of the club house for position he was greeted with a lusty cheer.

Most of the handicap runners were sent off in squads of about a half-dozen and when the trio of scratch runners bent it at the word of the starter Thomas was the last man to leave the tape for the jaunt.

He contented [illegible] holding last place until Massachusetts avenue was reached when he put on a little speed and passed up into the crowd and at the turning point at Morton street he was well up with the leaders, but his heavy weight was too much for such a short run and he failed to get up further than the twentieth man at the finish.

Silva and Cook were [illegible] but the best they could do was sixteenth and seventeenth.

Hamiltons Fall Before Fast Playing of the New England Leaguers.

An agreement was reached this week whereby Oliver Ames has clear title to the ribbon and Westfield gracefully drops out of the race.

STARS TO COMPETE IN B. A. A. MARATHON

Forty-Five Crack Runners Have Already Entered the Big Classic.

Forty-five of the best long-distance runners in the East have already entered the fifteenth annual B. A. A. Marathon run to be held April 19 from Ashland to Boston. The runners have more than a week more to file their entry papers, and it is believed that the number will finally be three times what it is now. All the New England star distance men, as well as the pick from Canada and New York, will compete.

At least three red men will start, and all are boomed as great runners and in the same class with Tom Longboat, who holds the record for the course. Charley Honyoust, a full-blooded Indian from Oneida, N. Y.; Michael Thomas of Prince Edward Island and Andrew Sockalexis of Oldtown, Me., are the three Indians entered. Honyoust was in the race last year and created a favorable impression, but he was wholly out of condition and was forced to abandon the contest after going fourteen miles. Thomas and Sockalexis are both strong runners and will go out after the record.

Four Cracks from Toronto.

The Irish-Canadian A. C. of Toronto has selected four men to represent that organization in the Boston run. They are Jim Corkery, who ran third last season, Dick McCormick, who finished seventh last year, Sandy Megley and W. H. Showers. The first two have already shown their worth in the long-distance game in this country, and Megley and Showers are also strong. This club held an elimination trial race last week, Corkery, McCormick and Showers finishing in that order.

Several other Canadians will participate in the race this season. Entries have been received from Ed Fabore of Montreal and W. H. Price of the Central Y. M. C. A. of Toronto. Fabore did some excellent running last Winter, and he is a likely contestant.

Conditions Are Improved.

The race will be run under better conditions this year, as the management has made arrangements so that no freight trains will block the course at South Framingham and automobiles that will follow the runners will be required to use caution. No automobiles will be allowed at the finish and the streets will be in the best of condition. Following is the list of entries received to date, with their numbers:

Mercier Outboxes Stewart.

BANGOR, Me., April 8.—Johnny Stewart of Bangor and Kid Mercier of Lawrence, Mass., fought six of the fastest rounds seen in Bangor for many years before a crowd of a thousand fight fans to-night. BOWLING IN GREATER BOSTON

By ED COGSWELL.

CHELSEA SQUARE still holds onto that first place in the Greater Boston City League like grim death, its lead over Murray & Irwin being just the same as a week ago, two points.

The latter five are getting nervous, for the league closes May 12, and the toughest team that Chelsea Square will hit comes the final night of play. Revere are its opponents. On the other hand Murray & Irwin is likely to have its most bother with Adams Square over the latter's alleys.

STAR DOUBLE WINDUP AT ARMORY A. A. SHOW

The Armory A. A. has arranged for the next show, which will be held on Wednesday evening, instead of the regular meeting night of Tuesday, a double windup of twelve rounds each and two six-round preliminaries.

The club has secured Monte Attell of California to meet Al Delmont of Boston in the final bout of twelve rounds. Monte Attell is a brother of the famous featherweight champion, Abe Attell, who has held the title for a number of years and is considered the marvel of the prize ring.

The first bout of the evening will bring together Mickey McIntire of Sidney, N. S., and Jack Dorman of New York.

A six-round contest in the 115-pound class between Mike Conroy of South Boston and Frankie Maloney of the West End, will open the show, and Eddie Carr, the clever South Boston featherweight, will have a chance to show his skill with Jack Ladbury of England, a boy with a good record.

A feature of the entertainment will be the appearance of Abe Attell in his brother's corner. Abe is showing at a local theatre this week, and will be in Monte's corner to give him what advice will be necessary.

GUNTHER OUTFIGHTS LEWIS

But Furious Bout in Paris Is Called a Draw.

PARIS, April 8.—In a furious 20-round bout at the Cirque de Paris to-night, Willie Lewis, the American middleweight, was fought to a standstill by George Gunther of Philadelphia. The contest was declared a draw although the audience, which contained a sprinkling of fashionably attired women, seemed to favor the negro, who put up a slashing fight from start to finish.

That Lewis did not put his man out of the way early is accounted for by his admirers to the fact that he was not properly conditioned. Gunther, who had been doing some great fighting lately, was looked upon as the possible conqueror of Lewis, who is an idol of the Parisians, as a result of the clever fighting he has done here in the past two years.

The Cirque was jammed to the doors when the men took their corners.

JEWISH SCRAPPERS ARE GAME FIGHTERS

Tad Points Out Some of the Lads Who Have Done Wonders in the Ring.

By TAD.

The Irish boxers have, as a rule, had the reputation of being the gamest lot of mixers on the map, but we'll have to be shown a few things before we'll hand them all the credit.

The Jewish boxers have the reputation of disliking the grueling part of the game. Like the Germans, the fans sort of figure them as through when the tide turns against them, but there are instances, many of them, too, where the Jewish boys have proved themselves regular soldiers when under fire.

What greater exhibition of gameness would you want than that shown by Abe Attell in his battle with Frankie Burns?

In the first place, the little Hebrew marvel from the West was forced to make 118 pounds ringside in order to get Burns. His natural fighting weight is 122, but weight counts little with Attell as long as he can get a man to box him.

He has fought men weighing 140 just to show his superiority. But to get back to the biscuits. Abe made 118 ringside and entered the ring with a sore shoulder. This same left shoulder or collar bone, to be exact, was broken only a month or so before out West with a gent by the name of Kilbane.

Attell Is Game All Right.

Abe went into the ring the other night at a low weight and with a collarbone that he wasn't sure of. He went along swimmingly until the fifth round, and looked like an easy winner.

In the sixth, however, after a tough mixup, he came out of the clinch with his left arm hanging by his side. His opponent, thinking it was a pull on, refused to mingle at first, but noticing that after Abe refused to block with it tore in like a tiger.

There stood little Attell, with nothing but his good right hand to fight with. He went through that round and took an awful grueling. Burns pounded him as he pleased, and it looked as though Abe's seconds would throw up the sponge. They did try it during the minute rest, but Abe told them no.

He had gone half the distance, and would fight with one hand rather than throw up the sponge. For the next two rounds Abe did as well as he could with the right hand, but in the ninth, after holding back a few seconds, let fly the right, and down went Burns. It was nearly over, but the latter, by running away, managed to stick it out.

In the tenth Abe again floored his man and chased him around the ring. Have you ever heard of anything like that in a fight around these parts?

Attell is not the only Hebrew who has made a mark in ring history through ability and gameness. Joe Choynski, a very light man, at 160 pounds in condition, stood off the lumbering Jeffries for twenty rounds in Frisco, and Jeffries that night tipped the beam at 225.

It Was a Close Battle.

Choynski looked like a baby alongside the giant, but it was one of the closest things ever decided in the West. Jeffries admitted only last year that Choynski hit him the hardest punch he had ever received.

Kid Herman, of Chicago, is another Jewish fighter whose ring history will not soon be forgotten. He fought Kid Abel four rounds in Chicago years ago with a broken jaw and made a draw of it at that.

Look at Kid Goodman of Boston. One of the toughest lightweights we ever saw. He met the best boys in the world and the only time he ever was knocked off his feet was last year, when he met K. O. Brown.

Joe Bernstein, the Ghetto champ, was the first boy to really hold Terry McGovern down after that terror hit his stride.

Harry Lewis, of Chicago, another Jewish boxer, was the marvel of his time. Harry was all alone in his class when he was right.

Yale and Columbia Tie.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The Yale and Columbia soccer teams played a scoreless game to-day on South Field, repeating their performance of last year. Neither side was able to penetrate the other's defence.

National Titles In B. A. A. Bouts

Best of the Amateurs Will Compete for Championships Tomorrow and Tuesday.

Boston fans will see the liveliest kind of boxing to-morrow and Tuesday evenings at the National amateur bouts in Mechanics Building. Close to a hundred entries have been received with all the best boys in the six classes participating. Several boxers from Canada and New York will come over and show their skill.

It is somewhat of a disappointment that Warren Barbour, who won the heavyweight title last year, will not defend his title. Barbour is a big attraction and a good performer. Several local heavyweights are entered and many believe that Barbour would stand a chance of losing.

Young Johnny Fallon, who has been winning championships at different amateur bouts during the Winter, is entered in the 105-pound class and he will go into the ring a great favorite. Fallon is one of the classiest boxers turned out in Boston for several years and he will bear watching.

Gilbert Gallant, of Chelsea, is entered in the 125-pound class and he is also a favorite for the championship. Gallant has won several championships in his class and is rated as a coming champion. He has been winning all of his bouts in one and two rounds and has never been defeated.

HARVARD TRACK MEN GO SOUTH THIS WEEK

Choice of Candidates Will Be Made at Stadium Meet Thursday.

By E. V. B. PARKE.

The Harvard track squad starts on its southern trip next Friday, in company with the baseball and lacrosse teams, and although no definite runners and field event men have yet been announced to compete against Annapolis, it is known that about twenty will be taken on the trip, exclusive of managers, rubbers, trainers, etc.

Next Thursday afternoon the annual interclass track games will be held in the Stadium, and on the performance in these games will depend the taking of the men on the trip.

The meet next Thursday, however, will permit the coaches to see just what their runners are capable of doing at this time of year, and so be able to draw conclusions as to their chances against the Middies, which will be held on April 22, at Annapolis.

The quarter mile will be represented by W. H. Kelly, the winner of this event against Yale last year, S. C. Simons, another point winner, and H. M. Warren the winner of this event in the freshman meet with Yale.

W. H. Fernald and Herbert Jaques will enter the half mile, while the latter will probably also gallop around the mile stretch, aided by F. C. Gray, who got third in this event last year.

H. P. Lawless, the freshman miler and two miler last year, and the holder of the schoolboy record for this distance, is at present on probation, and his going on the trip depends upon his ability to get into good standing.

P. Newton, another point winner in this event against Yale last year, will probably be taken.

The hurdles will probably be taken care of by J. K. Lewis, the only hurdler in Harvard at present. J. B. Cummings, an ex-freshman hurdler, will also go.

The high jump will probably find A. D. Barker and B. A. Reed in the ranks, while the shot put will have two novices as far as "H" men are concerned, in R. V. Moody and P. H. Keays.

There are no real good specialists for the broad jump at Harvard at present, and it is unlikely that any men will be taken particularly for this event.

For the shot put T. Cable, the colored chap, is the most dependable. In addition there is C. S. Parker and B. D. Hodgee, the latter the winner of third place in the hammer throw last year against Yale.

The runs should all go to Harvard, that is first places should, according to Crimson figuring, and this seems to be conservative, for Harvard has a very well balanced team in the runs, although the hurdles are apt to get away from the Crimson.

The field events will probably contribute a number of points to the Middies, but in the hammer throw, however, there should be just one big Crimson glow, and Barker may be looked to for a win in the high jump.

AUTOMOBILES

THIRTY-FIVE GREAT RACING PILOTS ARE NOW ENTERED

The 500 Mile International Sweepstakes Attract the Greatest and Most Daring of Operators to Indianapolis.

Gathering in one by one the world's premier motor racing pilots, the 500-mile International Sweepstakes Race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway next Memorial Day has assumed greater proportions than any other race in the history of automobile contests. There is but one great driver left on American soil who is not nominated to drive a car in this long classic, "Wild Bob" Burman, the successor of Barney Oldfield. Burman will be in the race—his word has been given.

This wonderful condition is made possible by the entry of Herb Lytle, dean of American drivers, in an Apperson Jack Rabbit. The entry was made by Lytle himself as owner, and the association of his name with the veteran racing car from Kokomo makes the roster of the great race look natural to the older fans of the motor racing sport.

Along with the entry of Lytle came the entry of two Fal cars from Chicago. J. F. Gelnaw and W. H. Pearce were nominated as wheelman for these two. They are the 1910 team drivers of the Fal. The former won the classic Coco Cola trophy at Atlanta last November and the latter was the winner of the G. & J. trophy race at the Indianapolis brick track last July. They had great success with the Fal cars in the past year and are looking forward to the winning of new laurels during 1911.

It is believed highly probable that ten more entries will be added to the list of thirty-five which were made under the early closing conditions, and all preparations are being made for the starting of forty cars in the long race. While the foreigners are wrapped up in their own big races across the water this year, indications are that some of them will be among the starters in the Sweepstakes.

From the standpoint of the entrants the race conditions are becoming more and more interesting and alluring daily. Side offers are being made by the various accessory and supply makers, and the side money thus far hung up totals $6,500. This is in addition to the purse of $25,000 offered by the Speedway.

It is now thought that the total of the prizes to be won in the event will be about $50,000, and several accessory makers have said they will come in later with other offers. This makes the fortune at stake the greatest by far ever offered in any one automobile race.

The Babcock Truck.

The second shipment of Babcock trucks was received by the Somerville Automobile Company, corner Boston avenue and Broadway, this week. One model is a very handsome panel top, design of which is very artistic and the workmanship and finish of the highest grade.

The body has a seven-foot carrying space, and is so arranged that it is adapted to a great many different kinds of business. This truck will be on exhibition in the company's showroom for the next two weeks.

E. M. F. MAINTAINS ITS RACING RECORD

At the Southern Race Meet Witt Drives the Car to Victory in Its Class.

Competing against both foreign and American cars of higher price and larger dimensions, the E-M-F "30" "Polar Bear" captured the five-mile stock event over the fast Atlantic-Pablo Beach course at Jacksonville, Fla., and created a new world's record for cars having a piston displacement of 161 to 230 inches.

Driver Witt piloted the E-M-F "30" to the front in four minutes and twenty seconds, taking the world's record away from the dare-devil Chevrolet, who held the record for five miles in four minutes, twenty-seven seconds.

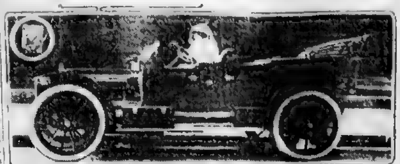
Among the cars defeated by the E-M-F "30" were a foreign and domestic made car. Officials of the American Automobile Association and others who saw the hair raising event say it was the most spectacular five-mile race ever conducted. The event was hotly contested every inch of the way until the last half-mile, when Witt flashed to the front and won by a good margin.

SIGNIFICANT VICTORY.

Little Reo Delivery Wagon Makes Great Showing.

Later and more complete details of the recent Port Huron commercial car endurance run discloses that the course covered twenty-five miles of heavy, rough, hilly and muddy roads between Port Huron and St. Clair, it having rained heavily on the two days preceding the contest. Among the four contestants the Reo, Model "H," light delivery truck, driven by George J. Thomas, won first place by the tremendous margin of fifty-five minutes. The Reo's load, exclusive of the actual weight of the car, was 1,880 pounds and only two and a half gallons of gasoline and one pint of oil were used. This load was much greater than that of the Reo's closest rival, besides the Reo's ratio of gasoline and oil consumption was most favorable. The Reo was the only car in this strenuous contest that negotiated the entire muddy route without having to be shoveled out of the many deep mud holes in the run. This is the fifth victory which this powerful, reliable and popular light delivery motor truck has won within the last sixty days.

A Famous Motorist



ANNETTE KELLERMAN IN HER RAMBLER.

Does the Work From Two to Four Wagons

Great Success Follows the Use of the Lightweight Delivery Motor Vehicle.

Since the Boston Branch of the Buick Motor Company established a commercial department a number of the 1,000 to 1,500 pound Buick trucks have been sold and delivered.

In demonstrating to prospective purchasers deliveries for many lines of business have been made and in every case the Buick has proven that it can do the work of from two to four single wagons and at less expense.

By means of a specially designed instrument an accurate record of the mileage, running time, etc., is kept and at the conclusion of the day's work the buyer can tell exactly what the operating expense will be, assuming that the distance traveled was a fair average.

Certain lines of business, such as laundries, dairies, etc., require the stopping and starting of the car many more times than others where the stops are less frequent and the hauls larger, but the Buick truck is so constructed that even a careless operator cannot seriously injure the transmission.

On a demonstration recently made to a milk dealer in the Newtons the Buick truck did the work of three horses and then saved considerable time. One hundred and twenty-five stops were made, averaging three minutes each, and from 4 a. m. to 4 p. m. the motor was not stopped except at breakfast and lunch time.

The distance traveled was sixty-seven miles to an average speed of fifteen miles per hour. The cost of gasoline and oil for the day's work was but $1.04.

A VERY BUSY SEASON.

The Market Will Absorb Cars as Fast as Produced.

H. M. Bates of the Boston Jackson Automobile Company foresees a very busy season. He says: "The market will be practically bare of cars inside of thirty days.

"There is one subject that is of vital importance at this time to the public as well as to the auto manufacturers. That is in regard to the matter of buying cars for Spring delivery.

"There have not been as many cars delivered up to date as has been the case in former years. Notwithstanding this there are twice as many prospective purchasers this year as there were a year ago to-day, and the outlook for Spring business is very bright.

"Many manufacturers, however, have not let contracts for as much material as has been the custom for the past three or four years. The manufacturers are more conservative now and they are only ordering materials as they require them. One reason for this is the hurry in business last Fall, and another is the tendency of purchasers to wait for good weather before placing their orders."

New Fiat Salesman.

Mr. E. C. Thompson has joined the selling organization of the Fiat Automobile Company in Boston, and will take up his new duties Monday, April 12.

Mr. Thompson has had considerable experience with motor cars, having owned several of the well known makes. He is very enthusiastic over the new American Fiat and feels that he has associated himself with a company that eventually will be the leading and largest automobile company in America. Mr. Thompson is a member of the Bay State Automobile Association.

The Boston office has sold a great many and delivered a number. Dr. P. W. Hewins of Wellesley, Mass., had a Fiat limousine delivered to him a few days ago and immediately took a tour through the country for a few days, stopping at Springfield, Hartford and various other places. He found the roads in bad condition on parts of the trip, but said that the master car was equal to the conditions.

AUTO SPEED RECORDS GO IN 24-HOUR RACE

Cadillac and Cole Cars Cover 61 Miles in the First 60 Minutes.

MOTORDROME, PLAYA DEL REY, Cal., April 8.—Promptly at the crack of Starter Frank Gotch's gun, nine racing automobiles leaped across the starting line at 4:01:21 o'clock this afternoon and the [illegible] endurance and speed contest was on. Weather conditions were ideal. The Cutting car got away in the lead with the Cadillac second. The Fiat [illegible] was unable to start and drew to one side of the track.

The Cole car soon took the lead away from the Cutting. At the end of the eleventh [illegible] when the Cole car was leading, the Fiat "45," driven by Verbeck, drew out from the pits and started in a mad dash to make up their lost time.

The starting cars and the men who drove them for the first three hours follow: E. M. F., Herrick, Schacht, Walling; Cutting, McNay; Cadillac, Adair, Warren; [illegible], Velie, [illegible] Milkrent; Fiat, Verbeck, Croxton; Solegot; Cole, Edmunds, [illegible].

The world's record for an hour in a 24-hour race, which was made by the Stearns at Brighton Beach track, of 57 miles for the hour, was smashed at 5 p. m. by the Cadillac and Cole, each car scoring 61 miles for the first hour. The E. M. F. was next with 57 miles and the Cutting fourth with 55 miles.

PENN STATE WINNER.

Naval Academy Team Beaten by Score of 10 to 1.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 8.—Notwithstanding low temperature and wet grounds, Penn State exhibited some snappy baseball here this afternoon, and defeated the Midshipmen by 10 to 1.

The hard-hitting of Eberlein was the biggest element in the victory, the big first baseman of the visitors making two triples and two singles in his four times at bat, the first two hits figuring in runs scored by State.

E-M-F 30 THIRTY

Another Masterpiece—In announcing the E-M-F "30" Fore-Door Full Vestibuled Body Touring Car, the E-M-F Company has given to the public an automobile that in uniformity of body-conformation, grace of line, and distinguished appearance, is a triumph of workmanship and "the last word" in combining comfort, utility and eye-pleasing beauty.

The Famous E-M-F "30" Chassis that has created an American standard of engineering excellence carries the new Fore-Door Body, presenting a combination that will be instantly recognized by expert or layman as a composite of those superiorities which have given unto the cars manufactured by the E-M-F Company pride of place in the automobile world, as proved by the enormous number of these cars sold, an indisputable argument of enduring quality and more than satisfactory service.

The Fore-Door Full Vestibuled Body is a distinct E-M-F creation. No element of freakishness, no passing "fad" or "fancy" has entered into its construction. After the "feeling out" process, which produced incongruities of body design, both in Europe and this country, had more or less defined the public taste, the E-M-F Company set its designers working to create a Fore-Door Body that should exemplify not only decided originality, but possess in refined degree the best elements of this particular design.

A Standard American Fore-Door Body is the result. A composite of all that is conservative and best in European design, together with an individuality that is decidedly American and distinctly original.

The E-M-F Company's Method of Manufacture and sale, which includes the now world-famous quality and price, is magnificently demonstrated in this new Fore-Door, Full Vestibuled Body, Standard Equipped, Five Passenger, 30 Horsepower Touring Car. Here is offered at $1100 an exceptional opportunity of purchase that will give this particular model the same future prestige in public favor that over 20,000 owners have given in the past unto the E-M-F "30" Touring Car.

Reading Carefully the Specifications and studying the lines of this new car, the many original body features will suggest the skill and carefully worked out details, that give lavishly of comfort and convenience of operation. Good looks and utility are blended perfectly.

The E-M-F "30" Fore-Door Touring Car, Full Vestibuled Body with Standard Equipment, at $1100 is indeed another E-M-F masterpiece.

When it comes to tires the formula is simple:—

Skill + Quality = Mileage.

High mileage tires require greatest skill in making; highest possible quality of material.

No concealment is possible; like murder, poor quality will out. Make sure of the right formula by specifying

GOODRICH TIRES

The B. F. GOODRICH CO. of New York
Boston Branch, 851-857 Boylston St.

The 12-Year Tires

Our Tire Book tells how to cut tire cost in half. It is based on 12 years of experience.

Motor car owners are learning more about tires.

As a result, our tire sales last year jumped to $8,500,000—trebled in a single year.

As another result, 64 leading motor car makers have this year contracted for Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires.

Will you let our Tire Book explain to you what led to this popularity?

No Rim-Cutting

Rim-cutting ruins more automobile tires than any other single cause. It may wreck a tire in a moment if you run it flat.

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires avoid this trouble entirely. Half a million have been sold and never one has rim-cut.

Until a few months ago motorists gladly paid one-fifth extra to get these patented tires. Now they cost nothing extra. Don't you think it worth while to accept them?

It is true that other makers still advocate the old-style clincher type. But we control the patents on our type. And there is no other way to make a satisfactory tire which can't rim-cut.

10% Oversize

The hookless base on the No-Rim-Cut tires lets us make them 10% oversize and still fit the rim. And we do it.

That means 10% more air—10% greater carrying capacity. It means, with the average car, 25% added tire mileage at no extra cost.

This oversize takes care of the extras—the top, glass front, gas tank, etc. It avoids overloading—the main cause of blow-outs.

You can get these No-Rim-Cut tires—these oversize tires—at the price of other standard tires.

You get in addition all the other perfections we have worked out in 12 years of tire making. Tens of thousands of buyers think them worth having.

Please ask for our Tire Book and judge if you agree.

To Meet at Least Once a Week

Electric Vehicle Dealers of Boston Make Plans to Advance That Branch of Motor Industry.

The second "get together" conference and dinner of the electric vehicle interests in Greater Boston was productive [illegible] definite plans for an electric [illegible] campaign. Many of the co-operative plans [illegible] the Boston Edison Electric Illuminating Company for helping the electric vehicle interests place more machines [illegible] they were [illegible] adopted and will be pushed with vigor.

Forty electric vehicle representatives and members of the Boston Edison Company sat down to dinner at [illegible]. W[illegible] Atkins, general superintendent of the Boston Edison Company, in a brief talk emphasized the necessity of team work and the necessity of all those engaged in the business keeping in touch with the [illegible] developments. To accomplish this he suggested the holding of a short weekly meeting and luncheon on a day most convenient for the majority. This would give an opportunity for a full, free and timely discussion of the conditions as they develop. He said that if this plan was agreed to they could meet in the Edison Building and the luncheon would be furnished by the Boston Edison Company. Addressing the representatives he said: "It is up to you [illegible] to advertise the specific vehicles you want to sell. This will be your kind of advertising and [illegible] We will advertise to popularize the industry, and will show our faith in it by buying $100,000 worth of vehicles for our own use."

Professor Dugald C. Jackson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology was introduced and explained in greater detail than at the meeting a month earlier how the Institute will prosecute its investigation of electric vehicle questions. Professor Jackson called attention to the fact that nearly every delivery system where horses and wagons are used has developed in a haphazard way and has spread out here and there as business has grown. Nobody knows anything about the efficiency of the horse and wagon, and it will be a part of the Institute's work to collect comparative data between the efficiency of horse and wagon and electrically driven wagon. There is considerable general information on this subject.

L. S. Mansfield, for the Boston Edison Company, outlined its plans for the development campaign, which will include:

A booklet that will be sent to all electric vehicle manufacturers and their agents throughout the country, giving information about this development campaign, a booklet with an attractively illustrated cover for local agents of electric vehicles in Greater Boston, a handsomely designed [illegible] pleasure vehicles, a handsome, illustrated booklet showing types of business vehicles electrically [illegible] that have agencies in Boston, and advertisements will appear in the Boston daily papers.

The company's electric garage at 470 Atlantic avenue has been opened now a week.

The details of arrangements for the week's conference meetings were left with a committee composed of A. F. Neale, chairman, with Day Baker, W. E. Eldrige and J. Walter Emery.

[L]ARGEST STORAGE BATTERY IN WORLD

[B]oston Will Have an Enormous [B]attery That Will Be Used for Emergency Purposes.

A contract has just been made by the [illegible] Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore, Md., with [illegible] Storage Battery Company of [illegible], for the installation of [illegible] battery to be used for emergency [illegible].

This battery will consist of 152 cells of [illegible] containing 133 [illegible] of the 152 lead lined wooden tanks will [illegible] 4 feet 2 inches in height, 21¼ inches wide and 6 feet 6¾ inches long and will weigh, without plates [illegible] electrolyte, 910 pounds. The total weight of the [illegible] battery, equipped with plates and electrolyte when ready for service, will be approximately 1,079,200 pounds.

This battery, when fully charged, will [illegible] sufficient [illegible] to light 120,000 twenty-five watt Tungsten lamps for one hour or 240,000 [illegible] lamps for [illegible] minutes, [illegible] an output of [illegible] H. P.

The Electric Storage Battery Company [illegible] installed forty-four batteries for the New York Edison Company, many of which are almost as large as the one now being built for the Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company of Baltimore. [illegible] batteries have been supplied to the electric lighting companies in Chicago, Minneapolis, Brooklyn, Boston and Spokane, and many other large electric lighting companies [illegible] the protection from such batteries are now considering an installation.

Not Worried Over Future.

Charles E. Fay, the Ford Motor Company's branch manager, said yesterday that unfavorable as the weather had been the [illegible] hadn't been unpleasant. The bad conditions had made his men work only [illegible] harder.

Mr. Fay says he thinks folks are always thinking of buying automobiles. If not now, perhaps later in the year or another year, so he believes in a persistent advertising campaign to keep the Ford cars before them. The estimate he makes is that the local Ford branch will dispose of 2,700 cars this year and will do it handily.

The service building is busy all the time. This is a most important part of the Ford system. "I don't believe that any company can get along without giving good service to its customers," says Mr. Fay. "That is our business principle and a good one to hold to, I am sure."

"In spite of the backward season we have done well," says Mr. Fay, "and I'm sure people want automobiles from the way they have been acting toward us. We're not worried over what the future holds."

He Skidded

Nine-tenths of all accidents to automobiles are caused by skidding or slipping. Either you skid into the "other fellow" or the "other fellow" skids into you. No matter how careful a driver you may be, there are always unforseen road conditions hard to cope with, but for which you must be prepared at all times. Even if the Asphalt, Creosote Block or Macadam pavement is slippery and uncertain—

Even if heavy rains have fallen, softening and churning up the mud—

When you have Weed Chains on your wheels, you can run along with perfect confidence, knowing well that this simple, efficient, time-tried, never-failing device will prevent skidding and slipping absolutely.

Weed Anti-Skid Chains
With the "Creeping Grip"

are a necessity, not merely a convenience. No one should leave the Garage without a full equipment of Weed Chains. All kinds of roads look alike to the car that carries them—slippery pavements, deep ruts, heavy sand; it's all the same—a start with Weed Chains means a finish.

A chain on each wheel is Car and Passenger Insurance and if you want to know what real steering-steadiness means, put them on your front wheels too.

Only foolish, inexperienced drivers dare leave the Garage without Weed Chains.

Cannot Injure Tires

Weed Chains because of the "Creeping Grip" cannot injure tires but actually preserve them. Many manufacturers object to guaranteeing their tires unless Weed Chains are used. They are guaranteed to have Three Times the Life of any other Anti-Skid device. Being reversible they save themselves—Two Chains in One. Made in sizes to fit every tire so be sure to get the right size. Too heavy a link will ruin a small tire. Your dealer knows.

No Trouble To Put On

You don't need a jack—and the little bundles that they make in their canvas bags take scarcely any room.

Because of the wonderful "Creeping Grip" and the great care used in manufacturing and inspection, they stand supreme. Made of the toughest steel, electrically welded and tempered; almost as smooth as glass and hard as a diamond without being brittle. Cross chains all brass plated. The name Weed on every connecting hook.

Sold by all dealers who also carry extra parts which can be applied in an instant and are absolutely interchangeable. If your dealer happens to be out of them for the moment, send us his name and we will see that you are supplied immediately.

"NED" HOLLIS TAKEN TO FEDERAL PRISON

Once Bright Star of Lobby Goes From Champagne Diet to Jail Fare.

About six o'clock last night, just as his former Beacon Hill cronies were getting ready for dinner and Saturday night diversion, "Ned" Hollis entered the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., to stay a year and a day.

The debonair, popular chap, "Ned" Hollis, the liquor lobbyist and "good fellow," as he was known, who went up like a rocket on Beacon Hill and who came down as rockets do, "Ned" Hollis, the free spender and genial host, ate a prison supper last night and a prison breakfast to-day.

"Ned's" friends may give a moment to their Day of Rest to reflect on the sharp and swift descent of a man, still young, who was considered one of the brightest and luckiest chaps around the State House during the sessions of 1905-6 and 7.

Became Liquor Lobbyist.

Edward P. Hollis was brought up in comfortable ways in Brookline. He went to Boston University, studied law and was admitted to the bar. Soon he landed what was considered one of the most profitable lobbying jobs at Beacon Hill, that of legislative counsel for the liquor interests.

He started out as a splendid man for the job. He was so suave, so smooth and so ingratiating in his manner that he made friends on all sides. Women who went up on Beacon Hill to battle for temperance were charmed by the delightful Mr. Hollis.

But "Ned" Hollis was not merely agreeable. He was a shrewd lobbyist. He matched his legislative and legal wits time and again against anti-saloon lawyers, especially such as Melvin M. Johnson, later to attain fame as the defender of Hattie Le Blanc. Hollis kept the temperance people busy in the legislative halls, even while he was forcing their friendship through his pleasing personality.

Suddenly he lost his position. It was said he was doing too much entertaining—enjoying too many champagne suppers—and was not producing enough actual results to suit his principals.

Back to $10 Job.

Hollis returned to ordinary law practice, but it wasn't much of a practice. Finally General Charles K. Darling, clerk of the United States Circuit Court and a classmate of "Ned" at Boston University, secured for him the position of naturalization clerk in the Federal Court. The job carried only $10 a week.

The remainder of "Ned" Hollis's career has become public property. He was arrested for stealing naturalization fees to the extent of $75. He pleaded guilty before Judge Dodge. He was sentenced to a year and a day in Atlanta Prison. On his promise to go West and reform, his peculations having been paid by his brother, Hollis was granted a stay of execution.

Hollis went to Seattle. But he took with him the young wife of a Brookline man. The misguided wife regretted her step before they were 100 miles from Boston. She did continue on the journey, but insisted on staying at different hotels than he all the way. In Seattle Hollis was arrested on complaint of the husband. He was brought back to Boston. The runaway wife returned to her husband.

Hollis was brought before Judge Dodge. Efforts were made to save him from prison, but the original sentence of a year and a day in Atlanta prison for embezzlement was re-imposed.

Hollis was taken to Atlanta by United States Marshal Guy Murchie, one of his old-time chums.

CHARITY WORKERS MUST PREVENT PHYSICAL PAIN, SAYS MARY BOYLE O'REILLY

THE first duty of the charity worker is to prevent physical suffering. This is the creed of Miss Mary Boyle O'Reilly, the noted sociologist and daughter of the poet and Irish liberator John Boyle O'Reilly.

An understanding heart and a quick sense of humor, Miss O'Reilly says, are requisites of the man or woman who would minister to the wants of those in distress. Before the Greenfield Town Club Miss O'Reilly talked at length upon this problem from the standpoint of a Catholic social worker.

In planning to inaugurate social work in any community, large or small, the first question is naturally "what is charity?"

The answer is, charity is an immense pleasure. Its first duty is to prevent suffering, physical, mental and moral. It is not alone the kindly impulse of our hearts which is necessary, but the common sense of our heads, and the first thing to learn is that human nature is alike, but that all human beings are different.

Seeing our neighbor, not as he is, but as we think he ought to be, is a usual standpoint, and we call this charity. But what is charity?

The old Jews said, to give one-tenth of one's income to the poor. The modern Orientals say that smiling in a brother's face is charity.

And we Christians know that it is personal service caring, planning, doing for our friends and neighbors.

But there are types of so-called charity workers. The dilettante, so benevolent that they would hold an umbrella over a duck in a rain storm, whose efforts at helpfulness add insult to injury, because so spasmodic, occasional and emotional. Such as these would not be allowed to teach the A, B, C's to children without a certificate, but there is no law to prevent them from meddling with the affairs of over-tired men and women whose bases of life are shaken; and the irony of it is, that wild oats of the faddist are garnered by the hungry.

Epicure in Charity Work.

Then there is the epicure in charity, once called "The Lady Bountiful," who, light heartedly and with good conscience, spends other people's money in desperate and costly attempts at reforms. Her days are filled with good intentions of the sort that makes a flooring where asbestos would be a more economical material.

Lastly is the professional philanthropist, too often the worst of cynics, with an essentially low and pessimistic view of human nature, one with that orthodox old dame who believed that the "doctrine of innate depravity was a good thing if we all lived up to it." Such philanthropists call on their "needy brothers" while hating their fellow workers, and they mark that other swing of the pendulum since the time when even Christians loved one another.

Despite their sociological jargon about "pauperizing the poor," they cannot lay hands upon their consciences and disclose that helplessness does not feed their patronage. But what is charity?

To know, we must learn from the poor; learn that the human tragedy is the hunger for bread, and that more pathetic longing for right living.

Learn that love and interest, intellect and salvation are necessities, that spirituality is a common possession, that the Seen is merely the drift from the Unseen, that sainthood is finest form of greatness and salvation is not an event, but is progress.

There is so much for us to learn from that aristocracy of the poor who live in extreme seclusion, shrinking from the soul-searing publicity that surrounds the prosperous as a social atmosphere. For the poor know that if every desire is carried to fulfillment possession would be satiative, the poor know the relative importance of the present and the future—that to-day was to-morrow once and will soon be yesterday.

The poor know what the unalterable social standards are, the sacredness of property, the protection of children and the sanctity of womanhood. It is among the poor that we can learn most easily that life is full of gravity, simplicity and quick spiritual instinct, that the compelling and persuasive influences are ideals. They know the pleasure of religion and that effectual faith in Heaven now so largely denied to the rich.

It behooves us as charity workers to learn from the poor how to treat the poor. There is no depth of flattery to which we may not unblushingly descend to secure such instruction from a less fortunate prosperous fellow-worker.

One thing we may well bear in mind, that though the pleasures of the poor are few, their lives are not all misfortune and hardship. The worker has the right to bread, to work and to rest and a right to opportunities for pleasuring. At least half the mischievousness of children grows because they have no toys, no implements for home occupation, and go out seeking for the work that lies waiting for idle hands.

Standards of the Poor.

Too often would-be charity workers invite themselves into the homes of people and there talk of standards of living as if their hosts had no standard of living of their own. Let it be remembered that the immigrant people have come here that they may more easily satisfy standards of living that they could not realize in the old countries, and they bring with them standards of religion, custom, law and ceremony that they wear as badges of ancient glory. Sons and daughters of the Saga nations, they recognize instinctively change is not necessarily progress and to our cities with their few traditions and dim standards of life, measured too often by the success that means more money making, our modern pilgrims fatten from the nations of the earth, have brought these standards of life, their religion and national customs, to merge in one tenement block.

The growth of these dense, complex bodies of population, with their various forms and rites and their common faith in a divine unseen, conduce to a popular belief in the rights of man and a standard of living soon made patent in their ambitions for their children.

But it is on us that the responsibility for home-making rests in part. There can be no real homes until the community insists on proper housing.

Paying for Neglect.

The low wage worker in our most Christian communities is too often forced to choose between old houses saturated with filth and rottenness and jerry-built houses, mere sieves for heat and cold, whose inmates suffer in health and comfort until nerves of ambition and morals pay the price for someone's criminal neglect. Because of our modern fluidity of labor in a town like Greenfield, the young wives of the majority of the mill workers are away from their own families. Factory bred, with little or no training in home-making, they have no one to teach them, for instance, that labor is squandered in keeping the floor clean merely for want of a door scraper; that good food is wasted because there is no store closet and no ice box; that health of tiny children often suffers for lack of cheap mosquito netting.

These things may seem trivial and to notice them seem beneath the dignity of the average charity worker. But such instruction is the most practical charity work that can be attempted. For an oil cloth on a kitchen floor prevents unnecessary scrubbing, bad knees, rheumatism, and those never-healing ulcers of the poor.

It is customary and apparently of obligation to disparage the cooking of the poor, but cooking takes time and fuel and training, and to the Irish, for instance, eating is just a bad habit.

Gluttony is all but unheard of, the pleasure being in the hunger, not in the eating. Old fashioned schoolmasters, doctors, and parents strongly disapproved of giving children much to eat and the present day mother in the home of the workman realizes herself a moral teacher and hesitates to tempt the appetite, since gluttony is a vice, food costs money and these anaemic children are not hungry.

But such mothers do not know that more food is needed to support mental strain than to sustain physical effort. Their children, often mentally overstrained and unable to digest the coarser foods, grow out of old-fashioned cookery and suffer from intestinal disease and have their craving for sweets and stimulants.

The proverbial laziness and ... of which teachers and ... often complain are often ... Even when the house mother ... these questionable conditions of her ... supplies she is handicapped because ... must buy on credit from a storekeeper and the man who trades on trust knows himself to be free from criticism.

The physical, mental and moral effect of mal-nutrition are profound, and if cooking teaching the preparation of foods is attempted the social worker has done ... friend and neighbor a real charity.

Strength as Germ Killer.

The first duty of charity is to prevent suffering, physical suffering first of all. The day when all children were put to one bed to catch the measles is past and gone and we now know that the secret of health is to keep strong enough to kill our own germs.

For a charity worker to neglect to safeguard the physical equipment of a child may make one responsible for the brain of a future scientist or the misery of a body tortured by temptation. Such care begins with the littlest ... for babies are so very young and ... tions that they sometimes choose ... ture, ignorant and short lived parents.

For instance, is anything being ... Greenfield to save new born babies from blindness? If not, why not? The Massachusetts Commission for the Blind stands ready to assist any Greenfield association to concern itself to keep children away from school until they are half past six. The enormous number of fatal cases of measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria occur between the years of three and five. The children of the people begin to study in school much too soon, for the children of the working parent and the children of the professional parent are not equally prepared by nourishment, home talk or tradition, for intellectual strain.

It is the little thing that often produces the lasting results. Working mothers may never have a chance to learn until the Town Club teaches them why the care of teeth is of grave consequence, why Jacky should be taught to gargle as soon as Jacky is taught his prayers; why Maggie's want of appetite at breakfast indicates that something is radically wrong in the room where Maggie sleeps. These things seem trivial. They are, though, recognized articles in the new creed of preventive medicine. All practical remedies aim at prevention. We dig to the foul roots of trouble and we not only secure individual happiness, but protect the common good.

Our lives are interlocked. No man suffers or succeeds entirely apart. Let an epidemic come and we realize our common interest.

Real social service is done by educating tenement dwellers who, being poor, are so largely unprotected. When they have learned to smell "smells," do not buy for them or allow them to buy disinfectants. Instead, force the landlord to overhaul the foul pipes.

For if sickness comes the family, life and prosperity suffer. If disease or death strike the wage-earner the progress of a generation is retarded.

Wasting Poor's Money.

Let the social worker of Greenfield learn if he can in every tenement or block all that can be learned of the local use or abuse of patent medicines. There is hardly a wickeder waste of the pennies of the poor. We rail at saloons, but the liquor dealer at least is not a pharisee. He sells his so-called whiskey for money, acknowledging the consequences.

Not so the makers of patent medicines whose devilish brew, often far more potent than any whiskey, is sold to troubled women that they may in anxious ignorance force it on their ailing children.

Most patent medicines are warranted to make one strong, though the most of the strength is saturated alcohol peddled for an exorbitant price that would buy even costly food.

For the chronic sick these dreadful nostrums spell slow suicide, for pain is a symptom of disease and, their warning symptoms drugged into dullness, the disease is ignored.

In the homes of the poor, far more often than not, will be found someone incurably sick, and unless the disease be mental, such sufferers are always welcome, for the poor still recognize the distinction of enjoying low health, the aristocracy of possessing a family disease.

If the charity worker sees and insists that the incurable invalid shares the home life and has, if possible, a bed near the living room and the heart of the family life, she will be doing sweet and lasting service.

MR. FARLOW REPLIES TO BISHOP NEELY

Christian Science ... Discussed by One ... ers of the Chur.

Alfred Farlow, ... of the Christian Science publication ... has sent the following letter to the AMERICAN:

Editor of the AMERICAN:

Dear Sir: In your issue of the ... Bishop Thomas B. Neely of New Orleans is reported to have said ... tian Science is 2 per cent ..., 3 per cent ... Last year at the Methodist ... In this vicinity Bishop Neely made ... statement, so the newspapers reported, that Christian Science contained ... 2 per cent of philosophy and 2 per cent of religion. According to the report, the gentleman is able to see 1 per cent more of religion in Christian Science this year than he did last year, and this convinces me that at the end of ninety-seven years he will without doubt be prepared to say that Christian Science has 100 per cent of religion in it. One per cent ... is rather slow growth, but that is the Bishop's affair. Your report ... the Reverend Bishop with having followed his attack upon Christian Science with ... Don't be sensational ... this attack is somewhat startling ... if the Bishop proposes ... whatever of sensationalism is ... ed on the rostrum, or if he ... he proposes to practice what ... herein ventured to preach. He ... one of a man who ... mind to stop chewing tobacco ... took into his mouth a ... at least four or five times as ... he had been accustomed to ... farewell morsel.

The gentleman ... woman wrote a book ... level with the Bible. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Eddy never was known to make any comparison between the Christian text book and the Bible, although she staunchly affirmed Christian Science to be strictly in accord with the teaching of the Bible. The Christian Science text book ... Scriptures ... It is in a sense ... Christian Scientists ... the Bible.

Since Bishop Neely made his attack upon Christian Science a year ago at Attleboro, Mass., thousands of sick folks have been healed through Christian Science, thousands of sinners have been reclaimed. I personally know of several drunkards who have been reformed through Christian Science during the past year, and we think it is proper to ask our friend "for which of these works do ye stone?"

In the Master's day a "tree" was "known by his fruit." Is it possible that we have reached an age when a religion which constantly bears good fruit is to be condemned simply because it differs somewhat from the religion of others? Whatever else may be said, it is a fact that Christian Scientists love the Bible and study it more than they did before they had Christian Science. They love the Christian religion and it is anomalous to suppose that this increased interest in God's word is due to the study of a book which advocates the opposite of the Bible.

Yours truly,

ALFRED FARLOW.

Real Estate Notes.

"Sections of cities built up with great uniformity usually drift into a lower class of occupancy and lower rentals," says Reginald Pelham Bolton in his new book, "Building for Profit." He treats the subject scientifically from all standpoints. He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the author of several books upon engineering problems.

Plans for broadening the scope and usefulness of the Ohio State Association of Builders' Exchanges were made at a convention of the association in Columbus. Several new exchanges were admitted to membership, and an effort will be made to organize the builders in other cities during the coming year. It was decided to pay particular attention to State legislation affecting the building interests.

The younger real estate men of Chicago have formed a club named the Co-operative Realty Club. Its object is to promote a closer fellowship and to further the exchange of ideas in regard to real estate matters. One of the innovations will be a weekly trip to some point of interest to real estate men.

ACTIVITY INCREASES IN LOCAL BUILDING

More Permits Issued in March Than in February; Wood Construction Predominating.

Boston at the present time is experiencing a miniature boom in the construction of wooden structures. The change in the law which recently went into effect, permitting tenement houses to be constructed of wood, where heretofore brick tenement houses only were allowed, has resulted in a large number of wooden tenement houses being erected.

The number of permits issued at the local building commissioner's office for wooden structures during March, namely, 147, was the largest for that month since 1898, when 160 permits were issued. The number of permits for brick structures during the past month decreased by 13 as compared with last year.

For the three months ended March 31, 339 permits for wooden structures were issued, as compared with 218 in 1910 and 271 in 1909. Brick permits for the three months numbered 80, comparing with 103 in 1910 and 81 in 1909.

The following compilation is self-explanatory:

SALES IN BROOKLINE.

Several Large Properties in the Wealthy Town Change Hands.

Frank A. Russell has sold for the Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, the estate located at No. 354 Tappan street, comprising a store and brick dwelling and 2,600 square feet of land, all assessed on a valuation of $15,600, $2,600 being on the land. The purchaser was Mrs. Harriet M., wife of Charles W. Dodson, who bought for investment.

Mr. Russell has also sold the attractive modern house and 7,800 square feet of land situated at No. 49 Salisbury road, to Mr. John K. Allen, who bought for occupancy. This property is assessed at $10,500, which is considerably less than its real value. The grantor was Laura M., wife of Wheaton Kittredge.

Another sale made through Mr. Russell's office was the estate located at No. 22 Vernon street, comprising a frame house, stable and about 6,200 square feet of land, owned by the estate of George E. Lyford and assessed on a valuation of $7,200. The purchaser was Mrs. Elsie Mandell Hall, who bought for occupancy.

Mr. Russell has also sold an estate in Woburn, located on Garfield avenue, comprising a double frame dwelling and about 60,000 square feet of land, assessed on a valuation of $3,200. The grantor was Mr. George C. Weiss, late of Milwaukee, and the purchaser was Olive H. Britton, who bought for investment.

PERGOLA A FEATURE IN SUBURBAN HOMES

Many Architects Now Utilizing It as an Element of Decoration.

Architects, in many cases, are now utilizing the pergola as an element of decoration not only in suburban landscapes but also in the homes. They are being adapted to doorways largely, forming vine covered front entrances whose effectiveness is out of all proportion to their cost. Enclosed by thick vines and furnished with stone or concrete benches and tables, with chairs, rugs and other furnishings, an attractive out of door apartment for summer is achieved. Or it may stand by itself in conjunction with a summer house, sunken garden or fountain, a dominant object in any landscape, however embellished otherwise.

Pergolas have been known in this country many years, but not popularly. It was not, in fact, [illegible] gardens had attained large proportions and the formal decoration of estates had become a matter of course that the use of the pergola as a feature was accepted to any wide extent. Almost every home builder whose ideas are in any way pretentious has one now, and this by no means need be taken to imply that the owner of the mansion or the great country house alone finds the pergola available. Properly applied, it lends itself to the cottage of moderate price.

It is something of a question—in the minds of laymen, at least, which is the parent of the other, the arbor or the pergola. Both extend far back into antiquity, and it is known that the early Romans were not unfamiliar with this decorative idea, and, so far as can be ascertained, the arbor goes back to the time whereof the memory of [illegible] to the contrary. Architecturally speaking, there are several minor points of difference between the arbor and the pergola, but the chief element of variation consists of the strips of wood which, in the case of the arbor, run in horizontal rows from column to column along the sides of the structure.

The columns of the pure pergola are connected only from the top. [illegible] often seen structures intended as [illegible] with the side strips nailed on to better support the vines. It would perhaps waste an owner if he were told that after all his outlay in the interest of art he had not a pergola, but an ordinary arbor. If vines must be held up from the sides it may be done with cords or wires running from top to bottom of the columns.

Out of Town Sales.

J. W. Wilbur has just bought of Walter S. Capewell, forty-five acres of land situated on Davis and Colonial streets, partly in the city of Waterbury, Ct., and partly in the village of Oakville. The property has a [illegible] of a half mile on Davis and Colonial [illegible] adjoins the George F. Pullen [illegible] acres. Mr. Wilbur previously bo[illegible] a total of one hundred and two acres [illegible] sewers and street [illegible] will commence [illegible] this property at once, and it will soon [illegible] on the market. The purchase price was [illegible] cash.

George Adams Woods of the Easton building, Boston, has sold for Alfred Clarke his lot containing 17,200 square feet on Westford avenue, Lowell, to Ripley & Horey, who have bought for investment.

NO SUCH THING AS FIREPROOF BUILDING

Many Architects and Builders Base This Contention on Recent Big Factory Fire.

Many architects and builders declare that there is no such thing as a strictly fireproof building. Their contentions are that structures are fireproofed and can be built to withstand the ravages of fire, but if they are filled with inflammable material, the material will burn, regardless of the fact that it will be impossible to burn down the building.

This it is stated was made manifest at the recent factory fire in New York, when 142 persons lost their lives in a fireproof building. The structure was saved, but the inflammable goods burned just the same.

Builders insist that if after structures are erected to protect human life and property no attention or care is taken to prevent the accumulation of inflammable material, the fault cannot be charged up to the construction of the building.

The scene of the New York fire was a structure built of steel and brick and fireproofed with hollow tile [illegible] investigation made by the firm which fireproofed the building shows that the structure was not damaged beyond the falling of the plaster from the fireproof wall of the building.

The point raised in connection with this conflagration is that while a structure can be fireproofed, to say that a building is absolutely fireproof is stretching the point. Builders assert that [illegible] skyscrapers—those of recent origin—are as safe from fire as it is possible to make them. But it is also asserted that if any one of two floors was filled with material of an inflammable character, and the material caught fire, it would burn without doing any particular harm to the buildings regarded as unburnable.

APARTMENT HOUSES SOLD.

Two in Brookline Purchased by Captain H. S. Colby.

Frederick L. McGowan, Devonshire building, has sold two more large apartment houses numbered 84 and 86 Winchester street, near Coolidge's Corner, to Captain Henry G. Colby, making four houses in all that he has sold to the same purchaser. They are [illegible] block of houses recently completed by Juan J. Johnston, Jr., who was the grantor, and represent the latest design [illegible] ments, each having a frontage of forty feet and each suite having three rooms fronting on the street. The property is not yet assessed, but Captain Colby's investment represents about $100,000.

BUILDING FIGURES SHOW A GOOD GAIN

Returns for March Ahead of February Record, but Less Than March, 1910.

Building returns for March as made up by Bradstreet's show a disposition on the part of that industry to throw off the quiet appearance natural in such a mid-winter month as February. The number of permits and the value thereof at most cities show a gain over the second month of the year, but a rather poor showing is made as compared with March a year ago.

The quarter's returns point to a progressive decline from the like period a year ago, which in turn showed a falling off from two years ago.

The expenditures at sixty-eight cities for March aggregate $55,108,938, an increase of 93.2 per cent over February, but a decrease of 14.2 per cent from March last year. In February the decrease was 11.8 per cent, and in January there was an actual gain of 1.2 per cent. over the like month a year ago. For the first quarter of the year the expenditures aggregated $147,050,476, a decrease of 8.7 per cent from last year, which in turn showed a loss of [illegible] per cent [illegible]

The record of building expenditures at leading cities reporting monthly, quarterly and yearly from January, 1909, down to and including March, 1911, shows the ebb and flow in the building industry in the past 27 months:

Opinions of Exhibitors

Arthur E. Horton, a [illegible] of suburban property [illegible] er Boston Real Estate [illegible] Exposition is the [illegible] ever taken place in [illegible] benefit of real estate [illegible] individual homes. It [illegible] the greatest expedition [illegible] and next year will see [illegible] engage space for [illegible]

Milton Dana Morrill [illegible] and head of a system of [illegible] and who has been [illegible] many exposition, said: "The [illegible] at this exposition has been [illegible] of a better type than at [illegible] New York annual cement shows, in both of which I was an exhibitor. The people here are really interested in the housing problem and the various methods exhibited for solving it. The present exposition is a big success and I believe it is only the beginning of a movement which will spread broadcast throughout New England."

D. Arthur Brown, a well known suburban land developer in one of Boston's suburbs, [illegible] real estate man who has attained bigger results in a business way than he ever dreamed of. "During the past week I have become convinced that this first real estate exposition is one of the [illegible] for real estate men and house builders that has ever been undertaken in Boston or New England," said Mr. Brown.

Will Exhibit Next Year.

George M. Fiske, president of the company which furnished the brick co[illegible] tion for the Ideal Home, is another enthusiast over the success of the exposition. "This exposition has resulted in more orders for me than I had hoped for," said Mr. Fiske. "The throngs of visitors at the exposition have convinced me that there are thousands of [illegible] for [illegible] which has [illegible] and furnishing of [illegible] thusiastic as I am [illegible] tained by our company [illegible] popular exhibit. The New England Ideal Home Association [illegible] among the firms contr[illegible] of the Ideal Home [illegible] this proposition and next [illegible] to exhibit on a far larger scale, as we expect to construct four Ideal Homes of different types instead of one."

These views express the consensus of opinion as to the [illegible] the first Real Estate and Ideal Home Exposition. It is proving an intensely interesting public attraction as well as a medium of large educational value.

In addition to the exhibits relating to all kinds of real estate propositions, house construction and its furnishing, and the many other features pertaining to these exhibits, the vast throngs in attendance have been entertained by the musical program given each afternoon and evening. In the main hall Edna Frances Simmons's Ladies' Orchestra renders classical and popular selections, while in the lower hall Ideal Home concerts are given by a well-known piano manufacturer and well-known soloists.

Yesterday was Cambridge day at the exposition and several thousand children from the University City were guests of the management.

Opportunity Is Knocking at Your Door—Everybody Can Try It, as It Costs Nothing.

How many words can you form from the letters contained in the word "PICTURESQUENESS."

This contest is one in which every person will have an equal chance and an opportunity to win one of the awards described below.

Sit down and see how many words you can construct from the letters comprising the word "PICTURESQUENESS."

Here are the rules and conditions governing the contest:

FIRST—With each list submitted must be the correct name and address of the contestant.

SECOND—Do not use the same letter twice in any word unless appearing twice in the word "PICTURESQUENESS."

THIRD—Contestants must write plainly on one side of the sheet, with words alphabetically arranged in columns and numbered so as to show how many different words have been formed.

FOURTH—No foreign words, abbreviations, affixes or suffixes can be used. Former successful contestants, Real Estate Agents or their employees not eligible. It is understood that contestants shall be bound by the decision of the judges, who are members and associates of this company.

FIFTH—In the event of a tie of two or more contestants an award of the same kind and value as that offered will be made to each so tied, provided there is no collusion. We reserve the right to make additional awards should the papers submitted seem to justify this course in the judgment of the company.

Awards The two persons sending in the largest number of correct words will each receive a deed for one lot situated at RONKONKOMA, Long Island. Property is located in near proximity to Beautiful Lake Ronkonkoma, "THE LAKEWOOD OF LONG ISLAND." Our land is high and dry, and there is Sailing, Fishing and Boating at the Lake. It is the terminus of the Great Motor Parkway, where a palatial clubhouse has just been completed. There are charming bungalow and building sites, and development of the property is assured. We are constantly making improvements.

There is no obligation upon the part of the successful contestants to buy land, but should they do so the lot awarded will be placed next to the one or more purchased by them, and a deed will be given for it when the others are paid for. A fee is charged for recording, etc., all deeds.

A United States Government Map of this section will be sent UPON REQUEST to any and all CONTESTANTS.

These maps give detailed information as to altitude, topography, distance, roads, bridges, houses, churches and schools, and we shall be pleased to mark upon the map the location of our property and its relation to the lake.

We do not publish a list of winners. Booklet entitled "Letters from Successful Contestants" will be sent upon request. We reserve the right to select all lots awarded in this contest. The contest will close on Tuesday, April 18th, at 12 o'clock noon. All answers should be sent to

GO SOUTH, SAYS CHAMP

Congressman Champ Clark of Missouri, the present speaker of the national House of Representatives, recently amended the famous saying of Horace Greeley, "Go West, young man; go West," and made it to read, "Go South, my boy, go South."

"The South is the place, and my advice is to go there," he said. "You won't eat as much as you do here in the North. If you do you'll die. Your clothing must be lighter and therefore less expensive. You won't have to buy any fuel to speak of and you can allow your horses and cattle to graze out of doors the year around.

"Believe me, the South is the poor man's land, and you'll live to see the day when the South is going to be the richest part of the United States.

"Why, say, I know a man who made $15,000 in one year off three acres of lettuce. Sounds fishy, doesn't it? True though, for I took the pains to find out. It's a great country, boys, and if you want a good tip follow my advice. That is, go early to the Southland and grow up with its progress."

If you are working on a salary with no prospect of ever becoming independent—if you are not able to give your family the luxury and comfort they would like, and want to improve your condition we can show you some things that will open the way for your advancement. The man who wants a home of his own is turning his thoughts to the farm. To this man Florida offers opportunities that are unheard of in other farming sections, and no part of Florida offers the same advantages to the man with a little money and a [illegible] to work as does our land at Brooksville in Hernando county.

TWO AND THREE CROPS RAISED EACH YEAR

Florida is a land where a man of average intelligence with from ten to twenty acres (and the soil and climate of Hernando county to help him) can easily make himself independent. Such are the men who have already "made good in Florida"; and they have not toiled like slaves for it either.

Dark, rich top soil and loamy sub-soil underlaid with clay close to the surface, the ideal soil and climate for oranges, grapefruit, pecans and garden truck; produces the brightest and best oranges and grapefruit shipped out of Florida, $500 to $1000 worth per acre.

MANY MEN MAKE $1000 NET ANNUAL PROFIT PER ACRE

Produces $525 worth of cabbage per acre, $800 strawberries, $672 celery, $933 lettuce, $400 onions, $401 cucumbers, $[illegible] tomatoes, $580 eggplant, $490 radishes, $250 potatoes and everything North [illegible] markets demand [illegible] as well as [illegible] hay, sugarcane and all staple crops.

The soil, the equable climate and the abundant water make all this possible. The thermometer seldom goes above 90 degrees in the daytime and 70 at night, the government records for thirty-five days show an average day temperature of 75 degrees. Florida, being practically surrounded by sea and gulf, is swept by sea breezes that make the Summer relatively cool and the Winter uniformly warm. Under these conditions the ordinary outdoor crops of Florida are as prolific and as choice as the costly hothouse products of the North—yet without the glass house and without the artificial heat.

Hence we say that nature has done more for man in Florida than in any other State. Every day in the year is a day of planting, cultivating or harvesting—or all together—the farming [illegible] forever placed beyond the fickleness of the weather and [illegible] the occupation that can absolutely be depended upon.

You are invited to come to an established and intelligent community of homes and schools. The pioneering was done in Hernando county long ago.

YOU CAN BUY ONE OF THESE FARMS ON MONTHLY PAYMENTS

Brooksville, the county seat of Hernando county, is situated on the only range of hills in all Southern Florida, its altitude being 228 feet above the sea level. It is always fanned by cool breezes from gulf or ocean and the nearness of the lower altitudes is never experienced. Its high hills ensure an absence of mosquitoes, malaria and other disadvantages of the flat, low-lying land of other sections. It is a thriving, busy and thoroughly modern city of about fifteen hundred inhabitants. It is equipped with electric lights, an ice plant, numerous factories, the largest brick plant in the State, six churches, excellent schools and many enterprising stores. Two railroads enter the town. The telephone service covers the entire county and connects with the long distance service.

The people are cultured, wide awake, progressive, extremely hospitable and anxious to welcome the energetic Northerner who comes to develop the country.

OUR FREE BOOK

explains everything regarding Florida. It goes into detail as to location of our land, the climate, the soil, the different cities near our property, the various kinds of fruits and vegetables that are now being grown there and sold for high prices. It also explains the length of time required for the proper cultivation of the various fruits and the number of crops harvested yearly.

The book also contains tables compiled for the government of the United States, showing the average productions per acre in dollars and cents. To the man in the North with a worked-out farm these figures will seem astounding, but they are taken from the government reports and are therefore reliable.

We do not ask you to take our word. Our book makes plain statements and you can easily verify them.

Mary Knows You're Not a Gentleman

By Herbert Kaufman

—(Copyright, 1911, by Herbert Kaufman.

You know Mary. She works in your building. P'raps she operates the telephone, or she may be a stenographer; it is quite possible she's a filing clerk. You meet her every day in the elevator. She hops off and on at practically every floor—a plain-faced, plainly dresssed working woman, who quietly slips to one side of the car, so that you never notice her—THAT'S WHY YOU DON'T REMOVE YOUR HAT.

It's strange, isn't it, how some folks can fade themselves into the background. It's entirely different with Mrs. Ponsonby Pufiles. No sooner does her well-shod foot reach through the door than your head is bared, you stand to one side, you remember that you are a gentleman—a man of breeding—you're proud of your gallant instincts; YOU understand the right things in life; one can tell at a glance that you are not a boor.

But, hold a while; perhaps we are hasty. ARE you a gentleman? It may be that you are a cheap tin imitation. Winced, didn't you? That shot went home. In your heart of hearts, you realize that you are half a cad and half a snob. What you mistake for polish is varnish. Your breeding is laid on as occasion demands. Underneath, you are a soft, weak, low-grade piece of timber—cruel as only a little man can be mean.

Oh, Mary knows. She sees through you. She realizes your true measure. Men like you make working women hate life.

They come from every quarter of the land and from every estate in life—these sober-faced, plain slaves of the treadmill. Chance and mischance cast them upon strange beaches. The law of supply and demand fixes their wage: the brutal tradition of sex inferiority handicaps their advance. The dollars in their pay envelopes are shorter than those in yours, and every penny must travel a longer and a harder road.

But they're game; they never whimper. Time fades the roses from their skins and streaks their faces with the yellowing tinge of maturity, but they meet Circumstance without a yellow streak in their blood.

They're unprotected, yet they do not ask protection. They're content with the best that they can find, and they starve through it, stifling yearning after yearning with a grit and a tenacity that you could never show.

Why, look where we are getting! Here we started out talking about you, and for the last five minutes we have been rambling through a glorification of female labor.

What was it that set us off the track? Oh, yes, Mary in the elevator. But, come to think of it, Mary's right in the track—right in your track—brutalized, bemeaned, humiliated every day by you—you, who realize all the rigor of workaday lives—you, who, because of contrast with the ease and luxury and leisure which your own daughter and wife and sister enjoy, should be first to render respect to womanhood at its BEST—constantly fail in the simplest of courtesies.

A gentleman! Why, you don't know the meaning of the word! It is a title of honor to be borne only by the kindly, by the thoughtful. It is a name of distinction conferred upon those who lose no opportunity to render homage to worthiness and integrity.

This is Sunday, and you've lots of time to think it over. You'll meet Mary again to-morrow. Will you meet a better YOU in the meanwhile.

DO HOUSEWORK IF YOU SEEK POETRY

Kate Douglas Wiggins Declares There Is Plenty of Beauty In Common Things.

Kate Douglas Wiggins, in response to an especial invitation, visited the New York public schools and read aloud to the children from her own books, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "The Birds' Christmas Carol," "Polly Oliver's Problem" and "Timothy's Quest."

It must have been a particularly nice experience. Nice for the children and just as nice for Kate Douglas Wiggin, whom one calls Mrs. Riggs when one goes to see her in her home on West Fifty-eighth street.

"I was able only to give each school about half an [illegible]

"One cannot do much in that time. But oh, I do hope I helped those eager young people a little! I wanted them to understand what I feel, that I am not at all certain every one can have a first-class brain. Education, industrious application, will, I am sure, convert a third-class brain into a second-class one. But I do not know whether it will do much more.

A First Class Heart.

"However, there is one comfort. Out of the heart come the real issues of life. I am very certain that if you have a set of will, of energy, of power, of determination, nothing can prevent your having a first-class heart.

"It was a most wonderful and beautiful experience," she said, "one that I shall never forget. One I shall repeat next year as often as I can. In the east I have tried the largest school and tried to [illegible] as many of those on the upper east and west sides as [illegible] schools where the girls have not had so many advantages as those in other localities. The teachers feel that this personal contact with the author of a favorite book makes the literature a more vital thing than it would otherwise be. It helps to establish the reading habit, which will surely be one of the safeguards and one of the developing agencies of a girl's life. I had the great good fortune to find friendships already made for me when I entered the school doors."

"One can hardly look at large groups of young people without wishing to give advice to them.

Tried to Resist Temptation.

"I did try, though, to resist the temptation for the most part. I believe I know what most of those young people thought of us grown up people on the platform. They thought that we seemed very wise, very much given to counsel, sometimes a little dull, a little uncomprehending and unsympathetic. I wonder if they knew what we were thinking of when we looked at them?

"One thing above all others I hoped for them.

"I begged each one to be alive. I begged each one to learn to live deeply, in every part of himself, and be content with nothing less.

"You must know some girls, for I know plenty of grown people, who are so spineless, so boneless, so flabby and colorless that you might almost sit down on them and never discover that they were in the chair."

"You were telling your young people to learn of life rather than from books?" was suggested.

"We have enough good scholars," Mrs. Riggs replied. "What we need are men and women who realize their highest possibilities—men and women who transform whatever they touch, giving it new color or shape or grace.

Poetry in Common Things.

"We need people who see the beauty and poetry in common things, and are able to create it in little and in great ways. For beauty and poetry are shown in housework and cooking and gardening and dressing and sewing just as much as they are in painting, modeling or writing books. [illegible] you like if you are not dull [illegible].

"It is [illegible] that we shall know a certain amount of arithmetic and geography and grammar and history, but, after all, we do not care so much what a woman knows as what she is, what she feels, what she is able to express. We want to know how [illegible] she is of loving, of enduring, of [illegible] of making things better. I do not think young people should be discouraged if they do not chance to be geniuses, or if they have not the consciousness of possessing special talents."

ASK STRIKE INJUNCTION.

Brewers' and Bottlers' Get Court Hearing To-morrow.

With 110 employes of eight firms on strike, the application for an injunction against the Bottlers & Drivers' Union and the Boston Central Labor Union to prevent a strike at certain local breweries and bottling establishments comes up for a hearing before Judge Pierce of the Superior Court to-morrow morning. The union asks an increase of $1 a week, and an eight-hour day six months in the year. The fact that the men are now out on strike, while the employers wish to have them restrained from striking, adds interest to the case. Officers of the Central Labor Union have declared their ignorance of any trouble at these breweries and bottling establishments, previous to being served with notice of the injunction application, which is signed by the following firms.

Rochester Brewing Company, No. 293 A street, South Boston; Casper Berry & Co., No. 84 Leverett street; H. Swartz, No 13 Leverett street; S. Cobe & Co., No. 76-80 Merrimac street; A. MANN IS DEFIANT.

Minority Leader Doesn't Like the Committee Appointments.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Branding as "unprecedented, unfair, arbitrary and brutal" the action of the Democratic Ways and Means Committee in refusing to increase the minority representation on fifteen of the big House committees while adding two and three members to the majority lists, Representative Mann of Illinois, minority leader, has issued a formal statement of protest and defiance. In it he makes the threat that the minority will make things unpleasant for the Democrats during the coming session and would make the unanimous consent calendar useless.

PELEG MURRAY, FAMOUS CRIMINAL "SLEUTH," QUITS THE CHASE AT AGE OF 74

THE oldest "sleuth" of Massachusetts has just retired. He is Peleg F. Murray of Worcester. He is seventy-four years of age. From the belt of this youthful-looking aged officer of the State Police hang the scalps of many a criminal, sent through his skill to spend many years behind prison walls.

Captain Murray, as they call him up Worcester way, for ten years investigated [illegible], solved the mysteries, caught the criminals and did it alone, in that spacious county. Then Robert E. Molt was sent to his assistance. At his own request, this venerable Sherlock Holmes of the Commonwealth quits active service.

"My place is for a younger man," said [illegible]. "It was all right to hustle out of bed at any hour of the night and scurry after a murderer or safe blower, but not now. I think I have earned my retirement. I propose to take life easy now."

Murray was appointed to the State police force nineteen years ago by Governor Russell. He had served brilliantly in the Civil War as an officer in the Fifteenth Massachusetts.

First Big Case in 1893.

Murray's first murder case was in July, 1893, just a year after his appointment to the State force. John Baxter, an aged hermit, living in a shack in the woods of Holden, was found murdered near his humble abode. Near his body was an ax with which his head had been crushed. The crime had been committed two weeks before during a hard cider debauch.

Edward Cunningham, aged twenty four, was apprehended, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and served ten years.

James Thompson and Thomas Ryan, two safe blowers, came over from New York in 1895 and blew the safe in the Webster postoffice and among other loot carried away some town water bonds. They were arrested while attempting to dispose of these bonds in New York. Murray connected them with the Webster safe blowing and spent nine weeks in New York before he landed his men on Massachusetts soil.

On twelve separate occasions they brought habeas corpus proceedings to be allowed to remain in New York. They were finally extradited and served twelve years in Charlestown.

Ran Down a Strangler.

John Moran of Clinton killed his wife in a fit of jealous rage by holding her head down in a hogshead of water until she drowned. Murray arrested Moran and secured his confession. He got twelve years.

Peter F. King, aged forty three, killed his father and mother on their farm in the town of Sturbridge in 1899. He crushed in both of their skulls with a club. The son confessed the crime, was adjudged insane and sent to an asylum for life.

In July, 1900, Hal Elexis Hollingsworth, a hot-headed young Southerner of nineteen years, shot and killed a girl in Douglas, with whom he was enamoured. He found her walking down a lane with a rival, pulled a revolver to cripple his foe in love, but instead shot the girl dead. Murray arrested him and prepared the case for the courts. Herbert Parker was district attorney at the time. Both officials were convinced that the killing of the girl was in a way accidental and Hollingsworth was tried for manslaughter. He is now serving a sentence of fifteen years in Charlestown.

Convicted a Forger

Murray arrested Charles S. Forbes, a prominent Worcester lawyer, on forgery charges, in February, 1901, and prepared evidence against him that landed him in prison for a long term of years. Forbes masqueraded outside of Worcester under different names and when arrested was just about to receive $2000 from the Malden Savings Bank under the name of Artemus W Carter.

Leon M. Hapgood, in February, 1902, shot in Barre, an old farmer considered pretty well off. Robbery was the motive, although little money was secured by the murdered. Aroused from his bed at midnight on the day of the murder, Officer Murray got trace of Hapgood, who had fled, and after a chase that lasted until 8 o'clock in the morning, arrested him in Jefferson. Hapgood is doing a life sentence for his crime.

Six months after the murder by Hapgood, Mr Murray solved what for a while was a baffling murder mystery in Webster. Carl F Torno, a forty-year-old German, had shot his sixteen-year-old son in a quarrel and stood a chance for a while of getting away with his deed. He was arrested, confessed his crime to Murray in a "third degree" inquisition and was sent to prison for life.

The Sanborn Chase.

One of the most remarkable cases with which Murray was connected occurred in 1903. Edgar F. Sanborn was arrested for burning the railroad station in Auburn. He was adjudged insane and sent to the Worcester Asylum. He escaped in short order and was arrested a year later in New Jersey for burglary. He had assumed another name. He informed the New Jersey officials that he had $10,000 worth of silverware buried in Massachusetts and offered to point out the place. They brought him on here one day, and he led them to the woods in Billerica, pointed out a place in the ground as the spot where the silver was hidden, and when the officers from Jersey began to dig Sanborn ran away. He was brought down by a bullet from one of the Jerseymen's guns.

Murray established the identity of Sanborn and he was sent back to the insane asylum. He is there yet.

Sanborn committed burglaries all over New England, often for the fun of robbing, for in many cases his booty was thrown away near the scene of his crime. Among the places he robbed was the home of Mary Baker Eddy, "Pleasant View," in Concord, N. H.

It was Murray who led the State police in the hunt for the murderer of Frank Burns, a jewelry salesman, in Athol, six years ago. Burns disappeared with a case of samples one day in December and no trace of his body has been found since.

Mystery of Athol.

Walter E. Smith, a young man of twenty-two, was last seen with Burns and accompanied him on a drive from Athol. Burns had a suit case of watches with him. Thirty of the watches were recovered in New York, where Smith had pawned them. Smith was held for murder, but the failure to find the body of Burns prevented the pressing of the murder charge, and he was tried for highway robbery. He was found guilty and is serving twenty years in Charlestown.

Murray's last murder case was in Harvard. Raymond Plouffe, a milkman, whom Dr. Charles E. Stone of Newburyport had helped in business, shot and killed the doctor as he was driving him to the Ayer station early in the evening. Plouffe was arrested the day after the finding of the doctor's body. He stoutly denied any knowledge of the crime. Six hours' clever work by Murray, with Officers Most and Keating, fastened the crime upon the young milkman. Plouffe was sent to State prison for life. The vote of one juryman saved him from the chair.

4,000 LITTLE FOLKS TO SEE 'WILD WEST'

In a score of orphan asylums about Boston, in as many hospitals and temporary homes for poor children, there is unwonted excitement among the little folks. They are going to the "Wild West" Show.

The AMERICAN will take 4,000 orphan and crippled children to the Tuesday matinee of the 101 Ranch Wild West Show at the Arena in St. Botolph street. The children will be admitted free and given the best seats with their instructors, and no expense will be spared by the AMERICAN to give them the time of their lives.

It is a remarkable thing that in a great city where there are scores of entertainments for those who can pay, few ever think of the little inmates of the various charitable institutions who so seldom get a chance to enjoy themselves.

The orphan asylums give them food and clothes and treat them kindly, but there are always more poor children than can be accommodated and the institutions cannot spend much money on luxuries.

The Wild West Show is the AMERICAN'S treat to these little children, and it is probably the one thing they would prefer to see if they were given their choice of circus, theatre or a baseball game.

One of the most pathetic of sights is to see a couple of little boys gazing longingly at a poster of Indians and cowboys, for the youngsters are quite hopeless of ever going to the show. The AMERICAN has given them the chance.

"The poor children in our charitable institutions have few pleasures, except when some big-hearted person provides a treat for them," says Superintendent Wolf of the Leopold Morse Home in Mattapan. "We cannot spend the money allotted to us upon circuses or Wild West shows, for there are too many unfortunates to be cared for. But it would be cruelty to children to refuse the chance the AMERICAN offers to let our boys and girls see the 101 Ranch Wild West Show, and we shall be there fifty strong."

The Children's Aid Society, the Episcopal Church Home, the Denalson House, the Civic Service House and many similar institutions were equally disposed to give their young folks such a treat.

101 RANCH SHOW MAKES A NOISY ENTRY INTO HUB

The booming of cannon and the crackle of repeating rifles disturbed the silence of Saturday on St. Botolph street, but the residents were not alarmed.

"It's the 101 Ranch Wild West Show," they declared, and they wished they were inside the Boston Arena from whence the sound of war was proceeding.

The Arena received its baptism of powder yesterday and proved to be an admirable theatre for a great hippodrome show. The Wild West people gave a parade in the morning and two shows later on in the day.

The parade was pronounced by those who saw it, and they were everybody along the line of march who could get to the street or a window, to be the most pretentious of any circus organization seen here for a long time.

WOMAN HELD AS BURGLAR.

Bridgeport Police Accuse New Haven Prisoner.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 8. Mrs. Margaret Kerrin, who used to live here, is under arrest in New Haven on a burglary charge and the Bridgeport police would also like to get her on the charge of making at least four "breaks" in this locality. She is suspected of having perpetrated from eight to ten. She is regarded as one of the most remarkable women of her kind alive to-day. The police say she is an expert "key worker." The New Haven police say they have a strong case against her. When they get through prosecuting she may be brought back to Bridgeport to face charges in this city. She nonchalantly got off the train at the nearest big town in order to save carfare. The police claim that she made a luxurious living by burglary.

FINED $50 FOR CONTEMPT.

Barber Punished for Dismissing Man Called to Jury Duty.

PROVIDENCE, April 8. Antonio Giunta, master barber at No. 81 Page street, was fined $50 for contempt by Judge Lee in the Superior Court to-day, because he discharged Thomas J. Tramonti for obeying a summons to do jury duty. When the process was served on Tramonti, the master barber told him he would lose his job if he went to court. After he discharged Tramonti, the boss barber was arrested and arraigned before Judge Lee who said, after fining him: "Such acts on the part of men of such character greatly impede the administration of justice, and it is time an example was made that employers of labor especially may realize that the processes of the court must be obeyed."

MRS. GLOVER FOND OF GARDEN AND CHICKENS

Has Many Offers of Marriage, but Widow of Laundry Man Will Stay Single.

Mrs Lillian M Glover, the attractive widow of Clarence F. Glover, who was murdered in his Waltham laundry a year ago last November, declared yesterday that the story that she was to be married to a Washington physician is a fiction.

The truth about the matter is that Mrs. Glover, at the time of the trial of Hattie Le Blanc on the charge that she killed Glover, received many letters from people all over the country. One persistent writer was a man in the city of Washington who said he was a physician. He proposed marriage, but Mrs Glover took it as a joke.

Mrs. Glover will spend the Summer at her home in Waltham. She will run her own automobile and raise her own garden vegetables. She will also dally with chickens. She shuns public places where she is liable to be recognized because of the annoyance of being stared at. She seldom goes to the laundry. She explained that there is a competent force in charge there.

Only Pity for Enemies.

The widow, who has passed through a severe ordeal during the past year, believes that the attacks of her enemies have made her stronger. She has gained twenty two pounds within a year, most of it in the last three months.

"I am enjoying life very well," she said, "and I mean to continue to do so. Not that I am satisfied and content in mind exactly, for haven't I been through enough to drive one almost insane? But I don't choose to let the sharks, hawks and vultures dominate me nor interfere with my dignity or self-respect. They did all they could, I should think. Of a truth, did you ever hear of a woman in this world being harassed and lied about as I have been? And I don't know but that it makes me stronger.

"Honestly, I regard those who try to destroy my name and rob me of my property as pitiful objects and I am not so sure but that they will be seen in their true light before I am through.

"I haven't tried to avoid consequences of any kind. I haven't begged off when set upon by the hungry horde and neither have I flinched from any truth. They know all about it and are shamming. Maybe they will some time be found out.

Anxious About Brother.

"I have worried considerably over the absence of my brother, Tobie Leblanc, for in spite of his efforts against me he is my brother and I can't help a strong feeling for him.

"I sat in court one day and observed Tobie. I saw that he wore a suit and shoes I bought for him, but that he had a little skull cap purchased with his own money. I knew he was working against me in an erratic way and yet I loved him. I just couldn't help it. I hope he has not committed suicide. He was very nervous and excitable and one can never tell what he might do."

"What have you been doing to occupy your time in all these months?" Mrs. Glover was asked.

"Why I laugh when I think of it. I went into the crocheting business and got stung. Yes, I went out working up trade with the nicest crochet samples and thought I was doing very well but found that I was doing the work without getting the money. I went into localities where I was not known. I don't mind telling you that even now I never go where I am recognized and stared at.

Plans to Sell Eggs.

"I had an experience of this kind in a Washington street restaurant not long ago. A man sat across from me who knew me by sight. He whispered to his friend who I was. The friend whispered to several and then it spread. I was Mrs. Glover and they all had to stare at me. I needn't tell you that restaurant gets no more of my patronage."

"What else have you been doing and where will you spend the Summer?"

"What else? Why, I have been burning wood and painting things and lazying about. When I get lonesome at home I pick up and go into town. When I have had enough of the town I go back to my home in Waltham.

"Yes, I am still living there and will continue to live there. I have a garden laid out where I shall raise my own vegetables and do much of the work myself. And I'm going to keep hens and sell eggs for forty cents a dozen.

"Possibly I'll keep a horse. Anyway, I shall run my own auto this Summer—be my own chauffeur. I can drive it as well as anybody. Some of the trees in my yard will be cut down, too, and I feel as though I should finish the work by planing off the stumps myself."

"Do you go down and oversee the laundry?"

"Hardly. It runs itself, practically. It always did. The laundry is doing a splendid business—never better. My husband always had a force of men there who could run it right, so that he could leave for months at a time. It is the same now. But I shall soon begin to visit the place and see what it needs from time to time, though it is in very competent hands."

No Marriage in Her Plans.

"I'm tempted to ask you about the report of your approaching marriage that leaked out some months ago," the reporter ventured.

"I thought I told you to deny that. I told somebody. You see I got stacks and stacks of mail from all over and one correspondent kept writing from Washington, D. C. He said he was a physician down there. In one letter he actually proposed marriage. I thought it awfully funny and one day mentioned receiving the proposal, and the next thing I knew it was reported that I was going to be married. It was a joke—one of the many incidents, ludicrous and tragic, of the vicious campaign I have been forced to suffer.

"No I am not contemplating matrimony. I want my mind free for a little while and as evidence that I am doing pretty well in that direction, I am gaining steadily in flesh. I have taken on twelve pounds in the last three months and am twenty-two pounds heavier than a year ago last November."

MORE SCHOOLS ASKED.

Mount Hope Citizens Call for Another Grammar School.

The monthly meeting of the Mt. Hope Citizens' Association in the Stephen M Weld schoolhouse urged the erection of a new grammar school on the east side of Hyde Park avenue.

John Nickerson, chairman of the committee on legislative matters, said in the Mt. Hope street section there were already 700 children ready to go into the new school. He said a number of them were too young to walk to other schools, and as a result many were not attending school at all.

OVER 1,200 ENTRIES FOR BIG DOG SHOW

THE New England Kennel Club show that opens Tuesday at Mechanics Building for three days will be one of the biggest events in the country and will bring together some of the best dogs ever shown. Probably the greatest competition will come in the Airedale classes when Prince of York meets the English champion, King Orang. The question of which dog of this pair is the better has long been a puzzling point both in this country and abroad and at New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other big shows. The break has been about even. Another Airedale to be reckoned with is Robert Jordan's Mistress Magnet that comes fresh from winning the best in the Chicago show.

Mrs. A Henry Higginson, Jr will show a large entry of her crack fox terriers, including Dazzler and an entry of White West Highland terriers, including Champion Dazzler Sands. Thomas W Lawson has entered many of his prize dogs, including a team of bulldogs that has yet to meet defeat, and Mrs. Arnold Lawson will show her French bulldogs.

Over 1,200 Entries.

The bench show committee of the New England Kennel Club, Messrs. Henry S. Blake, James L. Little, Charles H. Taylor, Jr., Richard C. Storey and Eugene V. R. Thayer, announces that everything will be in readiness for the opening of the best dog show Boston has had.

There are over 1,200 entries and dogs are coming from all over the country. Among the prominent exhibitors are Thomas W Lawson, Mrs. Higginson and Prescott Wolcott.

There will be hot competition in St Bernards, for W. J. [illegible] of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, is coming on with Duchess of Arsian and Abbess of Arsian, winner at the St. Bernard show in Grand Rapids last month. F. and A. Stuart of Montreal have entered Agawa Duke, one of the best in Canada, and Hereuteen Kennels have entered Orion of Hereuteen and Lord of Alta, winner of special for best in New York show. These with the dogs from the Carmen Kennels, are sure to make interesting competition.

Irish Terrier Competition.

The keen rivalry in Irish terriers seen at New York will be transferred to Boston for J. L. Thorndike will have on the boards Champion Thorncroft Sportsman and his son Thorncroft Marksman, the latter being the winner at New York. The imported dog Blarney Authority, owned by J. G. Bates of New Jersey, is coming on to try conclusions with the best of them.

The Sabine Kennels of Orange, Tex., will have a strong team of smooth fox terriers. Mrs. J. L. Frothingham has entered her crack wire-haired fox terriers, Champion Grandoire Third Reel, Endcliffe Vanity and Kilogram, a new one sired by Live Wire. H. Hollis Hunnewell and C. W. Keyes will also show fox terriers.

EXHIBIT OF RELICS.

Old Roman Empire Again Unites in Archaeological Fair.

ROME, April 8.—The Archeological Exhibition, one of the best features of the Italian Jubilee, was inaugurated at the Baths of Diocletian to-day in the presence of the King and Queen, the German Crown Prince, Frederick William, and the Crown Princess; the commissioners of foreign countries, diplomats and cabinet ministers. Professor Lanciani delivered an address describing what had been done in recovering the celebrated baths, for many years given over to wine shops and coal yards; and in collecting there the works of civilization accomplished by Republican and Imperial Rome. All the thirty-six provinces of the old Roman Empire in Europe, Africa and Asia contributed to the exhibition.

HURLED INTO HOUSE.

Motorist Comes to Grief in Collision with Trolley Car.

CRANSTON, R. I., April 8.—A large touring car occupied by J. C. Smith of this city, its owner, was struck by a heavy trolley car and Smith was thrown twenty feet through the air, crashing through the glass in the front door of a house and landing on his back in the hallway. Both trolley and automobile were running at high speed. The touring car was wrecked, and the electric car considerably damaged. The automobile struck a lamp-post and snapped it off. Smith probably will recover.

GOV. FOSS IN STORM CENTRE OF TUMULT OVER "JOKER" BOSTON & NORTHERN BILL

THE Boston & Northern-Old Colony street railway consolidation bill, branded by its opponents as a raid upon the savings banks of Massachusetts, comes up in the State Senate next Tuesday for final action before going to Governor Foss for his signature or veto.

Attention to this bill and the alleged scheme behind its innocent face was first called in the Sunday AMERICAN a week ago. The measure had then passed the several debating stages in House and Senate and was in the hands of the engrossing clerk. Both branches have since put the bill through the enactment stage, but the Senate has entertained a motion to reconsider enactment. It is this motion which will be debated next Tuesday.

The folks behind the consolidation move pooh pooh the idea that the Senate will do anything but send the bill along to the Governor. They are spending their time and energy in work on the Governor. Two of the big men behind the bill, President Patrick F. Sullivan of the Boston & Northern and the Old Colony, and Bentley W. Warren, legislative counsel for the two roads, visited Governor Foss at the State House yesterday and advised him not to heed the talk about a raid on the savings banks.

Pratt Points Dangers.

Messrs. Sullivan and Warren are old friends of the Governor who, when he was a private citizen was prominently identified with the affairs of the Boston & Northern and the Old Colony and was a member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Electric Companies, which controls the two roads.

Harvey H Pratt, the Boston lawyer who has sent a statement to the Governor pointing out in the bill what he says will permit $8,000,000 of Old Colony bonds to be dumped into the savings banks, issued a red hot statement yesterday in which he shows "the scheme in its true light."

Arthur B. Chapin, bank commissioner of Massachusetts, in a statement to the Sunday AMERICAN, says:

"As I understand Senate Bill No 367 (the bill in question), it will not make the requirements of the existing laws less stringent than they are now."

Mr. Chapin spoke only of the safeguarding of deposits in savings banks. His O. K. for the bill does not concern the precedent it would establish for permitting two roads which have no physical connection to consolidate.

"Commissioner Chapin's statement is very well-worded," said Mr. Pratt last evening. "I wouldn't say there is a joker in his statement, but it is evident from it that the Commissioner understands that statutes now existing will help in the proposed raid on our savings banks if this consolidation bill becomes law. I defy Commissioner Chapin or any bank authority or any lawyer in Massachusetts to show that Section 5 of the Boston & Northern-Old Colony consolidated bill will not permit the Boston & Northern to retire the bonds of the Old Colony which are not legal investments for savings banks and issue in their stead bonds of their own which will be legal investments. In other words the Boston & Northern will be enabled to give something which is legally but not physically better for something which is an illegal investment for savings banks."

Admits He Has Land.

The Boston & Northern folks dismissed Mr. Pratt's comment with the statement that "Mr. Pratt has some land to sell."

"Right," says Mr. Pratt, in reply, "and it is rather strange, I think, that the folks behind this consolidation scheme should suddenly feel called on last Friday to arrange for a hearing on my case next Thursday. The hearing will be before an auditor. I have been trying to have it held for upwards of two years, but the street railway folks always blocked it."

Governor Foss's office at the State House is the centre of the Boston & Northern-Old Colony storm. Advocates and opponents of the bill have flocked to his office since the publication of the story in last Sunday's AMERICAN. The Governor's only comment on the bill is this:

"The people of Massachusetts may rest assured that I shall act upon it with a full realization of my responsibility and my oath of office."

Friends of the Governor, who are not identified with the Boston & Northern-Old Colony outfit have urged him to have his veto pen ready for the bill the moment it reaches his desk. Some of them go so far as to suggest that behind the consolidation movement is a political scheme to get the Governor "in bad" with the people. Some of these friends say openly that the Governor has reason to be thankful that the Sunday AMERICAN'S expose of the bill was printed before the measure had gone on the statute books.

How Pratt Views It.

Harvey H Pratt's latest statement on the bill is as follows:

"The action of the Senate in postponing for consideration on Tuesday next the Boston & Northern-Old Colony merger, is quite likely to bring to light objections to the bill which have not yet appeared and to show the scheme in its true light. Notwithstanding the repeated assertions of President Sullivan that 'the bill distinctly states that not until July, 1913, can the stocks and bonds of the Old Colony be made legal investment for savings banks;' section five of the proposed law permits the Boston & Northern to retire the bonds of the Old Colony that have this time limit to their legality, and issue its own bonds that are immediately savings bank investments under the law.

"It is in connection with the provision to which President Sullivan refers that the infirmity of their position for which they seek legislative remedy, appears. The bill gives both roads authority to issue new mortgages, supplementary or confirmatory to those for $12,000,000 and $8,000,000 outstanding upon the properties of the Boston and Northern and the Old Colony roads respectively. The query naturally arises, if the mortgages are now good, and the title to the property mortgaged complete, what is the necessity for new mortgages confirming those already existing. If the consolidations of these roads with the subsidiary properties that now comprise each system, is already effectual, what is the occasion for providing in section five, lines fifteen and sixteen that 'all of these purchases and consolidations are hereby ratified and confirmed?'

"The reason is not far to seek. Among the railways acquired by the Boston & Northern is the Lynn & Boston, which has a first mortgage indebtedness of $4,854,000, due December 1, 1924. None of these bonds are savings bank investments, yet they are held by savings institutions of the State to the amount of $645,000.

Total	$645,000

"The total outstanding mortgage indebtedness of the Lynn & Boston, according to the report filed with the Railroad Commissioners made on January, 1910, is $4,854,000. Savings Bank Commissioner Chapin made no reference to this fact when giving the list of Boston & Northern subsidiary company bonds which have 'recently' become saving bank security. Of the list furnished by him, the bonds are owned as follows:

Lowell & Suburban.
Barre	$[illegible]

Naumkeag bonds held by one savings bank		4,000
Boston & Northern bonds held by six savings banks		81,000
		$266,000
Add to this the holdings by savings banks of Lynn & Boston bonds		$645,000
		$911,000

and we have nearly a million of the small savings of the poor people invested in the bonds of this purchasing railroad and the companies it has absorbed. Will the commissioner deny that they were held by these banks when they weer not legal savings bank investments? He says they have only 'recently' become so.

Greenfield Bank Case.

"Under Section 2 of Chapter 399 of the Acts of last year the savings bank commissioner has the authority to stop the investment in these bonds which have only 'recently' become savings bank investments; but he has permitted the Greenfield Savings Bank, which only two years ago went through a cleansing process, to hold $60,000 worth of street railway bonds which were legal investments when made, but are not such now.

"Nine years' experience with the law permitting investment of savings bank funds in such bonds [illegible] demonstrated that the depreciation of the railroad earnings, upon which the legality is based would call for [illegible] the authority to issue them rather than its [illegible].

Bank Commissioner Chapin gave the AMERICAN the following statement:

"Savings banks [illegible] bonds of street railways located in Massachusetts, if the street railways [illegible] earned and paid in cash dividends an amount equal to five per cent on outstanding capital stock for five successive years. Such a company can be certified to the bank commissioner for investment of its bonds only (not stocks) after the Railroad Commissioners have examined its statement and found that the dividends were paid from the earnings without impairment of capital stock. The Boston & Northern bonds and [illegible] are legal now. The Old Colony [illegible] dividends are [illegible] till 1913 [illegible]. As I understand Senate Bill No. 367, it will not make the requirements of the existing law less stringent than they are now.'

LOOK FOR BIG APRIL IMMIGRATION RUSH

Foreign immigration through the port of Boston has fallen off 44 per cent. as compared with last year. This percentage is based on figures for the three months ending with March, when 6,289 aliens entered this port as against 11,403 for the same period in 1910.

Various explanations are given for the decrease. Some assert the falling off is due to the withdrawal of several steamships by the big lines from the Boston service. But this is no more than the usual Winter curtailment of service.

During the Winter the White Star Line took off the Cymric and Canopic but they were both put back on the first of the month and the line will add the Arabic to the Boston service in a short time.

The Saxonia was taken from the Cunard service during the Winter. She will not be put back. Instead the new Franconia, built especially for this service, is expected here by April 26.

With the new boats on the April immigration figures are expected to take a leap. The comparison with other years of immigration for the first quarter is as follows:

	1911.	1910.	1909.
January	681	1,150	1,594
February	2,653	1,986	3,874
March	2,955	8,267	5,148
Total	6,289	11,403	10,616

WAS SHOT FROM AMBUSH.

Report of Critchfield's Murder in Mexico Is Confirmed.

JERSEY CITY, April 8.—A dispatch received by Mrs. George W. Critchfield of Emory street, confirmed Washington advices of the death of her husband, a pioneer in asphalt mining in Venezuela, who was shot from ambush on his ranch in Mexico.

Her son Grant, who is a student at Stevens Institute, Hoboken, and her husband's brother, William Critchfield, are on their way to Mexico. On his last visit to his home Critchfield, who formerly was a Republican leader here, had spoken of threats against his life by a discharged employe, and this man is believed to be the assassin.

Critchfield was born in Kansas, fifty-one years ago. He had an eventful career, having been successfully a farmer, school teacher, principal of a grammar school, reporter, lawyer, explorer and miner. He has large interests in Mexico, Venezuela and other Central and South American countries.

Accused of Forging an Order.

Inspectors Abbott and Albert arrested James A. Boyd, thirty-two, of Lesse street, Dorchester, on a charge of uttering a forged order for $15 on a Boston department store. He is also charged with the larceny of amounts totalling $1[illegible]50, by means of broker's credit slips. His alleged thefts cover a period extending from March 3 to March 24.

DON'T BE A "GOOD OLD DAY'S" MAN

You Can't Live in the Long Ago, So No Matter How Fondly You May Think of It, You Will Do Better to Try to Make TO-DAY What It Ought to Be.

Copyright, 1911, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner.

ONE of the great men of to-day, when asked recently in Chicago why he did not write the story of his very interesting and useful life, said:

"I am a little bit wary of doing that. As soon as a man begins talking about what he has done, instead of about what he is going to do, it is a pretty safe guess that he has accomplished all he ever will."

The old live in the past. They have a right to, for it is their past; they made it, and if they can get enjoyment from thinking of it they are surely entitled to it.

But among the people of the present we find many of those who continually find fault with things as they are, comparing them to their disadvantage with things as they used to be, and wondering why the age does not turn backward, as Time was advised to in the song, and travel to the old days, the good old days of long ago.

Happily, the ruling spirit of this universe did not ordain that any such retrogression was to be. Whether they like it or not, men must travel upward instead of downward. They have no more to say as to the direction of their progress than the cattle who are driven through a pasture gate.

It is only those who do not see and think clearly, who, looking through the haze at the past, think because the past is softened by time that it is more beautiful than the present, and so come to believe that progress is in the wrong direction.

Lord Tennyson wrote very beautiful poems of the days of King Arthur, when noble knights rode forth in the smart clothes the blacksmith had made for them and fought in the name of their fair ladies.

But Lord Tennyson, who lived in a day when it was possible to get hot water for a bath, who ate wholesome food instead of coarse bread and underdone meat, who wore comfortable clothes, and whose personal safety was guarded by a policeman, would have been the last to return to a time when Sir Launcelot was killing and maiming his brethren in arms merely to make sport for an indolent queen.

Let us look back at the good old days in our own country. It may be that their hardships made strong, stern men; but there are few men living to day who would care to be made either strong or stern in that school.

The new England pioneers, from the Pilgrim fathers down, lived in almost continual fear of their lives—fear that once or twice became so terrible that they banded themselves together and destroyed whole tribes of Indians in order that their safety might be preserved.

Women were wedded and brought forth children, it is true, but mothers and babies lacking intelligent care, died like flies, and only renewed immigration from the mother countries kept the white race in existence on this continent.

When a little Dutch village stood on the island now almost completely hidden by the great modern buildings of New York, the good old days were there, but little else that actually endured was fit material either for romance or poetry.

When children fell ill, ponderous Dutch doctors came, gave them enormous doses of harmful medicines, bled them and went solemnly away to tell the undertaker a new case was awaiting him.

In cases of epidemic the beards of the medical gentlemen spread the infection as fast as did the flies that buzzed and swarmed in the open sewers. Whole neighborhoods were stricken, and the burghers stolidly smoked their reeking pipes, regarding their affliction as a visitation of Providence.

A journey from the Battery to Harlem in those days was not to be undertaken without deep thought and much courage. West of the Hudson River stretched a wilderness that only the hardy explorer and the brave Indian trader dared penetrate.

If you dropped the present population of New York into such a time as that, even though you provided them with habitations that would give them all shelter, there would not be enough space between the Bronx and Stamford to accommodate the necessary cemeteries.

No one who has watched the steady upward climbing of [illegible]ences can think tolerantly of the sen[illegible] for the time that is past. The father[illegible] a constitution that has proved a wonderful document, one that we venerate and worship. But be it remembered that it has been amended many times, and that it must be amended many more times before it will serve as a basis for laws that shall secure to the people all the blessings that were intended by its framers.

Possibly there was not so much graft and corruption in the early days of the Republic, but bear in mind that most of its early citizens were banded together against common enemies; that they had just begun to see real liberty ahead, and, further, that the biggest of the early cities represented but a handful of people as compared to some of the overgrown towns of the present.

Could such men as Benjamin Franklin and Thomas Jefferson have had the advantage of knowledge that has been presented as a gift to the young men of the present generation they would have been far greater men even than they were. They built a nation not because of the good old days.

You will notice that the gentlemen who really lived before the telephone and the telegraph are not in the least slow about making use of them.

No father, however strongly he may believe in the superiority of times past, will sit idly by and see a child die of diphtheria when he can get a doctor to come with the anti-toxin that will save the child's life.

And in the future, while there may be [illegible]ny who will look back upon these days of our [illegible]oth old and good, they will all avail themselves of the aeroplane when they want to take a pleasure ride or to journey swiftly and safely across the continent.

Here and there out of the past stands an occasional colossus like Shakespeare—a man whose work has never been approached by a modern. But great genius is a thing apart from ordinary human achievement. It makes its own laws, and is not indebted either to the age in which it exists nor the people that read it.

[illegible]espeare was not Shakespeare because [illegible] in the days of Elizabeth. Had that same mind been given to a man of to-day the thoughts that it produced would be as wonderful. Shakespeare could have written as powerfully of Napoleon or of Washington as he did of Julius Caesar or Richard the Third. He could have put men in battleships and made them as interesting as the soldiers he mounted on horseback. A captain of industry would to him have been as entertaining a rascal as Falstaff.

It was less than a hundred years ago that the commandant of Fort Dearborn, on the site of the present wonderful city of Chicago, wrote to the Secretary of War that the country round about was incapable of maintaining any considerable population, and requesting that the fort be abandoned. Those were the good old days. Ask any Chicagoan if he would prefer them to the present.

Whether we want to or not, we of the present must go ahead. There is to be no turning backward. We may read and study the past, we may profit by what it has accomplished, but only because it gives us an understanding of what is to be done in the future.

When the irrigation systems of the West have brought life and wealth to the dead deserts, and when billions of dollars have been found in resources now undreamed of, there will still be those who bark back to other times and who speak of civilization, as we know it now, as all that it ought to be.

Civilization as we know it now! With men and women and children dying in tenements for want of the necessities of life, working girls crowded into fire traps where no intelligent business man would even store goods, with many diseases still so little understood that all the best physician can do is to sit by and let them take their course, while the patient's vitality decides whether or not he shall pull through.

There are many things that are wrong with our civilization—many things that are indefensible—many that seem almost as bad as those in the brave days of old.

Yet read history and you will discover that we have advanced marvellously—that we no longer hold human beings in slavery; that witch burning has gone out of fashion; that almost every form of religious prejudice has been relegated to the past.

We are far, far ahead of the old days, and we will keep ahead. The rapidity of progress will depend upon how earnestly every man tries to make the world better. A thousand years of progress could be crowded into fifty if every man would earnestly try to do his share. But there must be no harking back to the other days—eyes and attention must be turned ahead—where they belong.

There [illegible] only a short time ago established a fund [illegible] some steeplechase stake in memory of her father [illegible] owners of [illegible] country.

Bride Popular Debutante.

Miss Hooper was one of the most popular debutantes of the Winter, not only because she was the heiress of the Ames million, but also because of her [illegible] beauty. [illegible] Ames, Miss Hooper inherited a philanthropic bent, and in a quiet way she devoted a great deal of her time and money to helping the worthy poor. She is noted for her wit and her charm of manner, and her delicate prettiness has been a welcome sight to many little patients in the children's hospitals and institutions that she has so frequently visited.

She has splendid coloring and dark hair, and although she is rather of the demure type than the athletic, she is one of the best riders about Boston and sails a boat as well as any woman on the Atlantic coast.

Her great fortune was given [illegible] into her power by the court as the result of a friendly suit brought to test the legality of her mother's will. It was originally one-quarter of the great estate of Frederick L. Ames of Easton, Miss Hooper's grandfather, as well as more than $200,000 left in trust by her great grandmother, Mrs. Sarah L. Ames.

Mrs. Hooper, in her will, attempted to exercise the power of appointment given to her by her father's will and her grandmother's trust deed, by creating a trust and giving her children only the income of it while they lived, subject to the right of the trustees to pay each child $150,000 of the principal, and giving her children the right of disposing of the principal in their wills.

Many Prominent Guests.

At her mother's death, Miss Hooper was the only child, and the courts decided that under the trust deed of her great-grandmother, her mother had exceeded her power of appointment, and that the entire estate should go without restriction to Miss Hooper.

Among the most prominent at the reception in Manchester were: Mr. and Mrs. Allan Curtis, Miss Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel S. Simpkins, Miss Faith Simpkins, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ralph Devens, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Burdhan, Colonel and Mrs. Harry E. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Higginson, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Denegre, Miss Elaine Denegre, who had a large house party at her villa at West Manchester; Mr. and Mrs. William Hooper, who also had a large house party at their West Manchester estate; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dexter, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Ames, Miss Ames, who had a house party at her Pride's Crossing estate, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, T. Dennie Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Leland, Miss Mary Loring, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Shaw, 2d, and Mrs. Gordon Means.

Miss Warren a Bride At Simple Services

SIMPLICITY and quietness marked the wedding of Miss Katherine Lee Bayard Warren, daughter of Mrs. Samuel D. Warren, and John E. Thayer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Thayer of Exeter street, which was held at the home of the bride's mother in Marlboro street.

Owing to the double bereavement in the Thayer family the original plan for the services, which were to be conducted in the Arlington Street Church on an elaborate scale, was altered.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Samuel A. Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Association. Miss Warren looked charming in a gown of white satin trimmed with old family lace. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Helen Sears, daughter of Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears of Arlington street and Southboro. She was exquisitely gowned in pale blue silk, wore a white hat trimmed with white plumes and carried a bouquet of rambler roses.

For best man Mr. Thayer selected Roger Amory, who was his classmate at Harvard. Miss Warren was given in marriage by her brother, Samuel D. Warren.

The rooms were tastefully decorated with rhododendrons, while on the breakfast table were several bunches of spring flowers. Following the ceremony the wedding breakfast was served, at which less than one hundred guests were seated. Those were mostly relatives and immediate friends of the family. Among the most prominent were Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Clark, ex-Attorney-General and Mrs. Herbert Parker, Miss Mary Ames, Miss Nora and Evelyn Thayer, Miss Christine Hunnewell, Miss Margaret Thomas, Miss Nathalie Thayer, Miss Sylvia Warren, Miss Helen Sears and Mrs. John Thayer.

Engagements Forecast Brilliant Marriages

WITH the Little Love God aiming his arrows right and left the whole world of fashion is left merely looking on, for there are gay doings these days in Cupid's realm as he brings down his quota of victims with his tiny shafts.

One of the important engagements being rumored is that of a pretty Back Bay belle who figures conspicuously in the smart doings of the North Shore colony [illegible] and is among the wealthiest girls of her exclusive set. She has been conspicuous at the opera throughout the season, as she is as musical as she is athletic. The young man is still in Harvard, out to graduate in June, and it is thought that if the engagement is not announced at Easter it will be at Commencement time. It is said the romance first started on the North Shore, and that the young people were first brought together through their love for yachting, both owning handsome boats, and the girl being one of the finest skippers on the North Shore.

It is also expected that the announcement will shortly be made in Washington of the engagement of Miss Alys Meyer, second daughter of Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Meyer, to Ensign William Spencer of the navy, Harvard '06. Miss Meyer is a most attractive girl and is well known in the younger social set here, where she always figures prominently at the large dancing and horse show events. She is a general favorite, too, in the North Shore Summer colony.

Another engagement of interest to Birmingham, Ala., and Boston society is that of Miss Helen Medora Gillespie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Finley Gillespie of Birmingham, to Winfield Chester Towne of this city. Miss Gillespie met Mr. Towne while she was a student at the New England Conservatory of Music. Towne, who is among the younger lawyers in Boston, is popular. He is a graduate from Bowdoin in the class of 1903 and from the Harvard Law School in the class of 1908. The wedding will be in June.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred A. Day of Dorchester have sent out cards announcing the engagement of their niece, Miss Edna M. Kingsbury of Atlanta, Ga., to Ralph J. Watts of Amherst, secretary to K. L. Butterfield of the Agricultural College.

"The Ispaham Rug," a four-act comedy written by G. P. Tuttle, Jr., of the graduating class of the University of Vermont, was presented by students of that college in Whitney Hall, Brookline, Tuesday evening. The hall was completely filled and the event was a gala one for the college men. The audience was kept in a continual uproar. The feature of the play was an aeroplane, built at the college, and seen in action. One of the acts shows the editorial room of the Blade, a local newspaper. The piece was staged by Harry E. Gage and the music was under the direction of Harold F. Barton of the university.

An interesting engagement of the week is that of Miss Cornelia Barnes and Francis Rogers, Harvard '91, formerly of Boston, but now of New York. The announcement interests a large circle of friends and relatives here. Among Mr. Rogers's relatives are James Purdon of Milton, a cousin. Miss Barnes is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Barnes of East Seventy-ninth street, and their Summer home is at Lenox, where she is well known and figures prominently in the society doings.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lillian Mowry to Dr. Sumner Chadbourne Pattee, both of Searsport, Me. Miss Mowry is well known in Roxbury musical and social circles, as she resided there up to two years ago. Dr. Pattee is a Bowdoin '99 man, and is also a graduate of Baltimore Medical.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Evelyn Grace Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis C. Smith of Malden, to Robert Palmer Trask of Sterling. Miss Smith is a graduate of Smith College '09 and Mr. Trask is a Cornell graduate of '07.

THE much discussed "trouserettes" were given an exhibition by Alma Webster Powell of New York, who was the star at the reception given by Mrs. Elizabeth Freeman Goldschmidt of Marlboro street in the Copley parlors Wednesday. Mrs. Powell was cordially received by all and she made a most favorable impression on those present.

Comings and Goings Of Smart Set Members

IT is reported that Mrs. Herman Oelrichs is again attempting to purchase the Newport estate owned by the heirs of the late George F. Parkman of Boston. The place is directly in front of Mrs. Oelrichs's mansion, Rosecliff, and the object of obtaining the new place is to get a better entrance, the present passageway being an alleyway. Price has always been the hindrance in ending negotiations, but it is said that a compromise is near at hand.

Park Riding School Horse Show Soon

ONE of the most important events of the post-Lenten season will be the annual horse show at the Park Riding School, which opens two weeks from tomorrow. While last year's show was a [illegible] exhibition on a rather large scale, this Spring's event has exceeded expectations both in the number of entries and the quality of the horses to be sent into the ring.

Moreover, it will be one of the social occasions of the year, rather more exclusive than most semi-public events of the kind. This has been accomplished by restriction in the sale of tickets to personal application at the riding school. By this means exhibitors, their friends and members of the horse show set have combined to secure groups together for the entire week, including the Saturday matinee, April 29.

The final closing of the entries provided a welcome surprise for the horse show committee. More than 600 entries were recorded, a total far in excess of last year's exhibition.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

"Like Mother—Like Daughter."

Many a mother can stand comparison with her youthful, grown daughter in grace of figure and freshness of complexion—it's the tell-tale gray hairs that give the appearance of age.

And yet the hair is entirely under any woman's control. She may neglect the first gray spears and allow it to grow gray and faded, or with very little effort and slight expense, she may restore its natural youthful color and keep it soft and fluffy.

Farr's Gray Hair Restorer gradually gives gray hair the life and natural color that properly belong to it, not the color that is near to what you had but the actual original color. If your hair is streaked with different colors, a very few applications of Farr's Gray Hair Restorer will impart a uniform and even color to every hair on your head. Sold under a positive guarantee that it is absolutely harmless. Its use cannot be detected. It is clear as water and pleasant to use. Once the hair has returned to its natural color it is a very simple matter to keep it that way. The hair can be washed, shampooed and curled as often as you wish and the color will not be affected in the least.

Infant Savior Guild Has Notable Year

THE fifth annual report of the Guild of the Infant Saviour, just published, gives an interesting account of the good work accomplished by the members of this organization. The Guild is one of the most important of the Catholic charities of Boston. It includes in its list of membership many of the most prominent and representative families of the city.

Mrs. Michael Matthew Cunniff is the president and associated with her as officers and executive committee are men and women who are untiring in their devotion and loyalty to the Guild and its cause.

The Guild of the Infant Saviour was founded five years ago by Father (now bishop) Anderson when he was director of the Bureau of Catholic Charities.

Owing to the large and increasing demands made upon the various branches of the St. Vincent de Paul Society and the St. Mary's Infant Asylum, Father Anderson saw the great need of the organization of a guild of women, particularly devoted to the needs of infants and which would care for the mothers as well.

With this end in view a number of prominent Catholic women were invited to attend a meeting at the Hotel Somerset, October 15, 1906. Here the preliminary steps were taken for the organization of the Guild. Since then, remarkable progress has been made with the work which is done under the surveillance of the secretary of the Guild, Miss Theresa Lally. Recently an extension was made in the Guild by the establishment of a department which will care for neglected and abandoned infants. This is under the charge of the Infants Department of the Catholic Bureau, whose present director is the Rev. M. J. O'Connor, D. D. The work of the Guild has been called to the attention of the managers of the Floating Hospital who have extended a voluntary offer of assistance in supplying day trips down the harbor for both mothers and babies.

GUILD FLOURISHING FINANCIALLY.

Much gratification is felt by the members in the knowledge that at the close of the fiscal year it was in a flourishing condition. But its work is spreading. Throughout the year no worthy case has been turned from its doors. A cordial invitation is extended to all who wish to become honorary members of the guild. Meetings are held on the first Tuesday of the month in the vestry of St. Cecilia's Church, when application may be made for membership.

The officers of the Guild of the Infant Saviour are: Rev. James A. Supple, D. D., honorary president and spiritual director; president, Mrs. Michael M. Cunniff; vice-president, Mrs. Daniel J. Clark; treasurer, Miss Rose E. Nawn; secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Walsh; executive committee, Mrs. Mary J. D. Cotter, Mrs. John J. Connolly, Mrs. Charles I. Quirk.

WORKING GIRLS AIDED BY THE GRAY NUNS

Model Quarters on Union Park Street Crowded Through Winter Months.

PLAN FOR NEW BUILDING

Boarders Seeking Counsel Find Worthy Friends in Good Sisters in Charge.

The House of the Gray Nuns on Union Park Street, furnishes an ideal home to young women who are deprived of the protection of their own homes through circumstances of business or for those wishing to pursue some course of study in the city and whose means do not permit of their living at college dormitories. It is also open to women visiting Boston, who do not wish to stay at public hotels. The house is centrally located, being easy of access to the various schools, business centres and the churches.

The House of the Gray Nuns was established in 1888 by Archbishop Williams for the accommodation of girls employed in the city. The house is usually taxed to its capacity through the Winter months, more than half of the young women being students. The rooms are invitingly furnished, with prices proportioned to the location, size and furnishings of the rooms. Single rooms may be had or the expense shared with a roommate.

The lower floor is occupied by a fully equipped gymnasium and laundry. Both are open to the members.

Have "Guest Nights."

A suite of large comfortably furnished reception parlors occupy the first floor. Here the friends of the young women may be entertained with the same hospitality and comfort offered by their own homes. From time to time, several of the young women plan a "Guest Night" when the parlors are thrown into a succession of rooms which furnish adequate space for the entertainment of visitors.

Nine sisters are in charge of the house. They are ever ready to give council and to encourage and assist the young women in their various pursuits. A strong bond of friendship and confidence exists between them, which is plainly discernable to the visitor. On the second floor is the beautiful chapel, where mass is celebrated one morning each week. It is open, at all times, for the use of the members. The rules of the house are conveniently arranged for the accommodation of the young women. Breakfast is served from 7 to 8, [illegible] from [illegible] granted to those desiring to remain out until a later hour.

Seek Large Quarters.

[illegible] increasing demand [illegible] the house, it is the desire of the sisters in charge to procure eventually larger quarters, which will enable them to place the accommodations within the reach of a larger number of girls who desire to make their home there. The Mother Superioress is at all times willing and glad to receive visitors or prospective household members.

Close by the House of the Gray Nuns is St. Joseph's Home. This is for the accommodation of immigrant girls who are detained in the city awaiting the arrival of friends or relatives. It also cares for girls from foreign lands, who are seeking their living in the new country, instructing them in its various customs and securing employment for them in homes which they investigate rigidly for the protection of the stranger. There is no fee attached to St. Joseph's Home.

The Catholics of America, particularly of Baltimore, where he resides, are preparing to celebrate, in June, the fiftieth anniversary of the ordination of Cardinal Gibbons and the twenty-fifth anniversary of his elevation to membership in the College of Cardinals. Plans for the double jubilee are already far advanced. The services will rival in magnificence any held in the history of the church in America. The celebration will be shared in not only by all the dignitaries of the Catholic church in the United States, but also by eminent prelates sent specially from Rome bearing the felicitations of Pope Pius X. The leading feature of the jubilee will be a solemn pontifical mass in the Baltimore Cathedral, at which an offering will be taken up for the purpose of building a Cardinal Gibbons memorial hall at the Catholic University.

MANY JOIN WORSHIP IN CONVENT AT BRIGHTON

Although established but a short time, the community of our Lady of the Cenacle at Brighton, has a following of worshippers which taxes its limited accommodations to the utmost. The situation of the convent and the surroundings are admirably suited to the requirements of the work. The convent house is a substantial colonial structure. It is situated at the summit of one of the highest hills in Brighton thickly wooded in pines and hemlock. Upon an adjacent neighboring hill stands St. John's Seminary, with a picturesque lake at its base.

The Society of the Cenacle was founded in 1826 at La Louvesc, in France. Its founder was an apostolic priest, Jean Pierre Etienne Terme. It was formally approved by Leo XIII. in 1884. As the society grew houses were founded in Belgium, Switzerland, Holland, and in Manchester, England.

The first American house was established in New York City in 1892. Another quickly followed at Newport, R. I. A most successful house was established at Charleston, S. C., in 1907.

During the early Fall of 1910 the present house in Brighton was established with a community of five sisters. The house was renovated to suit its new requirements. On the right hand of the hall is a beautiful chapel. Adorning the walls are rare scriptural pictures. The plain wooden benches and kneelers are of mission wood. Upon the simple white altar there is a daily exposition of the Sacred Host followed by benediction at 4.30 in the afternoon.

It is the endeavor of the society to spread the devotion to the Blessed Sacrament throughout the community. For this purpose the house is open at all times for women of all classes who wish to make spiritual exercise and devote themselves for a few days in cloistered quiet, for the consideration of Christian truths, meditation and prayer.

Give Religious Truths.

The sisters gladly welcome all who desire instructions for the reception of the Sacrament, or who seek information concerning the truths of the church. For this purpose special rooms and board are provided for retreats of from three days to a week's duration.

The Cenacle of New York city has a remarkable large following of women doctors who regularly make retreats to sanctify their profession.

On the first Sunday of the month there is a special meeting for Christian mothers from 3 to 6 o'clock. The second Saturday of the month is for special instructions and services for the trained nurses of Boston. The services are from 3 to 8 o'clock.

The third and fourth Sundays are devoted to business women. On these days a visitor may make a retreat of a day, beginning at 11 o'clock with mass, which is followed by special instruction, meditation and the closing benediction service in the evening. A light mid-day luncheon is provided.

Ideal for Retreats.

By this means an opportunity is afforded those whose busy lives prevent them from making the three days' retreat. Those wishing to make retreats have only to apply to the Reverend Mother, who cheerfully gives her assistance and instruction.

The rapidly increasing attendance has necessitated measures for more commodious quarters in the near future. It is the ardent hope of the sisters to erect, before long, a spacious building which will be adequate for the demands which are constantly increasing.

FAT FOLKS FAVOR

Home Mixture That Takes Off the Fat Rapidly—Causes No Wrinkles—No Stomach Ills and Requires Neither Dieting Nor Exercise.

Too much fat is both uncomfortable and dangerous, but usually fleshy people prefer to put up with its inconvenience rather than punish themselves with the tiresome exercising usually prescribed, or endanger their health by taking the so-called "cures" and patent fat "reducers."

This self-sacrifice of comfort and health to overabundant fat is [illegible] unnecessary, however, as Mrs. Luella Bigger tells us there is a home receipt that is far superior in every way to anything money will buy for reducing superfluous flesh. It is said this simple mixture will take the fat off of man or woman at the rate of at least a couple of pounds a week without causing wrinkles. Moreover it does not disturb the stomach but is a good thing for the system, clearing away pimples, and best of all it does not interfere with the diet. You can eat at and at the same time get whatever you like. This receipt is as follows: 1/2 oz. Marmola, 1/2 ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic and 3 1/2 ounces of Peppermint Water. Get these ingredients at any drug store, mix them together at home and take one teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Mrs. Bigger is well known, is a famous beauty expert, and whatever she recommends is sure to be found eminently satisfactory.

SUFFRAGETTE OPERA JOY TO BROAD MINDS, DECLARES CHARLES HENRY MELTZER

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER.

NEW YORK, April 8.—So now, at last, we have heard another opera dealing in its own way (which is the poetic way) with things as modern as Charpentier's "Louise."

The Dukas, who delight in trinity, call "Ariane et Barbe-Bleue" the "suffragette opera."

Well let them [illegible] will not harm the work, and they may help it.

[illegible] they are not wrong [illegible] Maurice Maeterlinck [illegible] given a [illegible] "Ariane" [illegible] woman's [illegible].

The author of the play—which is virtually also the libretto [illegible] meanings. But in this instance we are not concerned with his disclaimers. No person who has read his drama doubts that in the character of his heroine and in the figures of the five other wives of Blue Beard, Maeterlinck has symbolized the two contrasted kinds of femininity—the New and the Old types of woman.

Man Traditional Tyrant.

And it is just as clear to all who reflect that in Blue Beard he intended us to see a type of Man, the traditional tyrant; that Man whose will for ages has been law to a down-trodden sex. He is, of course, a type of the extreme, the strong, rude Brute. But he is surely what the suffragettes think all men.

Now this seems strange to many operagoers. To those who have been used to mere romances, like "Aida" and "Gioconda"; to those who think that opera should not change, works like this "Ariane" of Dukas are disturbing.

To others, who are broad enough to accept change, even in opera, "Ariane et Barbe-Bleue" should be a joy.

Musically, it will seem easier, even to sticklers for the old forms (which may still be beautiful), to enjoy Dukas than Claude Debussy. None who have swallowed Strauss and applauded "Parsifal" need balk at "Ariane."

With love and reverence, Paul Dukas has studied Wagner, assimilated Debussy and learned something of Charpentier. At many points he has gone the length of using passages, and whole themes, which we have heard in "Parsifal," "Tristan," "Louise" and "Lohengrin." Once, for a moment, he has taken hints from Massenet. But, being what he is, a man of genius, he has transformed and modified his assimilations, giving them new, lovely turns and uses.

New Charm to Theme.

The most enchanting of all the episodes in his "Ariane," for example, reminds us of "Louise." I speak now of the exquisite "lament" sung in the first act by Blue Beard's victims. In their dark dungeon, far below the palace hall, from which Ariane listens, we hear them telling of their sad and cruel fate. And as we hear them we hark back to the old lullaby of Louise's father, which is itself, however, a transcription of a Breton folk song.

What then? Having frankly called to mind a well-known theme, Dukas informs it with a strange and mournful beauty which Charpentier had not put into his music. He gives it a new character. He lends it charm.

At other times the composer proves his ability to dispense with themes which have been used already by his contemporaries and his forerunners. What could be more original, more eloquent, than the music with which he has suggested streams of jewels in the opening act? The pale loveliness of amethysts, the deep glow of rubies and the splendor of pure, sparkling diamonds are described—almost painted—in his tones and rhythms.

The glory of the Light, again, is interpreted, so that the most dull may know it, in the last episode of the second act. And in his prelude to the third act, due though it may be in a great measure to the inspiration of Wagner, he has recalled the various "motives" heard before. He has welded them into a coherent whole with a skill, a grasp of art, a force and charm which might have caused the man to whom we owe "The Nibelungs Ring" to gasp and praise.

Has Warm Welcome.

It would be almost blasphemy to doubt that this rare "Ariane et Barbe-Bleue" will live in music.

Whether it will hold [illegible] that deserves in our repertory [illegible] on our public. The welcome it received at its opening at the Metropolitan seemed warm. [illegible]

[illegible] Metropolitan [illegible] ruso or to admire some female star, may object to an opera in which there is no tenor, no basso and hardly a baritone.

But to atone, they will hear noble music, ravishing orchestration and impressive declamatory passages. They will be fascinated by the pictures that do duty as backgrounds for the characters. They will have pretexts for unending discussions about symbolism [illegible].

The "Votes for Women" section of the community will find unusual arguments in the opera. For the next week or two, at least, they might make the Metropolitan their headquarters.

Nothing they could say at their meetings, nothing they could print in their organs, is half as eloquent, half as stirring, half as beautiful, as the end of "Ariane."

The Eternal Struggle.

In the final episode of the opera, Dukas and Maeterlinck, working together like twin souls, have summarized the eternal struggle between those women who are born into the world for freedom and their poor, patient, weakly sisters to whom submission appears Gospel.

"Ariane et Barbe-Bleue" is both a poetic music-drama and a satire. It is pathetic. It is ironic.

Its pathos lies in the distressful attitude of the five wives—types of the Old Woman—who are misused by Blue Beard. Its irony comes with the failure of the heroine, symbolizing the New Woman—to inform her sisters with her own faith and her own courage.

I have hinted at the imperfections of the performance by the singers in the "Ariane" cast.

The burden of the work rests chiefly on one artist, charged with the title role. No opera of recent times makes more wearing or imperious demands on the resources of a singer. Ariane should have declamatory power, purity of enunciation, dignity of style, eloquence in expression. She need not be a singer without flaw, like some we know. But she must have imaginative uplift.

Nor is this all. She must be capable of impressing one by the poetry of her attitudes, the significance of her gestures. She should be beautiful. She should be agreeable plastically.

Miss Farrar Falls Short.

To pretend that Geraldine Farrar comes within measureable distance of the ideal Ariane would be to confess one's ignorance. Miss Farrar, in spite of all her talent, is lamentably unequal to the part. That she did what she did with it, hampered as she was by physical deficiencies and vocal weaknesses, was in a way creditable. This should not blind us to the evident fact she lacked poetry, sincerity and the ability to convey the symbolical meaning of her words to her audience.

Plastically and dramatically, also, Miss Farrar failed to realize her character. Vocally, she distressed one far too often by her nasal tones, which she appears to think quite French. Her gesture was at times unmeaning and it was seldom beautiful.

In plain words, this much praised young artiste hardly for a moment got inside her difficult part. She was prosaic when she should have been poetic.

Jeanne Maubourg gave her valuable lessons in a minor role. As Selysette she delighted one by the grace of her attitudes, the harmony of her movements, the artistry of her singing.

But much may be condoned in the performance for the sake of the amazing way in which the conductor, Maestro Toscanini, brought out the beauties of the score.

With hardly the exception of his "Tristan" and his "Goetterdaemmerung," his "Ariane" is his interpretative masterpiece.

Let no one miss it who can hear Paul Dukas' opera.

MUSIC NOTES

[illegible] place in Leipsic on Good Friday, 1729. The performance in Symphony Hall next Friday (Good Friday) evening will begin promptly at 7:30 o'clock.

The concert will be the last of three given by the combined forces of the Cecilia Society and the Boston Symphony Orchestra, a very interesting experiment the results of which have quite justified [illegible] soloists have been very carefully chosen.

Two novelties by two Boston composers [illegible] in manuscript and is dedicated to Frederick Stock of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra of Chicago. The other novelty will be a Comedy Overture on Negro Themes by Henry F. Gilbert, late of Harvard University. This also is in manuscript and will be played for the first time in Boston. Other numbers on the program will be the Prelude to "Parsifal" and Rachmaninoff's Symphonic poem "The Island of the Dead."

Easter Sunday evening, April 16, brings the performance in Symphony Hall of Haydn's "Creation" by the Handel and Haydn Society, this performance being incidentally, the seven hundred and seventy-fourth concert given by that famous organization. The soloists have been carefully selected and are admirably suited to the parts allotted to them; Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams is a great favorite with Boston audiences and Mr. Reed Miller and Mr. Frederick Martin both won many friends by their splendid work in the last Christmas oratorio.

The last opportunity of the season for the general public outside of the regular patrons of the Symphony Orchestra [illegible] that organization under Max Fiedler will come this evening, when the Orchestra will give its second concert in aid of the pension fund. At the first concert this year the Orchestra had the co-operation of Signor Constantino and at the concert tonight Josef Hofmann gives his services. The program will comprise works by Beethoven and Wagner.

Lovers of choral music will warmly welcome the coming to Symphony Hall on the afternoon and evening of April 26, of the Paulist Choristers of Chicago. This society is made up of 125 voices, men and boys, under the direction of Rev. William J. Finn, C. S. P., and the concerts here will be under the patronage of many of Boston's most select society matrons.

OPERA ALLOTMENTS SOON.

Subscription Seats to Be Apportioned April 25.

The allotment of next season's subscription seats to the stockholders of the Boston Opera Company will take place at the meeting of stockholders to be held at the Boston Opera House Tuesday, April 25.

As in the past two seasons, four large diagrams will be placed on the stage. Cards bearing the names of stockholders whose applications have been received on or before the 24th of April will be placed in a box and drawn out one by one, thus indicating who has the chance to select seats prior to others. The seats selected by the stockholders will be marked on the respective diagrams showing the seats still available for the four weekly subscription performances, i.e., Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings and Saturday matinee.

The season of 1911-1912 will commence November 27 for eighteen consecutive weeks.

The managing director of the Boston Opera Company is now in Paris seeking contracts for the production of some of the most successful of modern French, Italian and German works, which will be added to the already splendid repertoire of the opera house. Many of the world's most famous singers will appear during the coming season, partly as permanent members of the company and partly as guests.

The high artistic standard set by the past two seasons' performances at the opera house has inspired great confidence in Boston music lovers, proof of which is the great number of applications for season tickets received by the management.

Immediately after the allotment of seats to stockholders of the Boston Opera Company, seats will be assigned to non-stockholder patrons.

THE WAR IN THE AIR

By H. G. Wells. Copyright by the Macmillan Company.

Synopsis of Preceding Instalments

[illegible] typical English [illegible] partnership with [illegible] in the bicycle business. [illegible] of the great man Butteridge, who has perfected the greatest airship in history. Butteridge is willing to sell his secret for an enormous sum—preferably to England [illegible] other nations [illegible] have made offers [illegible] Bert Smallways and his friend [illegible] business [illegible] determine [illegible].

While [illegible] the crowd surround them [illegible] a woman. Bert [illegible] carried away [illegible] about [illegible] Butteridge's [illegible] this leads him to discover the inventor's letters, blueprints, photos and [illegible] secret of the great [illegible] finds that Germany is expecting a visit from Butteridge.

Bert is carried 10,000 feet in the air, and finally comes low over the ground, over a great encampment, where soldiers shoot and bring down the balloon. He finds he is a captive in the great aeronautic war park of the German nation at Franconia.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued)

THE governing class in Great Britain was slowly adapting itself to a new conception of the subject races as waking peoples and, finding its efforts to keep the empire together, under these strains and changing ideas, greatly impeded by the entirely sporting spirit with which Bert Smallways at home (by the million) cast his vote and by the tendency of his more highly coloured equivalents to be disrespectful to irascible officials.

Their impertinence was excessive, it was no mere stone throwing and shouting. They would quote Burns at them and Mill and Darwin and confute them in arguments.

Even more pacific than the British Empire were France and its allies, the Latin Powers, heavily armed States indeed, but reluctant warriors and in many ways socially and politically leading Western civilization.

Russia was a pacific power perforce, divided within itself, torn between revolutionaries and reactionaries who were equally incapable of social reconstruction and so sinking toward a tragic disorder of chronic political vendetta.

Sought to Keep Secrets

Wedged [illegible] among these [illegible] them, [illegible] States of the world maintained a precarious independence, each keeping itself armed as dangerously as its utmost ability could contrive.

So it came about that in every country a great and growing body of energetic and inventive men was busied either for offensive or defensive ends in elaborating the apparatus of war until the accumulating tensions should reach the breaking point.

Each power sought to keep its preparations [illegible] to hold new weapons in reserve, to anticipate and learn the preparations of its rivals. The feeling of danger [illegible] fresh discoveries [illegible]

The strength and heart of the nations were given to the thought of war [illegible]

That was the paradox of the time. [illegible] It was a period altogether unique in the world's history. The apparatus of war [illegible]

And then at last war came.

It came as a surprise to all the world because its real causes were hidden. Relations were strained between Germany and the United States because of the intense exasperation of a tariff conflict and the ambiguous attitude of the former Power toward the Monroe Doctrine; and they were strained between the United States and Japan because of the perennial [illegible] question.

[illegible] both cases these were [illegible] for offence. The real [illegible] It is known now was the [illegible] of the Pforzheim [illegible] Germany [illegible] the consequent possibility of a rapid [illegible] airship.

At that time Germany was by far the most efficient Power in the world, better organized for swift and secret action, better equipped with the resources of modern science and with her official and administrative [illegible] to the pitch of continual [illegible] counsels of her neighbors.

It may be that with the habit of self-confidence her spying upon them had grown less thorough. Moreover, she had a tradition of unsentimental and unscrupulous action that vitiated her international outlook profoundly.

With the coming of these new weapons her collective intelligence thrilled with the sense that now her moment had come.

Once again in the history of progress it seemed she held the decisive weapon. Now she might strike [illegible] before the others had anything but experiments in the air.

Particularly [illegible] to strike America swiftly [illegible] anywhere [illegible] chance of an aerial rival. It was known that America possessed a flying machine of considerable practical value, developed out of the Wright model but it was not supposed that the Washington War Office had made any wholesale attempts to create an aerial navy.

It was necessary to strike before they could do so.

France had a fleet of slow navigables, several dating from 1908, that could make no possible headway against the new type. They had been built solely for reconnoitring purposes on the eastern frontier; they were mostly too small to carry more than a couple of dozen men without arms or provisions, and not one could do forty miles an hour.

Great Britain, it seemed, in an access of meanness, temporized and wrangled with the imperial spirited Butteridge and his extraordinary invention. That also was not [illegible] and could not be for some months at the earliest.

From Asia there came no sign. The Germans explained this by saying the yellow peoples were without invention. No other competitor was worth considering.

"Now or Never!"

"Now or never," said the Germans—"now or never we may seize the air, as once the British seized the seas, while all the other Powers are still experimenting."

Swift and systematic and secret were their preparations and their plan most excellent. So far as their knowledge went, America was the only dangerous possibility—America, which was also now the leading trade rival of Germany and one of the chief barriers to her imperial expansion.

So at once they would strike at America. They would fling a force across the Atlantic heavens and bear America down, unwarned and unprepared.

Altogether it was a well-imagined and [illegible] [illegible] to Monday's [illegible]

[illegible] Petersburg or wherever [illegible] effect was required.

A World Surprise

A world surprise it was to be, an assault, a world conquest—and it is wonderful how near the calmly adventurous minds that planned it came to succeeding in their colossal design.

Von Sternberg was the Moltke of this war in the air, but it was the curious, hard romanticism of Prince Karl Albert that won over the hesitating Emperor to the scheme.

Prince Karl Albert was indeed the central figure of the world drama. He was the darling of the imperialist spirit in Germany and the ideal of the new aristocratic feeling, the new chivalry, as it was called, that followed the overthrow of socialism through its internal divisions and lack of discipline and the concentration of wealth in the hands of a few great families.

He was compared by obsequious flatterers to the Black Prince, to Alcibiades, to the young Caesar. To many he seemed Nietzsche's Overman revealed.

He was big and blond and virile and splendidly neurotic.

The first great feat that startled Europe and almost brought about a new European war was his abduction of the Princess Helena of Norway and his blank refusal to marry her. Then followed his [illegible] with Gretchen Krass, a Swiss girl of less beauty.

The Great War Navy

Then [illegible]

This he developed with [illegible] energy and ability, being resolved, it is said, to give to Germany land and sea and air.

[illegible] Worlds [illegible] Nation [illegible] the snow, complex [illegible] of their national politics [illegible] ing, forceful figure. Even men believed in him. Poems were written to him in America.

He made the war.

Quite equally with the rest of the world the general German population was taken by surprise by the swift vigor of the Imperial Government.

A considerable literature of military forecasts, beginning as early as 1900 with Rudolph Martin [illegible] of a brilliant book of anticipations, [illegible] of a proverb, "The future of Germany lies in the air," had, however, partially prepared [illegible].

In the Thick of It

[illegible] Bert Smallways [illegible] till he found himself in the very focus of it all and gaped down amazed on the spectacle of that giant herd of airships [illegible]

He had never before seen anything so vast and disciplined as this tremendous park. For the first time in his life he really had an intimation of the extraordinary and quite [illegible] things of [illegible] It had always [illegible] to the illusion that Germans were fat absurd men who [illegible] long pipes and were addicted to sauerkraut and indigestible things generally.

His birdseye view was transitory. He ducked at the first shot, and directly his balloon began to drop his mind ran confusedly upon how he might explain himself and whether he should proceed to be Butteridge or no.

[illegible] he cowered [illegible] he might [illegible] and complicated explanations by pretending to be [illegible]

SKIN-TORTURED AND DISFIGURED BABIES

And Worn-Out, Worried Parents Find Comfort in Cuticura Soap and Ointment.

Is your little one a sufferer from itching, burning eczema or other torturing, disfiguring skin trouble? Are you, yourself, worn out by long, sleepless nights and ceaseless anxiety, and have you tried treatment after treatment without avail? If so, you will read with interest the following letter from Mrs. Noble Tubman, of Dodson, Mont., telling what Cuticura soap and Cuticura ointment did for just such a case as yours:

"When my baby boy was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try Cuticura soap and ointment. I used the Cuticura soap and ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura soap and ointment, although we had tried several other things and doctors too. I think the Cuticura remedies will do all that is claimed for them and a great deal more."

Cuticura soap and ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, but mothers of skin-tortured infants and children can obtain a liberal sample of each, mailed free, with a thirty-two page booklet on the skin and its treatment, by addressing "Cuticura," Dept. A, Boston, Mass.

JOHN CRAIG AND "END OF THE BRIDGE" MAKE NEW CASTLE SQUARE RECORDS

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

"THE End of the Bridge" has become such a band ... John Craig that his carefully laid plans for numerous S... productions at the Castle Square Theatre seem to be ... upset. As the ... week of Miss Florence Lincoln's ... ing play approaches ... interest in it ... compelled to agree with Mr Craig that "The End of the Bridge" ... the most extraordinary dramatic offering the city has had ... old days of the Boston Museum.

Certainly no stock engagement of recent years has so captivated the town by the ears, and at the rate things have been moving in Castle Square the immediate future of Mr Craig's theatre will not have much ... to concern it. The appetite of theatregoers for Miss Lincoln's play is one of the healthiest signs of the theatrical season. That Miss Lincoln is able to write with a deep knowledge of public taste must be conceded, though it is extremely doubtful if she could have expected the overwhelming success that has so comfortably settled upon "The End of the Bridge."

While the success of "The End of the Bridge" is unusual in so far as it relates to stock productions, there is absolutely nothing unnatural in its prosperity. Plays succeed because they deserve it, and no one who has seen "The End of the Bridge" will dispute its value as a clean entertainment, unique in theme, skilfully written and capitally acted. With such material success is easy, as Mr Craig has often discovered during ... career as an actor and as Miss Lincoln is now learning to her ... felicity.

Mr. Craig's service to theatregoers has been manifold, and the rather spectacular triumph of "The End of the Bridge" may rightly be regarded by him as a well deserved reward for supplying a great mass of earnest patrons of the theatre with good entertainment at moderate prices. He has made the Castle Square Theatre an institution worth having in any city, and he has done it by lifting the quality of stock productions to a standard higher than anything we have known up to the time he entered the field.

Until Mr. Craig put his shoulder to the wheel at the Castle Square three years ago, stock productions in Boston were in a condition of decay that gave him scant prospect of success. Messrs. Ames and Deland had given time, money and skill to the Castle Square Theatre only to abandon the work in discouragement. Others followed, and disaster was the result.

From the start Mr. Craig appeared to guage the public pulse correctly. He appeared on the scene as a specialist, and it was not long before every one interested in the theatre knew he had the proper remedy. His first step was to smash the tradition that a dramatic company was unfitted for musical comedy, and as proof he offered "The Circus Girl," which took care of nine consecutive weeks in his first season. Mr Craig turned his back upon custom and gave his attention to supplying entertainment that he felt would not pass unheeded. He always guessed with unerring precision, and in less than two months from the day he became an actor-manager it was more than apparent to every theatregoer that a new order of things was in progress on Tremont street.

From a serious business problem that frightened the wits out of men experienced in stock productions Mr. Craig has turned the Castle Square Theatre into one of the most prosperous theatres in the country. Between "The Circus Girl" and "The End of the Bridge" Mr. Craig has given his patrons many happy surprises, and he has always kept faith with those who have supported him. It may also be said that he has a perfect knowledge of his public—that is why he is a useful citizen.

* * * * *

IT may not be generally known, but Harry Davenport of "The Commuters" company is one of the few scions of our theatrical aristocracy. Mr Davenport is the son of the distinguished tragedian, E. L. Davenport, and a brother of the equally distinguished tragedienne, Fanny Davenport. The Drews, the Barrymores, the Whiffens, the Davenports, and perhaps one or two other living descendants of the players that delighted our forefathers, are the sole ties of blood that bind the stage of to-day with that of the past. It is not recorded that Mr. Davenport was ruined by his childhood association with the stage, as our energetic uplifters tell us is the case when children of tender years take up that life. Mr Davenport has been an actor since he was five years old, when he appeared in his father's company as the little son of Damon in "Damon and Pythias." It was an early beginning, but records show that Mr. Davenport has always been a sound, well-balanced citizen. And this in the face of the additional fact that at the age of eight he was the Admiral in John L. Ford's juvenile production of "Pinafore."

For an actor who still plays young men—and his Sammy Fletcher in "The Commuters" is bubbling with youth—Mr Davenport is able to look back over a long stretch of active years in the drama. At an age when most young men are just emerging from school into business he was a member of the late Frank Mayo's company, playing roles in Shakespeare and Schiller, as well as parts in the less classic "Davy Crockett" and "The Streets of New York."

Those who remember Fanny Davenport's famous production of "La Tosca" may recall the work of her young brother, who was then a member of her company. Even as a youth he had his "starring" experience, producing with his brother Edgar a farce called "Nothing but Money." This venture brought everything but money, and the company stranded in Fresno, Cal. After a season with the old Boston Museum Stock Company and with the George Holland Stock Company in Baltimore Mr. Davenport created the juvenile role of Henry Bronson in "The Belle of New York" and later succeeded Dan Daly in the role of the elder Bronson.

And Mr Davenport declares with great vigor that he has suffered neither physical nor moral infirmities through his association with the stage.

A REGULAR April first story crept into print last week. It was to the effect that Klaw and Erlanger and the Shuberts had kissed and made up, and that Charles Frohman had given his hearty consent. It may be said with great truth that felicitations are not in order this Spring between the rival theatrical interests, that is if you can believe half they are saying about each other. To those engaged in the merry scramble for theatrical superiority peace would be about as welcome as an epidemic of diphtheria.

* * * * *

FOR the first time since the house was opened the Majestic Theatre will be closed during Holy Week. When Mrs. Leslie Carter moved out last evening the shutters were put up and the lights turned low. For eight days there will be darkness, but on April 17 "The Prince of Pilsen" slip is on its pretty tunes and remain for three weeks.

* * * * *

PEACE and tranquility has again settled itself upon the Hollis Street Theatre and memory of Mayor Fitzgerald's abrupt dismissal of "The Easiest Way" has faded into oblivion like a bad dream. With the coming of Ethel Barrymore in two of J. M. Barrie's whimsical comedies, we shall have that interesting actress in especially attractive roles. Miss Barrymore's season in New York in "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire" and "The Twelve-Pound Look" was crowded with encouragement and there is every reason to believe that Boston ... will welcome with becoming hospitality during her engagement.

BILLS AT BOSTON THEATRES

Hollis St Theatre

... Ethel Barrymore at the Hollis Street Theatre to ... J. M. Barrie double bill, "Alice Sit By The Fire" and "The Twelve Pound Look." It was in this bill that Miss Barrymore rounded out her long season in New York and it proved to be one in which she scored many honors.

Miss Barrymore's double bill shows Barrie in two moods and at his best. His ... one of ... on the bill. "The Twelve Pound Look," is said to be the strongest and most powerful work bearing the dramatist's name. Within its narrow confines as regards time its illuminating dialogue lays bare the souls of a man and two women.

B. F. Keith's Theatre.

An exceptionally good list of features for B. F. Keith's Theatre this week has been prepared. It is sufficient to say that one of the features engaged is Louis Simon, who will produce one of the funniest sketches ever put on in vaudeville, called "The New Coachman." A new feature of the work will be Lou Anger, a Western comedian, in a German soldier character. Barry & Halford will be seen in a new comedy called "At the Song Booth." ... Lorraine, an impersonator of ... and a big feature for the children will be Maude Stackney's Circus, with some of the most intelligent trained animals that have ever been seen on the stage.

Grand Opera House.

"Billy the Kid," the Western play in which Frank Dickson is appearing this season, will be this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House. The play, while melodramatic, is consistent in story and tells a tale that is full of interest, having ... exceptionally exciting. The comedy element is furnished by a good natured Irishman, a fine type of the old school Southern colonel and his orderly.

Aborn Opera Company

The Aborn Opera Company will offer in English during the coming week at the Boston Opera that grand old operatic standby, "Lucia di Lammermoor," by Donizetti, with its famous mad scene and its sextet.

The Aborns are bringing to Boston to sing the roles made familiar by Tetrazzini, Melba, Lipkowska and many others, Edith Helena, whom they assert has the most ... range of any coloratura soprano. Her voice easily runs from F below the staff to the F above high C, and frequently reaches a full note above that. She has just toured the Middle West and been hailed as the American Tetrazzini.

Miss Helena has sung in Munich, Paris, Barcelona, London, Rome, Milan and other famous centres. Her repertory includes "Sonnambula," "Puritani," "L'Africaine," in addition to the more familiar operas.

Battain, the Italian tenor, and Russo, ... Italian tenor, who formerly sang with Henry Russell in the San Carlo company, will divide the tenor roles, and the other parts will be in adequate hands.

Park Theatre.

"The Commuters" seem to find all mileage of the standard length, and there is no difference in the length of journey to Boston and back home again, but the object sought is invariably the same in an evening with "The Commuters" at the Park Theatre. This comedy of suburban life is quite the jolliest of all those written by James Forbes, and it still continues its Boston success.

Castle Square Theatre.

"The End of the Bridge" is still at the height of its success at the Castle Square, every passing week seeming to bring with it ... of popularity. From near and far the public is coming to see Miss Lincoln's finely constructed and written domestic drama, and it makes more and more friends with each successive performance. The sixth week begins on Monday, and it will continue to appeal to all classes of playgoers, and to many more who go to the theatre but rarely. There is, in fact, no group of people in the community who are not pleased by "The End of the Bridge."

Colonial Theatre.

Frank Daniels and "The Girl in the Train" enter upon the third week of their successful engagement at the Colonial Theatre Monday night. Not since the memorable days of "Little Puck" has the diminutive comedian been fitted so perfectly and a congenial comic role as in "The Girl in the Train," in which he appears as the judge of the divorce court. His antics to preserve order in the court room scene make his role of the judge one of the best comic opera parts ever ...

Globe Theatre.

"St. Elmo," the book that has run through edition after edition and which has been translated into nearly every language, and even to-day, after nearly fifty years, is ranked as one of the best sellers, is seemingly as popular as ever. The play, as adapted by Willard Holcomb to the satisfaction of Mrs. Wilson herself, speaks volumes as an endorsement. The dramatization, it is said, has enhanced rather than depreciated the pathos of the work, and it bids fair to rival the novel in its popularity with the public. Vaughan Glaser's production comes to the Globe Theatre to-morrow for an engagement of two weeks.

Boston Theatre.

There is no doubt of the popular success of Robert Hilliard at the Boston Theatre. He has been received with enthusiasm ... powerful personation of the ... in "A Fool There Was." This ... play takes a firm grip on the ... cites that wide discussion which ...

Miss Billie Burke's father was Bill Burke, a once famous circus clown. When the Civil War began Burke was employed in a store in Pittsburg, Pa. COPYING HIS "LINES."

By Augustus Thomas.

THE Child Labor Committee of the United States has instituted an active campaign looking to the enactment of laws in the several States of the Union for the protection of children by excluding them from factories and workshops. This is a work with which all good men and women are in sympathy. In their zeal the members of the committee have made the draft of the law which they are advocating somewhat too broad, and are including in one application the labor-burdened child of the factory and the [illegible] with the rather pampered child of the theatre.

States of Illinois and Massachusetts such a blanket [illegible] has been passed, with the result that children under the age of sixteen are excluded from the theatres in those States, and consequently from their two principal cities, Chicago and Boston, which are most important on the theatrical map.

The effect of this exclusion of children from the theatre is to shut out a large section of the drama, which includes such classics as "The Tempest," "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "King John," "The Winter's Tale," "Macbeth" and such modern plays as "A Doll's House," "Rip Van Winkle," "Peter Pan," "The Blue Bird," "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Mother," "A Bachelor's Baby," "Salvation Nell," "The Travelling Salesman," "A Man's World," "Shore Acres," "His House in Order" and many others. It practically says to the dramatist: "You shall not choose any dramatic theme to which the child value is essential." It says to the child of genius: "You shall not have this school of training, without which a full and proper development of your talent is not possible," and makes a lamentable confusion between the enforced and benumbing labor of the factory and the developing and educating exercise of the playhouse.

This menace to the drama and to the rights of the child has led to the organization of the National Alliance for the

What People Used to Eat in Ancient Times.

Pity the Kings and Millionaires of Noble Rome and Merrie England Who Smacked Their Lips Over Pickled Dormice and Slave-Fed Eels and Hugely Enjoyed Goose on Top of Pie

The Served Fish and Meat in the Old "Poetic Days" of King Arthur

Unsanitary Fashion from Hand to Hand

The Ancient Romans Ate One Indigestible Meal After Another, Using Vomitoria to Assist Them.

WHEN writers talk about the good old times, what they dwell on particularly is the luscious food the ancients enjoyed.

The name of old Lucullus, of Rome, will probably live forever as a giver of banquets. All the great monarchs, conquerors and rich men of Roman days are supposed to have enjoyed feasts of surpassing magnificence and lusciousness.

The same idea prevails concerning all the earlier periods of history, all periods, in fact, except our own. We suppose that the old kings and nobles of England lived uncommonly well. When we read that King John died of "a surfeit" of lampreys it merely suggests the idea that he was a very high feeder.

Now, what do we find when we investigate the facts of the case with care, with minds free from widespread, preconceived notions? We find that the greatest kings and nobles of old lived on food that would find a respectable modern laboring man with disgust. They stuffed themselves with decaying fish and meat, and thus contracted diseases that would have made their lives a long misery and they not usually been very short-lived.

A learned Frenchman, M. Armand Labault, has just written a work called "The Dinner Table and Meals Throughout the Ages." It is filled with facts and citations, and from these one constantly realizes the barbarous and frequently revolting food on which the richest of our ancestors lived.

After their conquests in Asia and Africa the governing classes of ancient Rome found themselves possessed of unlimited wealth and resources. Then they became gourmands. Nothing was too fantastic, too indigestible or too horrible to eat. They ate giraffes, ostriches, rhinoceroses, even tigers.

As the Romans ate such terribly strong meats they conceived the idea that the sauces ought to be as strong as possible to go along the meats. The sauces were consequently more terrible than the meats.

"Garum piperatum," or "peppery sauce," was one of the favorite sauces of the Romans. Pliny calls it "sanies putrescentium," or "liquor of putrefaction," and also, strange to say "an exquisite liquor."

It was composed of decayed entrails of fish, cooked in their blood, wine, salt water, oil and aromatic herbs, and was heavily seasoned with pepper, as its name indicates.

There were many varieties of garum, all of them equally nasty according to our ideas. Their strong smell and flavor were calculated to excite the appetite of the Romans.

The Romans apparently possessed magnificent stomachs, capable of digesting more things than the proverbial ostrich can. They also liked dormice cooked in honey. They were cooked in an earthenware vessel called a "glirarium." These little animals were specially raised in parks and fed on rich food to make them as fat as possible.

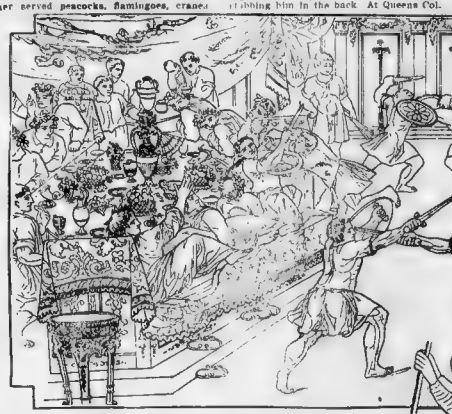
Peacocks were particularly prized by the Romans as food, apparently on account of their feathers. They are among the toughest of birds. Aufidius Lurco made 60,000 sesterces a year by raising peacocks for the rich. The most famous Roman dish was peacocks' tongues. Next to peacocks the Romans liked scarlet flamingoes for dinner.

The Emperor Heliogabalus at one dinner served peacocks, flamingoes, cranes, bustards, pelicans and guinea hens from Nubia.

The Romans were particularly fond of midas, hazel hens from Ionia, pheasants from Colchis, francolins from Phrygia, other birds.

G. Flavius Lupius, in the time of Julius Caesar, established a park of edible snails and fed them with cooked wine.

Horace mentions as delicate food a wild boar soaked in lees of wine.



At a Banquet Given by the Emperor Caligula Gladiators Fought for the Entertainment of the Guests and Splashed Them with Blood and Severed Members

Huge Joints of Meat Were Cooked in This Crude Fashion in Anglo-Saxon Times.

Assurbanipal, the Babylonian Monarch, Feasting Barbarously After a Victory. From an Ancient Bas-Relief.

...ey liked their wine thick and strong ...er perfumed it with nard malobathrum, myrrh, iris, myrtle, hyssop, anise, fennel.

Vedius Pollio, in the time of Augustus Caesar, fed slaves, living, and also cut ... pieces, to his conger eels in order to ...ve them a special flavor.

In the Middle Ages we find that the ...od of the great was barbarously prepared, barbarously eaten, and frequently ...utrescent.

King Louis le Jeune, of France, stopped at the monastery of Saint Johan, and the monks, wishing to treat him well, offered him fourteen different kinds of roast meat on one dish in a pyramid.

The French in the twelfth century ate dogfish, but they were ignorant of the edible quality of oysters. They ate porpoise too, although the best was known for this fish in our days is to make very strong shoes of it. The fishermen of Normandy could not keep a porpoise until they had knocked three times with the tail of the monster on the door of Rouen Cathedral.

The mediaevals liked their food rich, strong, ripe and well mixed. Here is an ancient recipe for a kind of hot fish hash called "Chaudumer," or "hot from the sea":

"Take some eels and pike, chop them and put them in a saucepan, and when it is done brown, take some of the liquor, boil it and have some pike's liver to mix with it, and add some ginger and saffron to give color to the chaudumer, and take some verjuice and some wine to put with the chaudumer, and boil the whole together and season with salt."

These people had the same idea as the ancient Romans, that strong sauces were useful to digest strong meats. They also believed that strong-smelling sauces were of value in disguising the breath, which perhaps was not an altogether wrong idea. They used quantities of fennel, coriander, anise, ginger, juniper and all kinds of spices in their sauces, seasonings and dressings.

Great kings and noblemen cut their meat with their knives and ate it with their fingers. The bones and whatever they didn't want they threw on the floor, where their dogs usually sat looking for the scraps.

A nobleman dining out with a friend often had three or four man servants standing behind to prevent his enemies from stabbing him in the back. At Queens College, Oxford, to-day they preserve an ancient loving cup and the ancient manner of using it. While one man drinks, his neighbors on each side turn and face away from the table to see that nobody stabs the drinker in the back.

Forks were first introduced at the French court by King Henry III. in 1580. Their use was greatly ridiculed at the time.

At a period so near to us as the eighteenth century great English noblemen and fashionable ladies ate with such barbarity and gluttony that merely reading about it makes us ill. The great Dean Swift has left a picture of a fashionable dinner table of his period.

Lord Sparkish, Tom Neverout and Colonel Aiwit came to dine at three o'clock with Lord and Lady Smart. Seven of them sat down to dinner and were joined by a country baronet, Sir John, who told them they kept court hours. Those persons of fashion began their dinner with a sirloin of beef, fish, a shoulder of veal and a tongue. All made considerable inroad on the sirloin and the shoulder of veal, with the exception of Sir John, who had no appetite, having already partaken of a huge beefsteak and two mugs of ale, besides a tankard of March beer as soon as he was out of bed.

After the first course came almond pudding, fritters, which the gallant Colonel took with his hands out of the dish in order to help the brilliant Miss Notable; chickens, black pudding and soup.

Fancy the moral condition of a people who openly ate goose after almond pudding and took their soup in the middle of dinner!

Lady Smart, the elegant mistress of the mansion, finding a skewer in a dish, placed it in her plate with directions that it should be carried down to the cook and dressed for the cook's own dinner. This was old English humor. Wine and small beer were drunk during this second course, and when the Colonel called for beer he called the butler "friend" and asked whether the beer was good.

When My Lady Sparkish sent her footman out to My Lady March to ask her to come at six o'clock and play at quadrille, Her Ladyship warned the man to follow his nose, and if he fell by the way not to stay to set up again.

After the puddings, sweet and black, the fritters and soup, came the third course, of which the chief dish was a hot venison pasty, which was put before Lord Smart, and carved by that nobleman. Besides the pasty there was a hare, a rabbit, some pigeons, partridges, a goose and a ham. Beer and wine were freely imbibed during this course, the gentlemen always pledging somebody with every glass which they drank, saying, "My Lord Sparkish, my service to you," etc.

After the goose the gentlemen took a dram of brandy, "which was very good for the wholesome," Sir John said, and now having had a tolerably substantial dinner Lord Smart bade the butler bring up the great tankard full of October ale to Sir John. The great tankard was passed from hand to hand and mouth to mouth, but when pressed by the noble host upon Tom Neverout, he said, "No, faith, my lord; I like your wine and won't put a churl upon a gentleman. Your Honor's claret is good enough for me." And so the dinner over, the host said, "Hast saving, bring us a ha'porth of cheese."

How the Wretched Wine Was Served to Anglo Saxon Kings

The Lord Mayor and Aldermen of London in the Eighteenth Century Eating with Their Fingers and Gorging Themselves with Food in an Indelicate Manner. From the Famous Engraving by William Hogarth.

The cloth was now taken away, and a bottle of burgundy was set down, of which the ladies were invited to partake before they went to their tea (which cost $8 a pound at the time). When they withdrew the gentlemen promised to join them in an hour. Fresh bottles were brought, the "dead men," meaning the empty bottles removed, and "D'you hear, John? Bring clean glasses," my Lord Smart said. On which the gallant Colonel Aiwit said, "I'll keep my glass; for wine is the best liquor to wash glasses in."

After a time the gentlemen joined the ladies, and then they all sat and played ... until the ... o'clock in the morning, when the chairs and the footmen came and this noble company went to bed.

The Case for the Stage Child

Protection of Stage Children. The object of this organization is to secure the adoption of a uniform law throughout the United States, modeled upon the present New York law, which is as follows:

A person who employs or causes to be employed, or who exhibits, uses, or has in custody or trains for the purpose of exhibition, use or employment of, any child actually or apparently under the age of fifteen years, or who, having the care, custody or control of such a child as parent, relative, guardian, employer or otherwise sells, lets out, gives away, so trains, or in any way procures or consents to the employment or to such training, or use, or exhibition of such child; or who neglects or refuses to restrain such child from such training or from engaging or acting;

1. As a rope or wire walker, gymnast, wrestler, contortionist, rider or acrobat, or upon any bicycle or similar mechanical vehicle or contrivance; or

2. In begging or receiving or soliciting alms in any manner or under any pretense, or in any mechanical occupation, or in gathering or picking rags, or collecting cigar stumps, bones or refuse from markets, or in peddling or,

3. In singing, or dancing, or playing upon a musical instrument; or in a theatrical exhibition; or in any wandering occupation; or,

4. In any illegal, indecent or immoral exhibition or practice; or in the exhibition of any such child when insane, idiotic, or when presenting the appearance of any deformity or unnatural physical formation or development; or,

5. In any practice or exhibition or place dangerous or injurious to the life, limb, health or morals of the child, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

But this section does not apply to the employment of any child as a singer or musician in a church, school or academy; or in teaching or learning the science or practice of music; or as a musician in any concert, or in a theatrical exhibition, with the written consent of the Mayor of the city, or the President of the Board of Trustees of the village where such concert or exhibition takes place. Such consent shall not be given unless forty-eight hours' previous notice of the application shall have been served upon the society mentioned in the following paragraph of this chapter, if there be one within the county, and a hearing had thereon if required, and shall be revocable at the will of the authority giving it.

This law, it will be seen, excludes children from all employment in the theatre in any capacity dangerous to life and limb, and from all surroundings of an unwholesome character. It also safeguards each specific case by calling to it the personal attention of the Mayor and the local representative of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, who is mentioned in a concluding paragraph of the law.

Some of the members of the Child Labor Committee are endeavoring to exclude children from the theatre because they believe their proposed law will be more likely to pass if no exceptions to its prohibitions are made. Others in the committee are moved through sincerity, but ill founded, objections to the theatre itself—they have a mental confusion concerning the duties of the stage child. They have in mind the picture of the unwilling little drudge in the factory, tending through the long hours of a weary day some loom or lathe or spindle. The fact is, however, that one never sees an unwilling child.

Our kindergarten system in America is the result of a discovery by Frederic Froebel that the child mind developed most easily and most securely in the performance of some ardent task that won a child's full attention. It is a maxim of the modern educator that there is no adequate impression without expression. We have among the East Side residents in the City of New York an association conducted by Mrs. Emma Sheridan Fry which she calls the Educational Players, the methods of which association are based on the elemental principles that the activity of the dramatic instinct stimulates the entire human being to responsiveness physically, mentally and spiritually, thus rounding the individual to a condition sensitive to influence and open to guidance.

The mimetic instinct is the most dominant impulse of the child mind. It may be safely said that it is the only basis of all early education; and, other things being equal, the child whose mimetic impulse is given the fullest and freest play and exercise is the child that learns most rapidly and advances most rapidly.

The stage child is usually accompanied by a parent or a guardian, and it is invariably the pet of the company. From the side of physical surroundings no little one is better placed.

Oh What a Dollar Princess War!

Fighting One Another for First Place, Fighting the British Old Fogies for Social Existence, Noble American Ladies Will Lavish $25,000,000 at the Coronation

London, March 31.

THE approaching coronation of King George in London will be made memorable by a battle that may fitly be compared to Bunker Hill.

The American peeresses, millionaires, social strugglers and other emigrants from the land of freedom are going to make a desperate fight for their rights at the royal festivities.

At Bunker Hill, as you may recall, our forefathers fought for freedom from the British oppressor in their own homes. Now their enterprising descendants are going to carry the fight into the British tyrant's own domain. They are going to make a heroic struggle for front places at the tyrant's coronation and all the festivities connected with it.

Some contemptible British Tories are rejoicing because the Americans who were so prominent under the reign of the late King Edward are going to take a back seat under the present reign. It is not so easy as these Tories think to suppress people whose sires may have fought at Bunker Hill and deprive them of privileges for which they paid good money.

Mrs. Maldwin Drumond, whose last husband was Marshall Field, Jr., has declared that she will spend $1,000,000 on entertainments at the coronation. She is one of the richest Americans in England, but there are a hundred others who will spend money almost as lavishly as she.

This million is to be spent in lavish entertainments, for Mrs. Drummond is evidently determined to outdo the Duchess of Roxburghe and the Countess of Granard The former May Goelet covered herself with her famous torquoises and spent $50,000 at her recent dinner, but Mrs. Drummond will cover herself with her diamond chains, plastrons and breastplates, and spend $150,000 on one dinner. Mrs. Drummond is now having a special gold service made. Each piece, and there are many dozen, bears the date of the coronation and the monogram of the hostess. One hundred cards have been sent out, and each guest is to receive a souvenir which cost one hundred dollars. The gold service is to be sacredly kept as an heirloom, and is to go to the older of the two grandsons of the late Mr. Field. One can easily see that $1,000,000 is a conservative estimate for the necessary expenses of this child of fortune.

Mrs. Drummond's sister-in-law, the only daughter of the elder Marshall Field, had married Admiral Beatty of the British Navy and settled in England, and she, too, will spend about $1,000,000 on coronation festivities.

Another American who holds her own is the Countess Granard, formerly Miss Beatrice Mills. At first exclusive British society was inclined to sneer at her ostentation in wearing ropes of pearls and cascades of diamonds at three o'clock in the afternoon, but she has taught them to admire her magnificence.

She has begun a remarkably brilliant season. She has entertained at two successive dinners ex-King Manuel, of Portugal, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught.

The Countess will be a conspicuous figure at the coronation in Westminster Abbey, where she will be invited as a peeress. She will derive added glory from the fact that her husband is Master of the Horse and will look after the royal horses and carriages in the various processions. He and his wife have the privilege of dressing their coachmen in the royal livery.

Then there is the Hon. Mrs. John Hubert Ward, daughter of Ambassador Reid and cousin of the Countess Granard. Whatever objections Queen Mary may have to Americans in general, she has none to Mrs. Ward and it is even said that this child of fortune may be one of the few private persons invited to a seat in the Abbey.

In spite of these and a few other gleams of sunshine, there is no doubt that some cruel blows have been aimed at the American colony and others seem imminent. In the first place it has been definitely settled that the Duchess of Marlborough, incomparably the most conspicuous of the American peeresses, will not be one of the four Duchesses invited to hold the canopy over the Queen during the coronation. She performed this distinguished office at the coronation of King Edward, but the Duchess of Hamilton has now been invited to take her place.

The Duchess of Marlborough is left out because she is separated from her miserable little husband, through no fault of her own It is even said that she will not be invited as a peeress to the coronation and will stay out of England during the ceremony Her American friends in England are urging her to assert her rights, inasmuch as she is not divorced and suffers under no legal disability.

Some sixteen American women are assured of seats in the Abbey as peeresses but it seems that not one of them will perform any specially honorable function, such as holding the bag or carrying the umbrella.

At the last coronation there was a small gallery to which King Edward's friends who had no official positions, were invited. Among them were many Americans, including Mrs George Cornwallis West formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, of New York; Mrs. Jack Leslie, sister of the latter, and Lady Paget daughter of the late Mrs Paran Stevens. It is understood that not one of these will be asked this time.

Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, divorced wife of Colonel John Jacob Astor, and Mrs. Waldorf Astor, wife of William Waldorf Astor's older son, are among the most popular and lavish American hostesses in England ,but, alas! they will not be asked to a seat at the coronation because they are divorced. Mrs. Waldorf Astor's husband is a member of Parliament, and there is a special gallery for members' wives, but even from this her divorce will exclude her.

The handsome and very wealthy Countess of Stafford, formerly Mrs. Colgate, of New York, will not be invited as a peeress, because she has married as her third husband an Englishman named Kennard, although she still sports Number Two's title.

Laziness Really a Disease

By Dr. J. Laumonier,

[illegible] to be determined by the physi[illegible]

The regulation of this relative rest must first be applied to the digestive functions always more or less vitiated, for from these come the powerful and dangerous excitations It is necessary therefore that the food, while furnishing the nutritive principles needed for the condition and age of the individual and its special power of utilization, being about the least possible restful irritability Therefore we cut off all meat, some sausage, bouillon coffee, tea chocolate, alcohol condiments and give the patient boiled eggs, fruits eggs and milk products (not cheese) Some simple little tea cakes may be allowed and from time to time a little boiled white fish, purees of vegetables and roast fowl He may drink light mineral waters, not charged lemonade and warm aromatic drinks as much as he desires between meals Let him eat slowly, masticate his food well and after the meal lie down for a few minutes on a couch

Some physical treatment may be used to re-enforce the action of this regimen; rubbings either with alcohol or dry, sun-baths, progressive gymnastic exercises, but no cold hydrotherapy (baths); thus, when the improvement begins to appear, well regulated physical exercises, walks, outdoor sports and games, and a mountain cure, but not at the seaside—it is too exciting

As to the mental training, which should naturally follow the psychic rest, it is of the first importance, but to apply it properly it must be remembered that lazy children are not defectives, nor adults, nor psychoneurotics The best method for children is guided by prudent pedagogy, patience and steady application, of which this is the main principle: Make the brain work a short time, but well, and with constant interest.

The New Big Hat, the New Little Hat, the New In-Between Hat and the Brand New INSIDE-OUTSIDE Dress

The New Big Untrimmed Straw for Summer.

A Little Hat of Beaded Straw with Large Ear Ornaments.

LADY DUFF-GORDON, the famous "Lucile" of London, and foremost creator of fashions in the world, writes each week the fashion article for this newspaper, illustrating it with sketches and photographs of her own original models.

Lady Duff-Gordon's American establishment it as No. 17 West Thirty-sixth street, New York City.

By Lady Duff-Gordon ("Lucile")

HERE are some of the newest Paris styles and odds and ends of fashion gossip from the other side of the water. Not that I am broad-minded enough to see much merit in these styles my own creations. And by the way, by these I don't mean that I approve of them. For instance, I think the "one-eyed side" rather horrid.

The most exclusive Parisian milliners are just now showing three styles of hats. The first of the perfectly huge hat and the tiny hat would seem to be wanting, as a rival has now appeared in the in-between hat. But there are many smart Parisians who will wear the big hat, no matter how many small ones appear, and for them there is a new shape and a new idea in the big rough hemp here shown.

The brim measures more than a yard and a half around. The crown is low and broad. This may not sound new to the average reader, but wait. It is absolutely untrimmed! No floating bird of paradise, no upstanding quill, no huge bow of ribbon, nothing but the two jewelled hat pins which hold it to milady's head.

The brim is bent in a bit just over the left eye. This particular hat in vivid colors is appealing to the very smart members of French society.

What a contrast is the small, close-fitting hat shown in the second model. This is a typical poilcus hat, its close-fitting brim making it particularly becoming to the delicate features of the true Parisian. The broad band-brim of spangled straw and the drooping ear pendant will appeal to the woman who longs for the unusual. This cap-like hat is the natural outgrowth of the Tyrolean hats which flooded Paris last Fall. They can be exceedingly dressy, and, also, they are the most delightful headgear for motoring.

But, oh, the joy of the in-between hat! There are women who will not wear the big chapeau; there are many who cannot wear the small one. Paris milliners make a great effort to please all tastes, hence the two charming models herein pictured. These show distinct traces of the poke bonnet so fashionable a few years ago. The graceful curves across the front are typical of the Parisian hatmaker, who dislikes the broken face line favored by many American milliners. The model covered with flowers might have been copied from an ancient Chinese print, its curved sides, level with the chin, recalling the hats of the earliest mandarins of the Chinese Empire.

And here I approach the "inside-outside" gown shown in this quaint photograph. It is undoubtedly the most unusual mode evolved by the fashion dictators. One does not need to be twins to wear it! The under dress of plain satin almost covered with the over dress of striped satin can be changed in a minute to an under dress of striped satin and an overdress of plain satin! The plain sailor collar and deep cuffs are transformed at the same time to striped ones. It would take a clever Paris modiste to develop this style, but it will probably be as short lived as the trouser-skirt.

And, by the way, Paul Poiret is showing a truly wonderful trouser-skirt, one that can scarcely be told from the real thing. It is an accordion pleated chiffon robe, with a high waist line and high foot bands, too. The pleated part is held in at the knees with three deep bands, the upper and lower of plain satin, the in-between one of rich embroidery. The centres of the front and back are stitched together from the knees to the feet, under a narrow satin band. As milady stands, it is a skirt; as she walks, well, it is trouser. It is the sensation of the moment in Paris.

Always milady is eagerly looking for delightful boudoir robes. The model in the sketch is one that is creating a sensation among the mondaines. It is a sumptuous brocade. Its high Grecian waistline differs slightly from the Empire effect and is newer. The curious and extremely low neck and very long, narrow sleeves are also extremely new. Low neck and long sleeves is a combination seldom seen on such robes. Another distinctive touch is the very long skirt, showing a wide slash directly at the back.

This robe, as worn by the model, is one of the most graceful, if bizarre, creations of the Spring.

Shall Our Sons Inherit a Gameless Continent?

WILD birds and other animals are rapidly being swept away as a result of the activity of the pot hunter. Several important species are already totally extinct, while others are on the verge of extermination. Still, the slaughter goes on.

Realizing that if any wild life at all is to be saved for future generations, drastic measures must be adopted at once, the League of American Sportsmen, including among its members such well known naturalists as Ernest Thompson Seton, Dr. W. T. Hornaday, director of the Bronx Zoo, New York, G. O. Shields and Dr. T. S. Palmer, of the United States Agricultural Department, is conducting a vigorous crusade against the automatic and pump gun, which is believed to be the greatest menace at the present time to the wild life of the continent.

A bill has been prepared making it unlawful to use, in hunting birds or animals of any kind, any shotgun holding more than two cartridges at one time, or that may be fired more than twice without reloading.

In support of this bill the league addresses the following argument to legislators:

"The enormous increase in the number of men and boys who shoot, coupled with the tremendous activity and ingenuity of the gunmakers and cartridge makers, now bring you face to face with this question:

"Are you willing that all the game shall be killed off?

"Are you willing that this continent shall be depopulated of all wild life that can be classed as game, except that in game preserves?

"It is true that the protective laws on the statute books to-day are the best and the most elaborate that were ever passed, and greater efforts are now being put forth to save the game than ever before. Unfortunately, however, the number of guns and gunners, and the deadliness of guns, are increasing with such tremendous rapidity that it is impossible for wild life to withstand the terrific slaughter. In every section where hunting is legally allowed, the bag limit is entirely too high, and this alone spells annihilation.

"Do you wish your sons and grandsons to inherit a gameless continent?

Dr. Hornaday, who is one of the most determined fighters in behalf of our wild animals and their preservation, recently said regarding the use of the automatic gun in hunting:

"The logic of the automatic gun question is so simple that any child can see it. That weapon is on the market solely because it is the most murderous bird gun ever made. Its five cartridges can be discharged, in quick succession, by five pulls on the trigger, and without taking the weapon from the shoulder. It is a shoulder Gatling gun, for use against wild creatures. It is exactly the same in hunting at the machine gun on wheels is in war.

"Can any decent citizen use it without sinking to the level of those who fish with dynamite and kill birds with cannon?"

The use of automatic guns for hunting has been prohibited throughout Canada, as a result of this crusade, but in America, Pennsylvania is the only State thus far which has passed a law along these lines. The constitutionality of this law was questioned, but in a test case brought before the Superior Court the law was upheld.

Rubber Muscles for Little Cripples.

The Newest Methods of Medical Science in Its Effort to Restore the Withered Limbs and Bodies of Infantile Paralysis' Pitiful Victims

THE approach of Summer finds the medical profession better equipped than ever before to cope with infantile paralysis, the dread disease which in a single night may turn a healthy infant into a hopeless cripple.

Every Summer for a number of years now has been marked by an epidemic of this disease, and little could be done to avert the calamity. This year, however (thanks to the untiring efforts of medical scientists), it is believed that an epidemic may be warded off if mothers will adopt the simple precautions suggested by recent discoveries regarding the disease.

It is now known that the disease is caused by a germ. It is known also that this germ enters the body by means of the nose, and that the disease is communicated by means of the nasal discharge. These facts suggest the appropriate precautions, which are fully set forth on this page.

Here the Rubber Bands Stimulate the Withered Leg Muscles.

What You Can Do to Protect Your Children

INFANTILE PARALYSIS is a germ disease. The germ is so minute that it passes through the finest porcelain filters. But the Rockefeller Institute experts have seen, through the ultra microscope, its oval shaped bodies. If these, as it is reasonable to suppose, are the germs of infantile paralysis, the stamping out of the disease is only a matter of time.

Being a germ disease, infantile paralysis may be carried by one person to another. It is contagious and spreads.

The germ is mainly taken through the nose.

It is communicated by means of the nasal discharge.

Whoever handles handkerchiefs should be disinfected when soiled. In any event, they should be thoroughly boiled.

The use of the pocket handkerchief, however, is not sufficient to protect a child from infection. The nose, mouth and throat should be kept thoroughly clean. A mouth wash of hydrogen peroxide may be used to this purpose. This may be applied with an atomizer or sprayed from a pear.

Children should be made to avoid the filth of the streets. Under no circumstances should they buy fruit or candies which have been exposed to the dust charged air of the streets.

Do not let your children indulge in kissing. Infantile paralysis can very readily be spread in just that way.

Above all, keep your child clean.

These precautions are more necessary in the Summer months, but it would not be unwise to practise them the whole year.

How the Rubbers Are Affixed to the Back to Strengthen the Muscles.

An Exercise to Restore the Muscular Action of a Paralyzed Leg.

How the Artificial Muscles Are Placed to Help the Withered Arms of a Child and to Strengthen the Ankles.

Although no cure has yet been found, a method has been developed by means of which the use of the paralyzed limbs may be wholly or partially restored.

This new discovery, which comprises a system of rubber muscles, is so simple and has proved so successful that a description of it will be given before the question of preventive measures is taken up in detail.

Rubber muscles for use in infantile paralysis are the invention of Dr. Roland O. Meisenbach, of Buffalo, N. Y., who fully explains his method in the New York Medical Record for the benefit of the profession and the world in general.

"The prevention of deformity in infantile paralysis," he says, "should be undertaken as soon as the febrile and acute symptoms have subsided. The teaching until recently have not emphasized this point; there has been a tendency to wait in the hope that many of the affected muscles would gain their power. That some of these do regain their power is the rule, but the period in which they regain their power is problematic, extending over weeks and months. During this waiting time much valuable opportunity for preventing deformity is lost, even though massage and electricity are employed. The process of restoration is slow and unassisted to overcome the contractions of the unaffected muscles which are rapid. This fact is amply verified by the many cases of deformity which are met with and which have had electricity and massage.

"Electricity and massage may or may not be valuable, but are not sufficient to prevent deformity by themselves. This is especially true when the foot, knee or hand are involved. Orthopedic treatment [illegible] unaffected parts, [illegible] not necessarily [illegible] heavy [illegible] shoes [illegible] called [illegible] such braces [illegible] them [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] let [illegible] that [illegible] paralyzed muscles will not regain power and respiratory to tendon transference.

"For the past year I have been treating many cases of weak feet occurring in children and young adults, cases in which rigid apparatus was contra-indicated by means of reinforcing the weak and flabby tibialis posticus (the principal muscle of the calf) with a rubber muscle especially constructed for the particular case. Also in cases of talipes equino varus and valgus, this substitution as an aid to the weakened muscles was made. It is surprising to note in these cases how quickly the muscles strength ened. The rationale of this treatment is apparent, the rubber muscles simulating the normal muscular activity as a constant force. In cases of weak feet every case alone is not exempt from the fact that we are trying to strengthen muscles fifteen minutes in the morning and fifteen minutes at night, as the case may be, and during the remainder of the day the muscles are being overworked and are again subjected to the weakening cause. In infantile paralysis the same unsatisfactory result occurs, only in a more marked degree; therefore, this method suggested itself to me in the early treatment of infantile paralysis and has been used with success in selected cases.

"For the construction of artificial muscles an ordinary rubber dam is used, which can be procured at any rubber store. The size of the rubber varies, but its strength should be in proportion to the work of the muscles which it reinforces. The dam is cut into strips from ¾ to 1½ inches in width and from 4 to 8 inches in length. At each end of these strips pieces of zinc-oxide adhesive plaster are attached, which grip the ends of the rubber to the extent of about 1½ inches and extend about 4 to 5 inches beyond the rubber. The adhesive plaster coming in contact with the rubber should grasp the rubber on all sides and should be clasped in a zinc or compressed with a mallet, so as to prevent breaking away when tension is applied. If necessary the adhesive plaster may be slightly heated over a flame.

"The method is chiefly applicable to the ankle, the knee, the wrist and shoulder joints. One end of the artificial muscle is applied over a joint corresponding approximately to the origin of the muscle and the other at the insertion of the muscle. For instance, in a simple case [illegible] paralysis [illegible] the peroneal group, one end of the rubber muscle is applied on the outer border of the foot [illegible] over the cuboid and the other end applied on the outer side of leg half way between the ankle and the knee. When the tibialis posticus is to be used its origin and [illegible] according to the application of the artificial muscle. In every instance the object in view is applied as near as the treatment warrants. It might here be said that very little [illegible] necessary if the [illegible] has a corrected [illegible] at the time of application.

"When the [illegible] are applied to the wrist or other joints or when more than one muscle is applied to the same joint, the adhesive strips may [illegible] according to the necessity of the case. A [illegible] instead of a straight piece the adhesive plaster cut in the shape of a Y will give a better grip.

"Training.

"1. By the use of artificial muscles the lost power may be supplied temporarily until the paralyzed muscles have recovered.

"2. The force exerted by them simulates the normal better than any other method.

"3. Contractures of opposing groups may be prevented.

"4. The rubber over the affected muscles causes a local stimulation which is noted by active hyperemia and [illegible] of the skin beneath the point of muscle.

"5. Its use does not [illegible] the joint, nor does it interfere with [illegible] prescribed treatment, namely, passive motion, massage or electrical contractor.

"6. Its efficiency is [illegible] and its simplicity does not interfere with the clothing or bathing. It is not intended to be used in advanced cases after the contracture has occurred.

"But though these rubber muscles may in some cases lead to the use of paralyzed limbs, prevention of the disease is of course far preferable. This can be accomplished only by the most persistent efforts of mothers. Doctors cannot undertake [illegible] households, and the prevention of infantile paralysis is first and last a question of precautions to be taken in the home.

According to the experts at Rockefeller Institute, infantile paralysis is spread by persons sick with the disease or by some one who has been in contact with a patient suffering from the disease. It appears that the germ of the disease can be carried by certain persons who have come in contact with the sick, who themselves will not have [illegible] the disease, but who may transfer the germ to other persons who will develop it.

The germ enters the body by way of the nasal passages. In the course of the disease the germ [illegible] from the brain through the nose and mouth. This suggests the proper course to follow:

Disinfect or destroy the secretions of the nose and mouth of those ill of the disease, and maintain in a state of cleanliness the hands, nose and mouth of all children exposed to the disease. This means all children (or practically speaking every child) is exposed to the disease either directly or indirectly.

A number of valuable suggestions along these lines are set forth in another column on this page and they should be strictly followed.

It is to be remembered that this scourge makes no distinction between rich and poor, the child of the millionaire is just as apt to fall a victim to it as the street urchin of the tenement district. For this reason, let no mother say, "Oh, my children are properly cared for and cannot contract the disease." It is only the child of the slums, who is brought up amid filth and unsanitary surroundings, who gets it.

Every child is subject to infantile paralysis and every mother should make an effort to combat it.

WHAT HAPPENED WHEN

Nobody at Young Mr. Wyatt's Merry All-J
On Or Out, Mrs. Burritt Saw Enough t
Revellers' Wraps and Hats on the F

YOUNG Mr. Merritt Trimble Wyatt, a member of New York's smartest society and a son of Judge William A. Wyatt, of the Court of Special Sessions, recently decided to give a pre-Lenten masquerade. Mr. Wyatt called in young Mr. Leverett Saltonstall, of the Boston Saltonstalls, one of the oldest and most exclusive New England families, to help him. Together they laid plans for what was to be the most elaborately costumed, the most Bohemian entertainment and dance ever enjoyed by the New York "Four Hundred."

The jolliest and most beautiful debutantes, the wittiest and gayest bachelors, the most brilliant members of the Junior League, that club of the fashionable younger set, were to be there. A perfectly responsible and unimpeachable chaperone would give the necessary weight to the affair. The idea of serving breakfast before going to bed instead of getting up for breakfast figured largely. It was all to be really Bohemian—like the way they do it in Paris and much better than Mr. Harry Lehr ever did it.

Mr Wyatt picked out as mise-en-scene the William Nelson Burritt studio—which is the late A. T. Stewart's stable wonderfully Orientalized. The invitations purported to come from Ptolemy II.—who was Mr Wyatt—and commanded the presence of the person invited at "a Court from 10-30 until 6 in the morning." More than three hundred were sent out. Nearly every one prominent in the younger set was included. Nearly two hundred of the finest coupon-edged, socially hall marked members of New York society accepted.

Here one pauses in awe! To think of such a social firmament being darkened by a sobriquet and unwelcome hand—literally having the lights turned out on it! Its dresses, its conduct, its entertainment—even its capacity for drinks censorized! Later being handed its wraps and hats and being told to get out! As a last indignity being threatened with THE POLICE!

Nothing like it had ever happened to New York society, not even at monkey dinners nor wading parties! To embalm this extraordinary and hitherto unrecorded chapter in the social archives; to consider the major question, "What happened when the lights went out?" the minor question, "What became of the chicken salad?" one hastens to full recital.

Gladly and joyously two-thirds of the invited prepared for the party. Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, who was the aristocratic Gretchen von Briesen, selected with ingenuity a lovely shepherdess costume as befitting her chaperonship. Two large dinners preceded the mask. Miss Lilia Gilbert, in her Carmen costume, gave one at Sherry's—Mr. Edward Shippen, 2d, gave one for men only. All their guests were in costume. At eleven the dinners were over. On went every one to Mr. Wyatt's dance, happy, bubbling over like children with expectancy.

There was beautiful Miss Gilbert, who is of the Astor set, granddaughter of Isaac Brokaw and niece of Mrs. Preston Satterwhite, the belle of the season's debutantes. Katherine and Madeline Force, the latter so often prominently mentioned as the next Mrs. John Jacob Astor; Edith and Helen Landon nieces of the late E. H. Harrimans—tall, slender blondes, who, in short skirts, made delightful "Follies of 1911;" two other sisters, Alice and Gertrude Andreae, leaders of the Tuxedo set and cousins of Suzanne Henning, who married the Marquis de Charette last year—they wore French court costumes.

Then there were charming Allison Pierce one of Vivien Gould's bridesmaids; Laura Webb, daughter of Frank Egerton Webb and neice of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sr.

In fact, all the season's buds and their sisters were present. Even under their disguises it was easy to recognize Nathalie Kelley, a daughter of Commander Jerrold Kelley, of the United States Navy; Hilda Holmes, a daughter of Artemas Holmes, whose engagement to Harvey Ladew, one of the men guests, is frequently rumored, Ursula Brown, the daughter of the very proud and exclusive Mrs. Hunter Brown; Marjory Shannon, a debutante and leading amateur dancer of the younger set, whose performance later on was to bring upon her a complimentary shower of cigarettes from the balcony; Florence Rand, Eleanor Deming, Dolly La Montagne—belle of the Jerry Cruger set; Rosalie Smith, Alice Richard, Abby Morrison, Margaret French—cousin of the ex Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt; Viola Townsend and Doris Bissell.

Of course, this is a formidable list of beautiful buds. It's only a part, though, of the much more formidable list of those there. And it's very important, considered in the light of what followed, because if the very best manners, highest knowledge of etiquette and discreetest behavior isn't to be found in that list, where on earth is it to be found?

And then the men—all of them scions of the oldest Knickerbocker families—and near-Knickerbocker families—the Burke-Roche twins, Alden Blodgett, Edward Shippen, 2d, Livingston Watrous, T. Chester Richardson, William M. Sullivan, Edward Twining, Fairfax Ayres, E. Dutilh Smith, Richard Lounsbery, Jr.—and a host of others.

Mr. Wyatt had preceded them. The Burritt studio, as has been said, was made some years ago out of the old A. T. Stewart stables. Enough of the hayloft was left around the walls to make a commodious balcony; the main floor makes an excellent ballroom. Mr. and Mrs. Burritt occasionally rent it out for small, quiet musicales. But the Wyatt dance was the first big social function held in it—and it was not a quiet musicale.

Behold then Mr. Wyatt attired as Ptolemy II. and with a perfectly good live snake about his neck entering the studio at 10:30. There seated in the reception room were Mr. and Mrs. Burritt, neither of whom was among the invited guests.

"They explained," said Mr. Wyatt later "that they intended to make themselves useful in handling the invited guests. It did seem so kind."

But suddenly Mr. Wyatt sniffed.

"What is that beastly sweet odor?" he remarked. "Why, it's incense! Really," continued Mr. Wyatt, "that will never do! It's a well-known social axiom that incense does not agree with people who are eating, drinking, smoking and dancing. Please remove it."

"It can't be done," said the Burritts, looking at the lines of smoking urns. "Our studio is furnished in Oriental style and incense is quite in keeping with the surroundings. It is a feature of all our functions here. We are Bohemian people, and incense gives the proper atmosphere."

Mr. Wyatt insisted that there was altogether too much atmosphere. He won the first bout, but naturally both sides were much incensed.

Up then came the society orchestra, which was to provide the music. The Burritts had taken their places at the studio entrance.

Mr. Wyatt says he heard them tell the leader that the music must stop promptly at two.

'But I told you it would be here till six!"

Reply of Mr. Wyatt to Mrs. Burritt.

Mrs. William Nelson Burritt, March 14, 1911.
35 East 32d St., New York City.

Dear Madam—I have your letter of March 11th, and have read the contents with considerable interest and surprise.

When I rented your studio it was definitely understood between us that for the rental named by you, and which I paid, I was to have the entire use of the studio for the evening of March 10th and until 8 o'clock the next morning. I complied with every request made by you, and also paid the rental in advance, as you wished.

Neither you nor Mr. Burritt were included among my list of guests, and your presence was neither necessary nor desired. Your attitude, therefore, in not only forcing your presence on me and my guests, but making derogatory remarks about me and them, together with your extraordinary behaviour in ordering that refreshments should not be served to my guests by my own caterer and that the music should cease long before the expiration of the time for which I had rented the studio, and ordering my guests from the place, is sufficient to justify me in acting upon the advice of my counsel, and instituting action not only for the recovery of the amount paid to you for the rental of the studio, but also for the damages sustained by me by reason of the statements publicly made by you relative to me and my guests.

I have placed the matter in the hands of my attorney, William M. Sullivan, Esq., No. 35 Nassau street, New York City, to whom all future catalogues of your damaged furniture can be sent.

"Heavens! Take him away!" she cried. "This is no Turkish bath!" He cannot enter my house!"

Young Wyatt was greatly embarrassed. He insisted that his guests should be admitted, no matter what they wore or didn't wear. The Burritts were obdurate. Salome they said, was all right, but John the Baptist was simply impossible.

The night of the dance was not warm. John the Baptist stood at the studio entrance and shivered. He had nothing to protect him from the night air but a gold cross, which he carried over his shoulders, and the scanty bear skin.

Just then young Wyatt espied Mr William M. Sullivan, his attorney, who, costumed as Sir William Blackstone, was one of the guests. Calling him over, Ptolemy II. rapidly explained the situation and asked him to intercede. "This is my studio," declared Mr. Burritt, "and I have the right to say who shall enter and who shall not."

"This is my party," insisted Mr. Wyatt, "and I have the right to select my own guests."

"This is my opinion," declared Sir William Blackstone, "and I decide that for to-night at least, this studio is Mr Wyatt's, and if Mr and Mrs. Burritt see anything here to offend their eyes, they are invited to get out."

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Burritt got out but John the Baptist got in. As he made his way through the assembled guests to greet his hostess there was an audible gasp. Some cheeks turned pale, others blushed. Mrs. Menken herself changed color as she greeted the newcomer, but she made no comment. There was a complete hush for an appreciable space of time, while the young debutantes simply looked at each other askance. Then John the Baptist, lifting his gold cross on high, escorted his partner, Salome, to the centre of the floor and proceeded to execute a remarkable emotional dance. There was a hum of admiration. The tension was over.

The party now began in earnest. Informal impromptu dances followed one another in quick succession. Pierrots danced with Salomes and Pierrettes with Arabs—all gay as children. The spirits of the whole company were soon at a high pitch. The orchestra did its best to increase the excitement.

It was at this moment that Marjory Shannon the leading danseuse of the Junior League and a chum of the former Gladys Vanderbilt, began to execute one of her Russian Peasant dances.

"Bravo! Bravo!" rang the studio.

A shower of cigarettes rained down upon her from the balcony, where a buffet had been established, delicate tributes to the endeavor. Miss Shannon's costume, by the way, exactly duplicated that of Madame Pavlowa, the Czar's lighttoed star.

"Soon," says Mr. Wyatt, "I was informed by the waiter in charge of the buffet of a most extraordinary thing. It was that the base of supplies had been cut off—the closet in which the liquors had been stored was locked. I sought the Burritts and demanded an explanation.

"'Too much wine has been drunk already,' they declared. 'You cannot have any more!'

"'But, my dear people,' I said, 'it is my wine. I paid for it. I had it sent here. I demand that you produce the key to the closet!'

Sir William Blackstone happened along at this juncture and added his expostulation, and eventually the key was reluctantly produced, but not before a number of the guests had almost expired from thirst.

"Everything we want to do, it seems we oughtn't do!" lamented Mr. Wyatt. Just then the clock struck one and the Princess Chowbe—from the Far East, or at any rate no further west than Eighth avenue, New York—appeared upon the raised stage at one end of the room. 'Tzing-tzing" went the weird Oriental music popularly supposed to accompany the nautch dance. Princess Chowbe had a lithe, sinuous figure. Her well trained muscles seemed to glide beneath her glistening skin like reptiles. Most of the muscles could be seen. The guests were silent in admiration.

And then the voice of Mrs. Burritt rang out:

"This is the most disgraceful exhibition I have ever witnessed. If this woman doesn't leave my place instantly I shall call the police!"

Ptolemy II. and Blackstone, his lawyer, attempted to placate her. It was of no use.

"Out goes the woman or out go the guests," was Mrs. Burritt's ultimatum. She won! The Princess was given her walking papers. Contemptuously she swept out into the night.

"Oh! What a party," sighed Mr. Wyatt.

"Oh! what a party!" stormed Mrs. Burritt.

"Oh! what a party!" gleefully chorused the guests.

"On with the dance, let joy be unconfined," shouted Mr. Wyatt to the orchestra leader, and as the strains of the music welled up the happy, joyous crowd again swept into one of the impromptu dances. Pierrots and Pierrettes, Carmens, devils, friars, Arabs swirled about in one gay mass of color. Mr. Wyatt, with his live snake still around his neck, patted himself on the back.

A song was started on the balcony and taken up on the dancing floor. Everybody was singing, everybody was dancing; the clinking of glasses, the sound of the orchestra, the tramp of hundreds of feet made the studio ring, when—

ALL AT ONCE THE LIGHTS WERE TURNED OUT!

There was silence. In the darkness glowed the ends of cigarettes and cigars. Then the orchestra began softly to play "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now."

* * * * * *

For quite half an hour, says Mr Wyatt, the lights stayed out. As confused and amused, society made the best of it. The open doors of the outer room sent a faint illumination into the studio. Black corners alternated with corners on which shadows were scarcely dispelled by faint lamps.

Still, every one appeared to be enjoying it. Mr. Wyatt, arguing with the inflexible studio owners, heard laughter and the rush of dancing feet. Whirling figures rushed past the area of illumination and vanished into the shadows. Now and then would rise the joyous chorus of "Somebody Loves Me—Nobody Knows," and other songs of twilight romance and mystery.

Still Mr. Wyatt argued. "Before this dreadful thing happened," he said afterward, in recounting the experience, "Mr. Burritt had come to me and had told me that the next dance must be the last. 'Why my dear man,' I had exclaimed, 'it isn't two o'clock yet. I engaged this place till six.' It makes no difference, the next dance must be the last,' replied Mr Burritt. I turned on my heel and was soon whirling among my guests.

"When the lights went out I at once sought Mr. and Mrs. Burritt. I entreated, I begged them to turn on the lights. There were all those poor people in there in the dark. 'It's time to quit,' the Burritts kept declaring, 'we won't turn on the lights till you leave.' But after quite half an hour they turned the lights on again."

"Couldn't be better," Mr. Wyatt was comptimented. This is a regular surprise party. What's next?"

The next was, it seems, the inexplicable disappearance of the chicken salad. Peace had brooded over the studio for an hour or two. At four o'clock a luncheon was served up on the buffet balcony. Its most elaborate dish was an enormous platter of chicken salad that took two waiters to carry in. And yet, with all lights burning, more than a hundred maskers still about, this formidable delicacy disappeared? "Salad, salad, who's got the salad?" became the cry. Nowhere could a trace of the salad be found! Not even a chicken peeped!

Some of the Salomes had brought along stage heads on platters, and these were near the breakfast table. It was thought at first that some of these stage heads had consumed the chicken, but it was pointed out that they could hardly have disposed of the platter, too.

So the disappearance of the salad will have to remain another of the mysteries of the Wyatt dance—like the mystery of what went on when the lights went out.

It was at 4:30, according to Mr Wyatt, that Mr Burritt called him aside and told him peremptorily that the dance then in progress must be the last.

"Why, it is out of the question!" cried Wyatt. "This party cannot end till six. Carriages and cars have been ordered for that hour, and breakfast is to be served. It is impossible for us to leave before, even if we were willing to."

"Very well, we shall see!" declared Mr Burritt. And then, apparently, something like this happened.

"Oh, Lilia!" exclaimed Miss Shannon, "what can be happening now?" Down from the balcony came a shower of wraps and garments of all kinds into the middle of the dance floor. There was a shriek of wrath from the maskers. Everyone precipitated herself and himself upon the heap.

"Just look at my hat!" "Where's my cloak?" "This is outrageous!"

"Call me a taxi, right away!" rang out a composite shout.

"It was dreadful, unheard of!" says Mr Wyatt. "The clothes were thrown right in the middle of the floor. There was a wild scramble for them by my outraged guests, followed by a hurried telephoning for taxicabs. By five o'clock most of them were on their way home. And the cards expressly said 'till six!'"

It seems that Mr. Wyatt and a score of heroic souls battled on until the end for liberty. At six they left the studio to its owners.

It had indeed been a party!

In another column are printed the letters which were subsequently exchanged between Mrs. Burritt and Mr. Wyatt. Both sides threatened to place the matter in the hands of their respective attorneys, but so far no legal proceedings have been actually started.

Says Mr. Wyatt: "And the Burritts told me they had lived the life in Paris! Why, their idea of Bohemian life must be a church picnic!"

Say the Burritts: "And Mr. Wyatt said it was to be a gay party! Well, we should say it was a gay party—a VERY VERY GAY PARTY!"

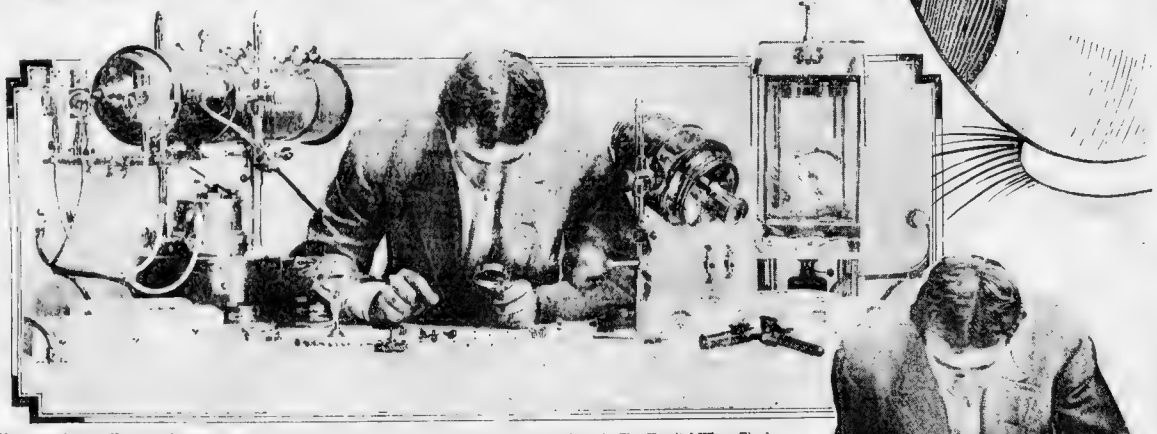
"EDUCATING MY PET FLEAS"

How the Bloodthirsty Little Insects Are Taught to Dance, Walk a Tight-rope—Do All the Tricks of a Circus



Mr. Nokes Putting His Fleas Through Morning Rehearsal On the Left Is His Microscope, Behind That the Flea Hospital Where Tired or Sick Fleas Are Put On the Right the Large Magnifier in Which the Flea Circus Is Held.

By Prof. R. A. Nokes

EVERY one who has ever seen the wonderful little performing fleas has wondered how they could ever be made to do the tricks they do. Most people think that their acts are a high handed and performances.

"What! train a flea!" they exclaim. "Impossible!" It is less than one-eighth of an inch long. It is simply a blood sucking parasite. It has only a microscopic pin point of a brain. Training implies habit memory, a certain amount of reasoning power, punishment and recognition of a trainer. How can one punish a flea and keep it alive and in good working order?"

I have a circus of fifty trained fleas. Each one has been educated as carefully as horses, dogs or other performing animals. I know each of my fleas by name. Each one has its own peculiarities, its own individuality. My favorite flea the most intelligent, the most highly trained, I have had for seven years.

Let me tell you that flea training is one of the most ancient of professions. There is evidence that the sea kings of Crete, in prehistoric times, delighted in exhibitions of trained fleas. The Assyrians and Egyptians knew and enjoyed their tricks, and I have often thought that the Great Plague which Moses called down upon the Pharaohs would never have appeared had not he been a flea trainer.

The art has been practised in my family for generations. My great-grandfather was doing this sort of thing long before my day in Germany. Then he could only give his exhibitions to a few spectators at a time, but I have the advantage over him through the not on picture machine. The art has its secrets but it demands mainly the steadiest of hands, a minute sense of touch, care and delicacy.

The most intelligent flea is the Pyrenean variety, the Pulex Irritans which feeds on human blood. People say: "Why don't they bite you? They do bite me. I feed them upon myself. I encourage them in their natural habit, thus keeping their friendship and interest, and at the same time keeping them alive. I never allow them to feed upon my arm until they have their fill. If they don't go to my arm of their own accord, I place them there with tiny tongs. Their bites are by no means poisonous, and my robust health shows.

The teaching of the flea to do any sort of trick is, of course, a tedious, difficult matter. The first thing to do is to break them of their natural habit of jumping. One can see how necessary this is when one considers that this insect of less than an eighth of an inch in length has a jump of eight feet. This is 768 times its own length. If a six foot man had the same jumping power he could make leaps of 4,608 feet, or almost mile jumps. So that when a flea has the advantage of one jump he is as good as gone forever.

My apparatus for jump-breaking is a round, glass ball. I confine him in this for three weeks. I look through this ball, touch it flash lights into it talk, do everything to let the flea accustom himself to my presence. At first he will jump and jump. He strikes against the curved walls and falls back bruised. After a time—and I find three weeks to be ample—the flea sees to know me, and he also gets to know that it is less painful to crawl than to jump and get bruised. The flea cannot differentiate between transparent glass and no glass. So that when I take him from the ball he still thinks that if he jumps he will strike this peculiar obstruction—and so he doesn't jump.

So you see, a flea must have some reasoning power somewhere, but I am in no position to say where it is located. And that is why I have to pick them up with tweezers and put them on my arm when I want to feed them. They don't dare jump upon me.

The next step is more difficult. I have to harness the flea with a wire collar and still keep him alive. It is an easy matter to bridle a mouse, but it is quite another thing to put a wire 1-1000 of an inch in diameter around the almost microscopic neck of a creature less than one-eighth of an inch long. This, and to be able to pick them up with tweezers without crushing them, are about as difficult things as any one can master. Sometimes the wire hangs around the neck, causing irritation, and I have to keep an eye on this, so I have a flea incubator or hospital—you see it in the pictures—where I place my little actors when they are sick or droopy. There they rest under proper temperature and feed uninterrupted without the yoke of the wires.

I demand obedience of my tiny subjects, so any refractory flea is punished. The punishment consists in suspending the culprit on a chain from a hook until I feel that he is sufficiently punished. They kick like steers under this punishment, and their conduct is exemplary for weeks afterwards, so they must have memory.

The flea is able to pull and move objects thousands of times heavier than itself, so I have perfect little chariots, wheels, merry-go-rounds, wagons and all kinds of things just like a real circus. All these are of gold and are made by myself.

The flea is a specialist. You would not think it, but some have the preference and adaptability for tight-rope walking, others prefer to pull, others are best fitted for turning, the merry-go-round and still others prefer to dance. After the flea learns to know me and learns not to jump, comes the most difficult part of the work for both the insect and the trainer. He is watched constantly through a microscope, for you cannot know what he is doing otherwise. He is urged on by a tiny wand. He is picked up by tweezers and carried to one exact spot again and again. He is put through his act over and over again. Patience and perseverance are the chief requisites. The method is about the same as in teaching birds and animals. The flea, however, is never handled with the fingers.

I dress my actors. This is one of the most difficult operations of the circus, and it consists in carefully holding the insect until the one piece gown of tissue paper is fastened around its neck. I used to pay great attention to the dressing of these society flea belles, always keeping up with the styles, but at last I found the sheath skirt most comfortable. The bobble skirt did not please them at all, and I had great trouble making them act natural while wearing it. I should think, however, that the harem skirt would be excellent for them and I am about to try the harem skirt on Fellice and Gladys, my two favorite dancers. Each flea wears a gown of different color, and I really think they enjoy the dance.

Every morning I have a rehearsal whether there is a show on hand or not. My troupe cannot afford to get lax in their wits, or rusty in their joints. They must practice their stunts every day.

Hitherto these little creatures, seen only through the microscope, could not be known to great masses and I was anxious to show the capabilities of the flea to the public for scientific and educational purposes. Now, with the aid of Signor G. Boerneth, the well-known motion photographer, I have been able to make a complete moving picture film of the wonderful things these little actors do. This has been completed under the title of "The Flea Circus." The securing of this film was no easy matter.

"Why We Should Have Good Boy Policemen to Watch Bad Boys"

A Little Cripple, Made a Special Officer to Test His Theory, Explains a Departure in Juvenile Psychology

TWELVE YEAR OLD Robert Norris, of Cincinnati, doesn't realize it, but there is a strong possibility that he is to Christopher Columbus of the most humane system yet devised for keeping bad boys in order.

The theory that the Cincinnati authorities are letting Robert demonstrate officially is that a good boy, vested with authority made visible with a policeman's uniform and badge, can keep bad boys in order more effectually than grown up policemen can.

That Robert Norris, in forcing this idea upon the Mayor and Police Department of Cincinnati shows genuine qualities of genius, is impressed upon his fellow citizens by the fact that he is not only small for his age, but is a cripple. He began monopoly by shaming bad boys of his acquaintance into going somewhere else than their own playgrounds, and by warning them that they would be arrested if they were caught in the parks especially.

Councilman Michael Mutter, having the success brought it to the attention of the Park Commission, which gave Robert a badge to realize his ambition to be made a real policeman. The Commission has agreed to give him a uniform and pay him a nominal salary, and during this Spring and the coming Summer he will be regularly detailed to preserve order in Lytle Park—quite a notorious rendezvous for the unruly boy.

Speaking of his ambition when his appointment had been made, Robbie said:

"I have long wanted to be appointed a regular park policeman. Some of the fellows who go to the parks don't know what's right. I am going to try to make these bad boys good by showing them that the city is working for their benefit and that they must hold up their end.

"I'm going to tell 'em when I see 'em destroying any park property that it is not right. If they keep on doing it I will tell the big policeman. I don't mean to be a tell-tale—but you know there is a limit to everything. I am in the third reader at the St. Xavier school, and will stay in school and only act as a police man in the park after school hours and on Saturdays, but when school closes I will be able to stay there all the time.

"I was appointed by Park Superintendent Longenecker, and he has given me a park policeman's badge, and is getting me a policeman's uniform made. I live near Lytle Park, of which I am policeman, with my father, mother and sister, at No. 426 East Third street, and the big policeman there, while a good man, is not able to handle the boys as they should be handled.

"It is my idea to get the confidence of the rough boys and make them believe that it is wrong to break the trees, trample the plots or act in a disorderly manner. I never have trouble with the other fellows, those fellows are all right at heart, and I believe they will soon learn to let the benches and other things alone.

"I will not use the weapons of the ordinary policeman, but those of my parents, kindness and discipline. I will see will be purely mental. Last Summer a large transfer wagon was trailed by another and on the tongue of the second I sailed a fine place on ride. But the wagon struck some obstruction in the street and I was jolted off and the wagon, passing over me, broke my left leg, and it had to be amputated, though I have only one foot. I am still a cripple, and with the aid of a crutch, I can skate on a single roller skate almost as fast as any boy. I can turn a handspring and throw as accurately and as fast as any boy in the Eighth Ward.

"When some of the Cincinnati bad boys heard of Robert's appointment they received the news philosophically.

"Bobby's a good kid," said one, "and maybe he has the right idea. One thing sure—none of us is going to hurt Bobby Norris."

Robert Norris, the 12-Year-Old Policeman.

Throwing Light on Darkest Mongolia

AMONG the continually decreasing spots on the earth's surface that still have the privileges of being known as virgin or unknown soil, Central Asia, or, to be precise, North-West Mongolia, occupies a not inferior position. Although it has been repeatedly attacked by many well-known explorers, the secret recesses still remain enshrouded in their mystery.

To reveal these secrets, three determined British explorers, Mr. Douglas Carruthers, Mr. J. H. Miller and Mr. P. Price, left England just a year ago.

The chief object of this expedition is to explore zoologically, botanically, and, so far as possible, geographically, the basin of the upper Yenesei River. The journey thither was made through Russia and Siberia to Krasnoyarsk, and from thence up the Yenesei to Minusinsk. According to information received by the Royal Geographical Society, these explorers passed over the Sianek ranges into the secluded basin.

The party explored the Chapsa tributary up to its very source, while the Syansk divide was crossed, and found to reach an altitude of 4780 feet, with isolated groups of highlands attaining an altitude of some 7000 feet. From Chadkol their route led up to the Chedni tributary of the Kenchik. Then the expedition crossed the Tannuola pass by the Borasha pass, and traced the Saklia River to its source.

On the tributaries of the Bei-kem, he says, on the upper waters of the Yenesei, Uriankhai were met with who rely almost entirely on their herds of domesticated reindeer for their existence. These reindeer keepers are only to be found in small isolated encampments, tucked away in remote valleys and amongst the dense "taiga." . . . The reindeer are used both as baggage and riding animals, the tips of their horns being sawn off to facilitate the passage along the narrow forest paths. Deer skins are used for making clothing, bedding and various other necessities, while their meat and milk forms their chief diet.

There were two distinct breeds in that one encampment. In their Winter coat one is almost pure white, while the other is of a reddish dark brown color. Moreover, it is said that they never interbreed.

Two weeks after the Emil valley of the Chuguchak was reached the expedition arrived at Kulja on November 14, 1910. It has not yet been quite settled as to what this year's programme will be, but it is probable that a start will already have been made in the early part of this year along the Chinese trade route through Urumchi to Hami. At this part of the programme it has been arranged that Mr. Price will start for England while Mr. Carruthers and Mr. Hilger will proceed further alone.

How They Tortured Me Into a Dancer

Cruel Torments of an Arab Girl Whose Grotesquely Horrible Dances Are Shocking England and Puzzling Anatomists

A DANCER who claims to be a direct descendant from ancient Egyptians is now astonishing the English. Her very curious name is Sahary Djeli, which has a sound like an English pun—"Sahara jelly." Whatever her origin, Sahary's manipulations of muscle and bone are unusual, and here she tells her strange story.

LONDON and Paris are still marvelling at my arm dance as though it were a novelty. As a matter of fact, it is at least 5,000 years old. As far back as the Sixth Dynasty my ancestors were renowned arm dancers, and their prowess has been perpetuated in the papyri and on the monuments of that early period.

The power to manipulate the body and limbs in a manner contrary to the ordinary laws of anatomy has been handed down in my own particular family from generation to generation for fifty centuries. Sometimes, perhaps, there would be but a single member of the family who inherited the peculiar faculty, but it never disappeared altogether until I was born.

I was an only child, and to the grief of my parents and relatives was born normal in every respect. Several of my uncles and aunts were double jointed, but they were child less, and I, the first of the new generation, was normal.

It was, of course, apparent that unless I could be made to acquire the skill which my more fortunate ancestors had always inherited my family would have to abandon its most cherished family tradition. For the first time in five thousand years there would be no Djeli arm dancer.

I was nearly ten years old before my parents finally settled the question. Their decision was that despite my physical shortcomings for such a career, they would make an arm dancer out of me any way.

It took five years to [illegible] but I [illegible] have the [illegible] of the suffering I endured during that period.

That one may the more fully understand the task which my parents set for me I will explain briefly the method by which it was accomplished. In accordance with the theory that the human body is double jointed, but that the joints become rigid through disuse, the first step was to overcome the rigidity of the joints. This was done by a process of stretching and twisting the muscles and tendons which bind the joints together. The method employed was to force the joints beyond the point of pain, and then hold them in that position for a few minutes. Each day the joints were forced a little farther, and each day the pain was a little greater.

Of course, the most important joints to be developed were those of the arms, shoulders and back. The shoulder joints were developed by having my arms bound behind my back and then being suspended by the wrists from the ceiling. My feet were then tied together and I was left hanging in the air. Sometimes I was suspended in this manner for hours at a time. Another method was to have my arms bound behind my back and then to be lifted by the wrists by means of a pulley attached to the ceiling. In this position I was left for hours at a time.

To develop the joints of the back and spine I was compelled to sit on the floor with my feet drawn up behind my head and my arms clasped around my knees. In this position I was left for hours at a time. Sometimes I was bound in this position with cords. Sometimes I was compelled to sit in this position with a heavy weight on my head. Sometimes I was compelled to sit in this position with my head between my knees and my arms clasped around my knees, while a heavy weight was placed on my back.

To develop the joints of the hips and legs I was compelled to stand with my feet wide apart and my body bent forward, while a heavy weight was placed on my back. Sometimes I was compelled to stand in this position with my feet wide apart and my body bent forward, while a heavy weight was placed on my back and my arms were bound behind me.

To develop the joints of the knees and ankles I was compelled to kneel with my feet wide apart and my body bent forward, while a heavy weight was placed on my back. Sometimes I was compelled to kneel in this position with my feet wide apart and my body bent forward, while a heavy weight was placed on my back and my arms were bound behind me.

All of these things it was necessary for my parents to teach me. Of course, the muscles of a baby are soft and the bones comparatively soft and pliable, and they yield readily to force, but I was ten years old when my parents began to train me for an arm dancer, and my bones were somewhat developed and hardened.

For days at a time my arms were secured behind my back in the most unnatural manner. My legs were similarly treated. The effect was to stretch the muscles and enlarge the joints.

Even with this harsh treatment it was months and months before I really became double jointed, and it was several years before I could contort as into the unnatural positions which these tricks made possible.

Normally, human joints are built on the ball and socket principle. Small protuberances or knobs prevent the limb from moving in any but certain prescribed directions. When these protuberances are lacking there is nothing to prevent the limb from moving in an abnormal manner, and the person so constructed is said to be double jointed. In that particular joint. The arm dancer must be not only double jointed but what plumbers would call universal joints. That is to say, [illegible] be able to [illegible] motion at all.

Perhaps my most experience was the treatment I had to undergo in order to perform the back bend. My hair was drawn as far back as it was possible for a strong man to force it, and to my brows and this position was maintained for days at a time by means of navy feathers fittings. I was then released for a few days when the same treatment would again be applied this time the thong being shorter and my head and heels being drawn closer together in consequence.

In this way, of course, I gradually acquired the ability to do the back bend as my ancestors had been doing for thousands of years, but there was the suffering I recall.

Now that it is all over I am more than grateful to my parents for persisting in what at times [illegible] has suffered that a trait [illegible] thousand years might be preserved.

The Triumph of America's Youngest Sculptress

At Twenty-three, Miss Kinney Vanquishes Famous Competitors with Her Model for a $100,000 Statue

A SOUTHERN girl, barely out of her teens, has just snatched from the hands of famous and veteran competitors a prize that is the most practical recognition of her genius.

She is Miss Belle Kinney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., sculptress, with a brand new studio in New York City. Here she is executing the most important commission ever awarded to an American sculptor.

The work is a monument to be erected in ten Southern States, and not one of the ten is to cost less than $10,000—several of them considerably more—according to the pedestal used. In Tennessee, for instance, the statue is to cost $16,000.

Miss Belle Kinney, America's Youngest Sculptress.

Miss Kinney is not yet twenty-four years old and was scarcely twenty-three when she received the contract which involves more than $100,000. She is a Southern girl, having been born in Nashville, Tenn.

"Of course the model must be typical of the South, but since there are ten States to please, I feel sure that I shall have to make a composite figure, embodying the characteristic beauties of the women of all ten States," said Miss Kinney.

The design for the monument was accepted last June. The group is composed of three figures—Fame seated in the centre, on the left a dying the Confederate flag, the woman right a Confederate woman. The soldier and the woman are shown together on the battlefield, moved by the same hope, the same spirit and the same loyalty. The dying color nearer with his last strength is raising the Confederate flag, teh woman straining every nerve to bring to place the palm of victory on his breast.

The woman is typical of the old South, refined, attractive and delicately beautiful, yet possessing the strength and courage of loyalty, which made possible the many acts of heroism recorded in the stories of the Civil War. But she has no thought of self—it is all for the soldier and the cause, and she is utterly unconscious of Fame, who is crowning her for her sacrifice and devotion to him.

The figures of the group are to be heroic in size, measuring over seven feet. That of Fame will exceed the others by one foot. The group can be reproduced in either marble or bronze.

Hearing that the monument was to be erected and that a design was to be accepted at the reunion of the Confederate veterans to be held in Memphis last June, Miss Kinney went to work and made a model in five days. She took it to the reunion but was greatly discouraged and disappointed to learn that the committee had already accepted a design by Armatiss. But the publication of this design caused a loud and a general protest from people all over the South who claimed that the Amazonian young woman flaunting a flag and wielding a sword looked more like an un to date suffragette than a Confederate woman, and the old soldiers especially protested. They said it was not like the fair women they remembered in their soldier days knitting socks making clothes and nursing the sick [illegible].

Wishing to give general satisfaction the committee then rescinded the action taken and postponed a decision [illegible].

When the committee met in Atlanta six months later Miss Kinney found [illegible] eighty competitors, some of them the best known artists of the day. Her model was the seventy-second submitted and it was accepted.

The little clay [illegible] or "sketch," as the artists call it, that Miss Kinney submitted to the committee and from which the accompanying picture was taken, is only ten or twelve inches high. She will now begin on the working model, which will be several feet in height.

Miss Kinney is preparing to go to work on the statue, and expects that the monuments will be erected in several of the States within the next two years.

My Secrets of Beauty

No. 119—Chair Aid to Beauty

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri the Most Famous Living Beauty.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.

MME CAVALIERI always endeavors to make her talks on beauty practical. To-day she succeeds even more admirably than usual, for she shows what can be done as to beauty development with what can be found in any home, "a chair, straight backed, wooden or cane bottomed chair."

She describes developing exercises in which this ordinary household article is used.

More of her valuable recipes follow.

"Call in the aid of the chair to bring straightness to the shoulders and expansion to the chest."

"This awakens a torpid liver and clears a 'muddy' skin."

"Grasp the chair by the sides of the back to begin the breathing exercise."

"This exercise has rid a girl of protruding collar bones when all others have failed."

By Mme. Lina Cavalieri

GIRLS write me plaintive letters telling their want to be beautiful, as who does not? But they have neither time nor money to follow the suggestions of the beauty experts.

Your eyes are far from hopeless. Time and money are valuable aids, of course, but a girl may keep herself whole-only attractive with very little of either to spare. For instance, let me talk to you of what can be done with the help of the chair in your mother's sitting room or your own ball bedroom.

You are thin and poorly developed, we will say, and you look with envy upon the finely rounded figures of the other girls in your office. You need exercise, and you have not the time for the long walks that will bring a flush to your cheeks, straightness to your shoulders and expansion to your chest. Well, then, call in the aid of the chair. It is only a cheap, straight backed wooden or cane bottomed chair. All the better, for it has the advantage of lightness and will not overtax your strength.

It will bring into action almost every muscle in your body.

The sadly overlooked and lemored chair will be of great assistance to you in straightening your drooping shoulders. Grasp the upper rungs on either side firmly and slowly and, while counting four, raise the chair as high as you can above your head. Draw in the air fully while doing so. Count four as you hold the chair above your head, then, slowly, while lowering it, expel the air, again counting four.

If more convenient, handle the chair in the following way: Grasp it by the sides of the back. Slowly raise it until the seat of the chair is above your head. Hold there and gradually lower, counting as described before.

I have known the exercise which I am about to describe to rid a girl of the ugliness of protruding collar bones when all other exercises had failed. At the same time she developed the muscles of her chest and straightened her shoulders.

Stand before the chair, which, like yourself, has rested since the first exercise. Take a full, deep breath and grasp it by the sides of the back, exactly in the way you would do if you were about to make an attack upon, or to resist the attack, of an interloper. Then lift the chair slowly while keeping your muscles rigid, as high as the head. Count seven slowly and breathe deeply while so doing. Slowly lower the chair to the floor, expelling the air while you do so. This exercise will be more effective if you stand as far as possible from the chair, keeping the muscles quite tense.

If you have a thin, weak back the next exercise will be of great value to you in developing strength and symmetry of the back and poise for all the body. Breath deeply until the lungs are packed with air. Seize the chair by the sides of the back and, holding the upper half of the body, still away the weight of the body as far to one side as possible, holding the chair straight before you. Then swing the the body back as far as cost to the other side, twisting only the lower part of the thorax.

If the arms are thin this is helpful exercise. Grasp the sea of the chair. Hold the head and shoulders straight and, gradually turning the chair upside down, raise the chair even with the head keeping the arms firm and rigid.

The waist muscles of most women are very weak. Corset wearing has made them so. The best exercise I know for developing these muscles which suffer more from neglect than any others in the body is this: Grasp the chair by the top of the back and, holding the arms straight out before, swing the chair back and forth, playing swing as children do in one of their old games.

All the while you are doing these exercises and the next one, which I shall decribe, be sure to breathe slowly and deeply, else half their use will be lost.

The next exercise is one which I described in my beauty talk to business girls, but which is so important that I wish to emphasize it. Sit astride a chair man fashion, your arms resting across its back. Then relax the muscles slowly by a long, shrugging motion of shoulders and back. This awakens a torpid liver, and so is an aid to clearing a "muddy" skin.

An Arizona ranchman writes asking how to remove warts from his arm. Caustic rubbed on warts usually causes them to turn black and slowly slough off.

It gradually eats away the wart. Keep it away from the surrounding skin and flesh.

From a Fifth avenue, New York, address, comes the confidential request: Please publish some remedy for ridding oneself of dark circles under the eyes; also a good wash for brightening and clearing the eyes.

For the dark circles, take more rest, more and more regular sleep, more outdoor exercise and more nourishing food. If, after a few weeks, these fail of the purpose, go to a physician and be treated for anaemia or whatever depleted condition has caused the lowered vitality indicated by those dark circles.

For clearing and brightening the eyes, a well-known physician has advised bathing them in a teaspoonful of water into which a half dozen drops of cologne have been dropped.

A Bronx matron says: "Will you kindly give me a remedy for chapped lips? Mine are always chapped and black."

Camphor ice, which may be made at home in the following manner is

Glycerine ..... 1 oz.
Rose water..... 1 oz.

But, as I have many times said, the glycerine mixtures do not agree with all skins. They do with mine.

From Berkeley, Cal., I receive this inquiry: "Will you please publish again a remedy for enlarged pores, especially on the nose?"

Such a condition requires anointing the feature with a strong astringent. Any of these should draw together the enlarged pores.

Borax, 1 teaspoonful.
Warm water, 1 pint.

Or

Alcohol, 1 teaspoonful.
Warm water, 1 teaspoonful.

Or

Tincture of benzoin, 20 drops.
Warm water, 1 pint.

Apply frequently with absorbent cotton or a bit of cloth until an improvement is noted.

From Jacksonville, Fla., come two requests from an eighteen year-old girl.

"What can I do for the large folds in my neck? They are very conspicuous, and dear madame, you have no idea how much it worries me. I have tried massage, but as I do not know very much about massage I fear I do more harm good. And will you kindly tell me what to do for a shiny nose? It is so shiny that powder will not stay on it."

Slapping the neck with the palms of the hands that have been bathed in olive or cocoanut oil should, after a time, so feed and strengthen the tissues that the fold will disappear, or at least become less conspicuous. Bindlike a loose woollen cloth saturated with the oil about the neck before retiring will improve it.

Washing the troublesome features in water into which has been sprinkled a few drops of benzoin should destroy and remove that shininess in time, though the radiant feature is usually coated with powder by those so afflicted.

Cheese as a Spring Diet

DR WILEY, chief of the United States pure Food Bureau, warns people against the theory that we eat too much. Eat all you can digest, he advises. In England prominent physicians are giving the same advice, particularly with respect to Springtime diet—which many persons are all to limit to their own disadvantage.

Eat cheese and nuts and continue jam diet during the early Spring, they advise.

At this time of the year the body's resistance against disease is at its lowest, and cheese is one of the best body-building, germ-resisting foods.

Make a habit of eating cheese not only after lunch and after dinner, but between meals. At 11 a. m. eat a snack of bread or biscuit and cheese, and at night before going to bed consume a large portion.

Now, during the Spring as man should. If anything eat more than he has during the Winter and in between meals he should eat plenty of cheese.

The many nourishing qualities of cheese cannot be exaggerated. It is a food which gives tone to the system, and certainly helps one to resist Spring illnesses.

Other foods which should be eaten as well as cheese at this time of the year are nuts, milk chocolate and eggs.

Lastly, one should make a point of eating plenty of vegetables, chiefly spinach and cauliflower, to keep the blood in order.

Real Nature Fakes

How Animals and Plants Produce Human Faces and Other Grotesque Images Foreign to Themselves

Ear Bone or Fin-Back Whale—Resembling a Human Death Mask.

Plant Whose Flower Resembles a Bird.

By Rene Bache

RECENT scientific study establishes the interesting fact that the most inveterate nature-faker is Nature itself. This seems like a paradox, but it is nevertheless true.

Take, for example, the ear-bone of a finback whale—a huge species of crustacean which is plentiful in the waters that wash the shores of Northern Europe. Such ear-bones, which are among the most imperishable of natural objects, being extremely hard and remarkably heavy, are frequently picked up along the sea beaches of Norway. But the oddest thing about them is that each of them bears a face—the visage of a low caste Scandinavian easily recognized by the flat nose-bridge, the rounded cheek bones and the receding jaws.

It is no mere suggestion, appealing to the fancy of the imaginative, but an unmistakable face—such a face as belong to many a fisherman who pursues his calling in those same seas. And, strangest of all, it is not the face of a living man, as one might say, but an obvious death mask! Anybody who has ever seen the death mask of a human being would be struck instantly by this resemblance, the eyes being closed and the features otherwise having a peculiar "set" look, like those of a dead person.

Remarkable as is the object in question it is not more so than a certain species of crab, which carries on its back the face of a Japanese warrior. And here again the matter seems to have a geographical significance, inasmuch as the crab is a species peculiar to the Sea of Japan, being found nowhere else. Furthermore, the face (as in the case of the Norwegian fisherman) is not that of a live man. It is distinctively the face of a drowned man, with mouth open and features horribly swollen.

Among the most celebrated of Nature's little jokes is the so-called "vegetable lamb," which was well known to the ancients, and in the Middle Ages was regarded as possessing much medicinal potency when its substance was dried and utilized as a drug. It grew, and grows to this day, on the dry plains of Central Asia, being in fact the rootstock of a plant densely covered with golden brown hairs. In form it resembles a small animal.

The supposition used to be that it was in reality a combination of animal and plant, partaking of the attributes of both. It was said to turn about on its root and feed upon the surrounding herbage until, when the available provender was exhausted, it died of starvation. Though it sprang from a seed, it was properly to be regarded as a kind of quadruped, and possessed magical virtues.

The rocks of the so-called Table mounds in Iowa, bear very distinct prints of cloven feet. It was formerly supposed that the devil, or at least some of his imps, must have left those tracks, but recent investigation has proved that in reality they were made by an extinct species of mollusk, at a time when the rocks in question were merely mud on the botton of a great inland sea covering all that part of the country.

Not many years have elapsed since the Eozoon was introduced to a wondering world as a newly discovered fossil by Sir William Dawson, an eminent geologist. It was accepted by science as the oldest of known animals—whence the name bestowed upon it, signifying "dawn animal." Subsequent study, however, has shown that it was not an animal at all, but merely a curious crystalline combination of two minerals, which had the look of something that was once alive.

Science, after all, is merely an inquiry after truth, and often it makes mistakes. Thus, it was supposed for a long time that certain markings found on sedimentary rocks were fossil prints of plants. Paleobotanists actually classified these plants, arranging them in genera and species. But Dr. Charles D. Walcott, now secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, proved that they were merely tracks made by various mollusks, insects and worms, crawling over the rock material at a period when it was soft mud; and he demonstrated his proposition by showing that marks exactly similar could be produced by allowing such animals to creep across moist plaster or wet clay. By this means it was shown that one "plant" was actually the trail of the creeping larva of the dragon fly.

On the seeds of the common squash, when dried, certain markings appear which resemble written characters in an Oriental language. They are due simply to contraction of the seed-coats. Nevertheless, they have a tantalizingly suggestive look—so much so that earnest efforts have actually been made by Japanese men of learning to read and find a meaning in them. Could they succeed in doing so, what wondrous secrets might they not reveal!

One of the most weird and extraordinary of Nature's imitations is afforded by the common garden "snapdragon," whose seed pods look like diminutive human heads arranged on stalks in such a way as to resemble the "poles of skulls" set up as ornamental trophies by head hunters in certain parts of the world where that kind of pursuit is popular. These show not merely the head and face, but detailed portions of scalp, eyelids and lips. Even their color is that of mummied heads.

Dr. Bashford Dean, a well-known naturalist, calls attention to the fact that the "sphenoid" bone at the base of a rabbit's skull pictures the head of a fox, its arch enemy, with such striking accuracy that it has been used as a scarf ornament by fox hunters in England.

Nature's imitations in the vegetable world are so numerous for lengthy discussion here. Such oddities as butterflies that counterfeit dead leaves, "measuring worms" that pose as twigs, and the twig mimicking "walking sticks" are familiar. But comparatively little known is an African species of Spalgis moth, whose chrysalis bears a remarkable likeness to the head of a chimpanzee—the two animals, here again, being native to the same region. And even more astonishing is the chrysalis of a butterfly, known to science as Feniseca tarquinus which bears the aspect of a miniature mask of Tarquin, an ancient Roman king.

There is a kind of mollusk known as the "Pupa," because its shell looks exactly like the pupa, or chrysalis, of an insect. What are commonly known as "petrified peanuts" are concretions of carbonate of lime; and when they are broken, each one is found to contain a small spiral ... which serves as a nu...

Out in Nebraska ... found millions of so-called "devil's corkscrews." Some of them are of great size—as much as four feet in height and two feet in diameter. Great numbers of them ... along the faces of sandstone cliffs where they have been weathered out" and thus exposed ... corkscrew shaped column of pure quartz, always standing vertical and absolutely symmetrical. At their bases they have huge "roots," likewise of quartz.

Until very recently the origin of these "corkscrews" has been a mystery, but it is now known that they are fossil casts of gigantic water weeds which grew on the bottom of a great inland sea that covered that region ages ago. Sediment buried them, as they stood upright. The sea eventually disappeared, the sediment became sandstone rock and the water-weeds, their tissues replaced by silica, were transformed into solid quartz.

Two Practical Patterns for the Home Dressmaker.

A Dainty Dressing Sack and a Neat Apron—Both for 10 Cents.

NO. 8922.

IN this dainty model for a dressing sack, the front, back and sleeve are cut in one piece. An unusually trim, neat appearance is given at the waist line by the fulness being gathered into a smoothly fitted peplum, finished by a belt of ribbon-run beading.

The style is adaptable to such materials as lawn, batiste, dotted swiss and cotton crepe. The pattern is cut in three sizes: Small, Medium and Large. The Medium size requires 2 5-8 yards of 24 inch material.

NO. 8915.

THERE is a certain charm about a dainty white house apron. This one is easily made and is very becoming and serviceable as well.

The Princess front adds greatly to the dressy character of the garment, and the frills that form the trimming give the wide shoulder effect so essential to the present styles. It would also be suitable as a maid's apron. Crossbar muslin, linen, gingham and percale are all suitable to the design.

The pattern is cut in three sizes: Small, Medium and Large. The Medium size requires 4¼ yards of 36 inch material.

To obtain both of these desirable patterns, fill in the accompanying coupon and mail, with 10 cents in silver or stamps, to

We All Need a Dictionary

Every day of our lives we need a dictionary. We haven't all of us realized that fact, but the need is still there. For instance, in looking over the advertising section of the current issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine I found, on Page 110, an advertisement offering a set of Robert Louis Stevenson free in this advertisement there are a number of misspelled words and grammatical errors.

We have recently been able to purchase 1,000 volumes of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary (50,000 words). It is a revised colloquial volume 6¾x8¾ inches, with a thickness of only an inch and a quarter. Thin, too, in spite of 1224 plate paper. Printed on the famous Bible paper, this dictionary contains 50,000 words, fully defined as to meanings, pronunciations, origin and synonyms. It is bound in real flexible morocco leather, with red edges and thumb index notches and is a beautiful example of the bookbinders' art. We are going to sell these dictionaries in connection with a year's subscription to our magazine. The best way to sell them is to make the public realize clearly the necessity of owning a dictionary. That is why we offer this prize
